Elizabeth, Nov. 12—It is believed that the three men arrested at Scotch Plains for hen-roost robbery, and who are now in jail here, are the same who robbed the railroad station at Hackensack Heights on Tuesday night, and who were compelled to abandon their booty. One of the three men engaged in that robbery was dressed in military uniform, as was one of the men arrested at Scotch Plains. This man gives his name as Joseph Cumming, of the Fourth New Jersey, and says his home is Hunting, Ind. His companions give their names as Joseph Bowers, of La Carne, Canada, and George Brooks, of Hartford, Conn. It is believed the trio have committed many robberies throughout the State. When arrested Cumming flourished a revolver, but was disarmed before he could use it.

TO REPORT NEEDS OF PORTO RICANS.

Dr. Carroll Has Sailed for Home With His Reports.

AN IMPORTANT MISSION.

TO ADVISE THE PRESIDENT AS TO NEEDS OF ISLAND.

He Has Investigated the Government of the Islands as Well as Its Various Conditions—He Carries Statements From Prominent Professional and Business Men of the Island—Will Report Soon.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who was commissioned by by President McKinley two months ago to go to Porto Rico to investigate internal affairs in that island for the information and benefit of the authorities at Washington, is expected to arrive home Monday, having completed his preliminary work. He is accompanied by Charles Buell, his secretary, also of North Plainfield.

In letters received from Dr. Carroll, he states that he is favorably impressed with what he has seen in the country's newly acquired territory, and that the people have been anxious and ready at all times to afford him every facility for securing important information. He says the Port Ricans are pleased with their change of sovereignity, and eagerly look forward to the time American institutions and customs are established in the island.

Besides his report, Dr. Carroll brings with him the statements of Senor Hunoz de Rivera, who was president of the Autonomist Council of Secretaries under the Spanish regime, as well as the statements of professional and business men, representing all classes and vocations of the inhabitants of the island, as to what should be done by the United States in the government of the island.

On his arrival in New York on the steamship Caracas, Dr. Carroll will come to Plainfield to see his family and then go to Washington to present his reports to the President.

APPEAL FOR HOSPITAL.

Finance Committee Asks for Contributions From the Public.

The finance committee of the hospital is compelled to appeal to the people of Plainfield and its vicinity for assistance in providing for the current expenses of the coming year.

The money received from the "Spielkartenfest" is now entirely exhausted and contributions are urgently needed.

Muhlenberg Hospital is justly entitled to hearty financial support from the people generally and the committee hopes that this appeal may meet with a prompt and generous response.

An annual payment of $200 will endow a bed; a payment of $100 will constitute a life member, and an annual payment of $10 a subscribing member.

Contributions may be sent to H. P. Reynolds Treasurer, No. 71 Washington avenue, North Plainfield, or to any member of the finance committee. Francis Wood, 313 Franklin place,
John H. Whiton, 821 Central avenue,
Charles Schipper, 705 West Seventh street,

A REMARKABLE CHARGE

SPENCER CONWAY IS ACCUSED OF FAST DRIVING.

The Colored Deacon and Politician Was Not on His Ash Cart, But in a Hack on Election Night—Case Laid Over.

Even the Judge was surprised while a suppressed "oh" of astonishment burst out from all the court room. The policemen's clubs rattled as they heard the startling news. Patrolman Jerry Cash, who has been remarkably prominent in police court circles of late, made a charge against the veteran colored deacon and politician, Spencer Conway, for fast driving.

Immediately there flashed across the minds of the reporters a wierd picture of a wild ride by Spencer on the front of his ash cart. Jerry demolished such ideas by explaining that he was passing along Plainfield avenue election night when Spencer Conway went by him driving a hack, the horse to which was going at full gallop. Jerry thought that there was a possibility that Conway might have had too much to drink.

Lawyer Francis J. Blatz, of the law firm of Murphy & Blatz, appeared as counsel for the colored veteran and asked that the case be laid over until next Saturday for trial. Judge DeMeza listened and thought well of the proposition. The prisoner entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of fast and reckless driving.

NEW DENTAL PARLORS.

Dr. Charles W. Leonard Established in City Bank Building.

Dr. Charles W. Leonard, dentist, who has been associated with Dr. Sheffield, of New York, known as the father of bridge work, has located in this city, and Monday last opened a suite of offices on the corner of Park avenue and Front street, in the City National Bank building. Dr. Leonard does not represent any corporation or dental company, but has come here to stay, and conducts his business on his own responsibility.

Dr. Leonard is a graduate of the University of Maryland, where he won the first prize for crown work, and received honorable mention for filling, plate and bridge work. He has formerly made Bound Brook his home, but decided to come to Plainfield. His office hours are from 8 to 8, and ever since his opening he has had plenty of business.

All Dr. Leonard's work is guaranteed. His specialty is bridge work, but he is equally expert in all the branches of his profession. He aims to do the best work at the lowest possible price, and has fitted up a suite of cosy and comfortable offices with a workshop adjoining. Dr. Leonard deserves the support of the people, and anyone whose teeth needs attention will do well to consult him.

YELLED "RUBBER" AT A COP.

Watchung avenue was quiet last evening as Patrolman Weinzenried patrolled his beat. Suddenly the silence was rudely broken by the remark of "rubber." The speaker was a colored man named Robert Stevens. Weinzenried, who is one of the new men on the force, interpreted the ordinance on peace and good morals to mean that colored men should not yell "rubber" at policemen during the evening.

When Weinzenried told Stevens that he was breaking the city ordinance, the latter remarked that it was a free country and he could say what he pleased together with sundry other remarks of a similar character. Then Weinzenried placed Stevens under arrested and charged him with insulting an officer.

When arraigned this morning Stevens explained that he did not know that yelling "rubber" was insulting an officer, but if such was the case, then he was guilty. The Judge smiled and suspended sentence, but advised Stevens not to say it again.

O'KEEFE WAS FINED $3.

City Judge Decides That the Young Man Was Guilty.

James O'Keefe was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza this morning for trial on the charge of being drunk and disorderly at Liberty and West Third streets. In the evidence, it came out that his mother was merely trying to take him home and did not attack Patrolman Cash. O'Keefe was fined $3. William Newcorn appeared for him.

Sentence was suspended on the three colored people, Mrs. Clara White, William Green and William Raines, who were accused of having started the fracas by making insulting remarks about O'Keefe.

NOW FOR CITY ELECTION.

REPUBLICANS NAME DATE FOR THEIR PRIMARIES.

Ward Primaries to be Held November 21st, and City Convention Two Days Later—Apportionment of Delegates

A meeting of the Republican city executive committee was held last night to wind up the affairs connected with the last campaign. All bill were paid, and plans made for the coming city election.

The committee fixed upon Monday, November 21st, as the date for holding the primaries when delegates will be elected to the city convention to be held the evening of the 23d in the old City National Bank building. The basis of representation for the different wards was fixed as follows: First ward, 5; second ward, 6; Third ward, 7; Fourth ward, 9

At the primaries three members of the city executive committee will be elected, one Councilman, a justice of peace and a constable from each ward.

HOOKED BY A COW.

A Washingtonville Boy Seriously Hurt This Morning.

George Smith, eleven years old, a son of a Washingtonville farmer, was seriously hurt this morning by being hooked by a vicious cow that he was leading to pasture. The boy started to take the cow to a field some distance from the barn at 8 o'clock, and nothing further was seen of him till after 11 o'clock, when Mrs. George Stewart, who is a neighbor of the Smiths, found the lad lying in the yard surrounding her house, with two big gashes in his body—one in the head and the other in the breast. His face was covered with blood and he was unconscious. Mrs. Stewart secured help and carried the injured boy into her house. Dr. Long, of this city, was called. When the boy regained consciousness he said that just as he was about to tie the cow the animal became unruly and hooked him twice. He started for home, but was unable to go any further than the spot where he was found. It is feared that besides the wounds, he has sustained internal injuries.

BURGLARS IN THE WEST END.

Burglars got into Fred Endress' meat market on Muhlenberg place last night and got away with five fine hams, a gold watch belonging to Miss Carty, the cashier, and about $2 in change from the cash drawer.

The thieves selected a bold plan to get into the shop. When Mr. Endress reached his shop this morning he found the glass in the front door of the shop broken and inside the shop lay a large stone as large as a man's head, which had been thrown through the door, breaking out enough glass to permit a man's body to pass easily through.

The change had been left in the drawer over night for the early morning business, and Miss Carty left her watch there over night. It is strange that no one heard the noise made by the breaking glass, but the matter has been reported to the police and they are making an investigation.

BACK FROM THEIR HONEYMOON.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Leach Given a Pleasant Time at Dunellen.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 12.—The return of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Leach from their wedding trip was marked last evening by a reception given at their home on West North avenue, to a few of their friends and relatives. The happy couple received their guests in a hospitable manner and in turn were showered with congratulations. During the evening Mr. Hoagland, of Bound Brook, entertained the guests with piano and mandolin selections which were enjoyed by all. A bountiful repast was served and the balance of the evening was passed in sociability. Among those present were Mrs. Cook, Miss Cook, William Cook, Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Cooke, Miss Mc. Ginnis, Miss Scott, of Plainfield; the Misses Starker, Wm. Carpenter, Benjamin Carpenter, of this place, and Mr. Hoagland, of Bound Brook.

Wouldn't Move On.

Thursday evening, Patrolman Cash told Patrick Lawler to move on. Lawler was standing at the corner of Liberty and West Third streets after the little excitement there was over. Lawler, Cash says, remarked that he "would be —— if he would," and so Cash made a complaint. When arraigned before the City Judge this morning, Lawler pleaded guilty and was fined $3.

CAPTURED GREY FOX AFTER LONG CHASE.

Frank E. Woodruff Shot Him Near Metuchen.

STARTED AT NEW MARKET.

FIRST FOX KILLED ABOUT HERE IN FIVE YEARS.

Hunters Report That Rabbits are Remarkably Numerous in This Section This Year—Many Cotton Tails Bagged Already—Yesterday Saw an Army of Gunners in the Fields—Quail Shot Also.

Sir Reynard has stolen his last chicken. He has had his last glimpse of the meadows of Piscatawaytown. He may have left relatives behind but the career of Sir Reynard, or "Brer Fox" is over. Yesterday Frank E. Woodruff of this city, shot and killed the first grey fox to be killed in this vicinity for over five years. It is considered a great event among the local sportsmen.

Early yesterday morning, Frank E. Woodruff, of East Second street, and James Stamfield, of Lee place, went out with their guns. They had Stamfield's hound and two others belonging to John Goff, of West Fourth street.

They expected to start some rabbits and quail. While they were tramping out beyond New Market, near the Port Reading Railroad, there was a sudden flash of something grey and the hounds started off in full cry. "Brer Fox" was a veteran and he led the hound a weary chase. It was 9 o'clock when he was first seen and the chase continued hour after hour.

Sir Reynard dashed through brier patches, waded through streams and doubled on his trail time after time, but the hounds stuck to it pluckily and followed despite the obstacles thrown in their way. The chase led off in the direction of Metuchen and the hunters followed, guided by the baying of the hounds.

At 1 o'clock they were just back of Metuchen, six miles from where they had started. Woodruff saw a neighboring brier patch through which he thought the chase would soon lead. He had just perched himself on a stump when along came "Brer Fox." There was a flash, a boom, and the hunted animal gave a convulsive spring and all was over.

The fox was a large one with beautiful silver grey fur and a long bushy tail. It was a very handsome specimen. The hunters were well satisfied with their capture and returned home. The fox was exhibited to their friends during the afternoon and excited much interest.

There were scores of hunters out yesterday morning and they found the game very plentiful. The rabbits are more numerous, it is said, than they have been for many years.

Former Judge W. A. Coddington and Nelson Giles went out yesterday morning at 7 and shot twelve "cottontails" after a two-hours' tramp. Another party captured eleven and three quail in the same length of time. Others of the hunters report having fine sport.

This morning there was a fresh detachment of sportsmen out after rabbits and quail, and several parties went over to the Passaic valley, where the rabbits are reported to be remarkably numerous.

A party composed of Eli Odam, Wm. Klein, John Porter, John, William and Jack Mowry, of this city, started last Thursday morning on a hunting trip in the vicinity of Flemington. Last night they returned with seventy "cotton-tails" and three quail.

WITNESSING THE GREAT GAME.

Plainfielders Attending the Yale-Princeton Football Contest.

Plainfield will be well represented at the Yale Princeton football game at Princeton this afternoon. Among its citizens Plainfield numbers many of the alumni of both universities who only stay away from these annual contests for the strongest reasons. Then there is a host of younger enthusiasts who have already left for the scene of battle. The enthusiasts number many of the fair sex.

Many went into New York to take the special trains from there and thus be sure of a seat. Others caught the specials on the Pennsylvania railroad at Elizabeth and New Brunswick according to the schedule printed in yesterday's Daily Press.

The reports from both elevens promise a lively contest while the weather is eminenty satisfactory for such a contest.

COPPER RIVER GOLD FIELDS.

Return of Government Surveyors.

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 12.—The steam schooner Excelsior has arrived here from Copper river, Alaska, with about two hundred passengers, among whom were Captain W. R. Abercrombie, of the United States army, and his party of government surveyors, including F. C. Schader, geologist; Emil Marlow, topographer, and nine enlisted men.

The Abercrombie party claims to have cut a trail from the Vlades to Copper river, which does away with the dangerous trip over the glacier and shortens the distance sixty miles. Captain Abercrombie says:

"Of the three thousand persons who went into the Copper river country, from nine hundred to eleven hundred will winter there. Those who came back either lost their outfits or were grub staked, tenderfeet, who simply sat around camp and searched but little, if any, for gold.

"There are three placer mine camps in the interior at Lake Seslota, the Tonsina and Consina rivers. Coarse placer gold has been found at all of them. Bed rock has not been reached yet on account of the water.

"W. S. Amy of San Francisco has discovered a big vein of bituminous coal west of Teslin lake."

Accompanying Captain Abercrombie is the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey party, consisting of H. P. Ritter, E. B. Latham, H. C. Denson and several others who have been at work all summer in Copper river delta procuring complete maps and data. The delta is about thirty miles wide at its widest part.

FATE OF THE MARIA TERESA.

Nassau, New Providence, Nov. 12.—Wreckers who have arrived here have brought with them stores from the stranded vessel off Cat island, which establishes beyond a doubt that she is the Infanta Maria Teresa.

As the vessel is looked upon as being a derelict, the wreckers claim the right to seize the stores which can be saved. They report that the water is up to her between decks, that she has a list to starboard, which side is damaged, and that she is dismasted.

The vessel lies between two reefs, on a smooth bottom, and has her anchor out.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 12.—The Merritt Wrecking Company has decided to send its tug the I. J. Merritt to Cat island to work on the wreck there. If the vessel is the Teresa, the Merritts no doubt will attempt to fulfill their contract with the government by delivering the vessel at Norfolk.

Train Robbers Caught.

Moorehead, Minn., Nov. 12.—Six of the men engaged in the hold up of the Great Northern coast train near Fergus Falls were captured here yesterday by Chief of Police Murphy.

Four of the men arrived at the Exchange Hotel here together and two others came about an hour later and inquired for the first four. Each had two large revolvers.

Two sets of burglars tools and two dark lanterns, three sticks of dynamite and four dynamite caps were found on them. Each man had three handkerchiefs.

The six men had about $200. They gave their names as W. C. Rose, J. C. Hall, C. F. Huffman, H. L. Minot, E. Morris and J. B. Edwards.

None is more than thirty years old, and all are bright and intelligent in appearance. Three claim to come from Missouri.

There seems to be no doubt that they are the men implicated and they had agreed to rendezvous at Moorehead. A number of other robberies, including that of an elevator at Evansville and a bank at Battle lake are now credited to this gang.

New Element in the Art of War.

Major J. M. J. Sanno, Inspector-General of the Department of the Dakotas and the Lakes, has given the subject of modern implements of war careful consideration. "The war has shown one thing," said he, "and that is that future warfare will be dependent upon the ear and not upon the eye. The use of smokeless powder has placed a new element in the art of war. Heretofore the smoke of the enemy's guns has been depended upon to give the location of their forces, but now that is left entirely to the ear. This has been most plainly demonstrated. But the training of the ear can be accomplished to a very delicate point. Just as a musician's ear is trained to distinguish the slightest changes in tone, so will that of the future soldier be trained to accurately detect just how far and from what direction the enemy is firing. It will necessitate the introduction of new methods of drilling and training, but it is capable of very high development."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

NORTH CAROLINA RIOTS

Eight Negroes Killed and Many Wounded.

ARMED WHITES ON GUARD

Seven Negroes in Wilmington N. C. Banished from the State. Responsibility for Riots is Placed Upon the a Negro Lawyer.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 12.—Two more negroes have been added to the death roll of the race war now being waged in this city.

Both negroes were shot while attempting to pass the guard established throughout the city by the armed whites.

Late Thursday night a large body of whites went to the home of a white Republican justice of the peace who has a negro wife, broke in the door, forcibly ejected him from the house and destroyed every article of furniture.

At present quiet prevails throughout the city, but this does not alleviate the strain upon the nerves or lessen the fearful suspense.

Every street in the city is patrolled by armed white men, the jail is heavily guarded to prevent the negro leaders incarcerated there from being lynched, and the tramp of soldiers and the glitter of bayonets are to be seen and heard everywhere.

The seven negroes who were placed in the jail here were yesterday escorted to the Atlantic Coast Line depot and warned never to tread on North Carolina soil again. If they did, they were told that they would forfeit their lives.

The seven negroes banished from the state stayed in jail all night, expecting every minute to be lynched.

On their march to the depot their escort was composed of a division of the Naval Reserves from Kingston and a militia company from Maxton.

The companies formed in the front and rear of the negroes and marched through the principal business streets of the city on the way to the railroad station.

Along the entire route large crowds gathered and cheered.

The negroes crouched close to the soldiers for protection. At the depot they were ordered to purchase tickets for points outside the state. All bought tickets to Richmond Va., and seemed heartily glad when the train steamed out.

Responsibility for the riot and bloodshed in this city is placed by the whites upon the shoulders of a negro lawyer.

The leading negroes of the city appointed this man to carry in person a letter to the whites acquiescing in their demand for the removal of the negro newspaper, the Record, from the city, and the exile of its editor, Manly. The lawyer, for some reason unknown, failed to report to the whites. Consequently the whites, thinking they were being treated with contempt, burned the Record building.

This negro lawyer has been captured, and made to leave the city, never to return under penalty of death.

The scene of the disorder is now quiet. Save for the large number of soldiers on guard duty the place is deserted. The negroes are keeping close to their houses.

Several of the negroes who were wounded Thursday, died yesterday morning.

All barrooms in the city have been closed, and anyone caught selling or giving away liquor will be severely punished.

The city is full of state troops, who are looked after and cared for by the people of Wilmington.

Mayor S. P. Wright, Chief of Police J. C. Melton and the board of aldermen, composing a fusion-negro regime, have resigned, and their successors have been elected.

Ex-Congressman A. M. Waddell as mayor, Edgar G. Parmalee, chief of police, and a new board of aldermen have assumed the reins of the government.

At midnight the new mayor issued a proclamation declaring that law would be rigidly enforced against the whites and blacks impartially. The mayor prevented one lynching Thursday night by scattering a crowd with an armed guard of twenty-five men.

In the rioting three white men have been wounded and eight negroes killed. About twenty other negroes were wounded. The injured are William Mayo, George Piner, and a Mr. Chadwick.

The negro who shot Mayo was found in a house in the negro quarter. He was taken out and told to run for his life.

He ran, but had gone only a few yards when he fell dead, his body riddled with bullets. He had been discovered by a company of naval reserves which was patrolling the streets. As the reserves approached the house a shot was fired at them from within. They replied with a volley through the doors and windows. One negro was killed. Six others were captured and taken to the jail. The house was then demolished.

News from Honolulu.

Honolulu, Nov. 2, via San Francisco, Nov. 12.—President Dole is of the opinion that it will be necessary for him to make a trip to Washington, possibly in January of next year.

This will be after the Hawaiian commission has been received by the president, and it is at the request of Senator Cullom that President Dole, as a member, will be in attendance at Washington during part of the time at least that legislation is before the Senate or House or both in connection with Hawaii.

SPANIARDS MAY APPEAL

Kaiser William May Be Asked to Arbitrate in Philippine Matter.

OUR TERMS NOT CHANGED

There in Open Talk of Breaking Off Negotiations by Madrid Newspaper. Camaras Fleet to Welcome the Emperor of Germany. Meeting of the Commission to Go Over till Monday.

Madrid, Nov. 12.—Admiral Camara's squadron has been ordered to Cadiz at full speed in view of the approaching visit of Emperor William of Germany to that port.

The Herald asserts that the Spanish government has resolved to "maintain Spain's sovereignty in the Philippine islands," and it adds that it has been suggested that Emperor William of Germany, who is expected to visit Cadiz and Madrid shortly, on his way back to Germany from the Holy Land, be asked to arbitrate the question in dispute between Spain and the United States, in the event of the peace commissions of the respective countries, now in session at Paris, failing to come to an agreement upon the terms of the proposed treaty of peace.

The queen regent presided at the cabinet meeting held yesterday. Premier Sagasta read a letter from Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission, announcing that the American peace commissioners had refused to recognize the Cuban debt and had exacted the Philippine islands.

The Spanish steamer Miguel Gallari, which left Nuevitas, Cuba, about October 24, has arrived at Barcelona with repatriated Spanish troops on board. During the voyage across the Atlantic twenty-three men died and on arriving here one hundred men were seriously ill, suffering from exhaustion and lack of food.

Meeting May Again be Postponed.

Paris, Nov. 12.—It is now generally understood that the joint sessions of the peace commissions which was arranged for Saturday will be postponed until Monday.

At the joint session of Wednesday last it was agreed that the session fixed for Saturday might be postponed until Monday if the Spanish commissioners found themselves unable to prepare a reply for presentation on Saturday, and it now appears the Spaniards found it necessary to send to Madrid for certain records which cannot reach Paris before ten o'clock this morning, and therefore their proper embodiment into the next Spanish memorandum cannot be accomplished before Monday.

The next communication from the Spanish commissioners will deal with the rights of either commission to discuss Spanish sovereignty over the Philippine islands, and with the American contention that the retention of public moneys and customs collections at Manila is justified by the fact of the military occupation of the place by the American forces and warranted by the protocol, even if faulty, as claimed by Spain, because such action commenced after the suspension of hostilities.

There is no truth in the statement printed here this morning that the Spaniards have decided to refuse entirely at the next session to discuss the cession of the Philippine islands.

On the contrary, they expect to fortify their position then on this point by introducing the record of certain verbal utterances of President McKinley and Judge Day about the time the protocol was framed and signed, tending, the Spaniards, believe, to indicate absence of purpose upon the part of the United States to take the Philippine islands, in the absence of which, it is further contended, Spain consented to sign the protocol.

Judge Day, president of the American commission, is suffering from a cold. Therefore, by his physician's advice, he has been remaining quiet.

The judge's indisposition is in the nature of an attack of the grip, from which all the commissioners have suffered more or less, but he expects to be able to attend to business to-day.

Only One Million for Spain.

Washington, Nov. 2 The administration is not to make any change in the terms of peace it has offered to Spain which will prove agreeable to the Madrid government.

Instead of paying Spain $40,000,00 as an indemnity for the cession of the Philippine islands to the United States President McKinley intends to reimburse her only for the debt of about $1,000,000 contracted for public improvements.

President McKinley and his cabinet have carefully noted that the sentiment expressed throughout the country by the elections has been in opposition to the suggestion to indemnify Spain to the extent first proposed.

As was put out by the administration authorities, it was intended to give the capital of the entire debt floated, with the Philippine islands as security and amounting to $40 000,000. What will be paid by the United States, according to the present intention of the president, is the debt contracted by Spain for the establishment of lighthouses, harbor improvements and public buildings. All told, this does not amount to a very large sum, being fixed at about one million doars.

Relics of Cervera's Fleet.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 12.—The German steamer Sentor, from Santiago, which has been in quarantine, was released yesterday and will go to Washington. She has aboard guns from the Teresa, Oquendo and Vizcaya, and the Colon's safe, in which was money and the ship's muster roll, which relics will be exhibited in the National Museum at Washington.

Sleighing in Malone.

Malone, N Y., Nov. 12.—The heavy snow storm which set in from the northeast on Thursday morning, continued unabated yesterday.

About eight inches of snow have fallen and good sleighing prevails.

YOU'RE READING THIS?
CERTAINLY!
Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.
THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.
We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

REPORT OF GENERAL MILES.

His Contribution to the Story of the Conduct of the War.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 12.—The report of General Miles, covering his connection with the war between the United States and Spain, has been made public, and with it the dispatches bearing thereupon.

Among the more important points covered are his protest against sending troops to Cuba while they were untrained and in danger of falling victims to yellow fever; his request at Tampa to accompany the army to Cuba, and the reply from Washington ordering him to Porto Rico, followed by his sudden summons to Washington; General Shafter's dispatch, in which that general said that he was "seriously considering withdrawing about five miles from in front of Santiago;" another dispatch from General Shafter, dated July 4, in which he intimated that he could not take Santiago until Rear Admiral Sampson would enter the "upper bay;" the decision by the administration to send General Miles immediately to Santiago with reinforcements; General Miles's preparation to "land sufficient forces on the west side of the harbor of Santiago to either open the entrance to our fleet or enfilade the enemy's line and take their position in reverse," and the consequent hastening of Toral on account of this flank move to surrender Santiago.

The report also mentions the clash between General Miles and General Shafter, in which Shafter says:

"I was told by the secretary that you were not to supersede me in command here," and the reply of General Miles, reminding Shafter that "the order of the secretary of war of July 13 left the matter to my discretion."

The report insists that General Miles was sent by the president to the rescue of General Shafter, and that he was recognized as having been in command by the secretary of war in his dispatch of July 13 giving General Miles full discretion.

The decision of General Shafter to withdraw five miles was expurgated from the dispatch given out at the war department at the time, as well as the word "regular," used in congratulating the troops in order that the volunteers might seemingly be included.

The report also gives a military outline of the campaign in Porto Rico, and closes the report about the war by saying:

"It is gratifying to record that during the war not a single defeat has been met, and not a prisoner, color, gun or rifle has been captured by the enemy. In this respect the war has been most remarkable, and perhaps unparalleled. Under all circumstances, and in spite of many most trying difficulties, the troops have maintained the fortitude of the American character and the honor of their arms."

VICTIMS OF YELLOW FEVER.

Havana, Nov. 12.—Major Charles W. Williams, the chief quartermaster, who had been suffering from fever for some time, died at nine o'clock yesterday morning.

F. T. Stewart, the clerk attached to the quartermaster's department, who had also been prostrated with fever for several days, died at six o'clock yesterday morning.

The condition of J. B. Caldwell, the third of the American party who has been suffering from fever, is unchanged.

Washington, Nov. 12.—Adjutant General Corbin has received a message from General Wade, chairman of the Cuban evacuation commission at Havana, announcing the death from yellow fever of Lieutenant Colonel Chas. W. Williams, deputy quartermaster general.

Lieutenant Colonel Charles W. Williams, deputy quartermaster general, was a native of Kentucky, and was graduated from West Point as a second lieutenant of the Eighteenth infantry on June 16, 1875.

He was transferred to the quartermaster's department July 2, 1879, as captain, became a major March 4, 1893, and a lieutenant colonel last February.

He was the youngest officer in his grade, being only about forty-five years old, and would in all probability have become quartermaster general.

Enraged by a False Prophet.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 12.—To escape violence at the hands of his own race, whom he had worked up to a high pitch of religious excitement, over his prediction that an earthquake would visit Norfolk yesterday, Albert Booker, a negro prophet, yesterday had to leave town.

Booker said that the earthquake would do great damage.

Revival meetings were held in the colored churches, negroes left positions and some of them went away from the city.

Yesterday at a meeting Booker told his race that he had had a vision which told him the earthquake had been postponed.

The negroes would have wreaked summary vengeance had not the police interfered and Booker was hurried out of the city.

Express Trains in Collision.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 12.—The Buffalo express on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, which left New York at 8.30 last night, ran into the New York and Philadelphia express going east on the Wilkesbarre mountain, at three o'clock yesterday morning. No passengers were seriously injured, but five trainmen were killed.

An investigation showed that a very heavy wind storm prevailed on the mountain, which caused the leaves from the forest to accumulate on the track.

Pardoned by Gov. Black.

Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 12.—William D. Davis, a Lockport alderman, serving a sentence of two years and four months in the Auburn prison for bribery, was discharged yesterday on an absolute pardon from Governor Black. He was received here on June 16, 1897.

HOME FROM PORTO RICO

Rear-Admiral Schley Comes Back to Report.

COMMISSION'S WORK DONE

Member of the Evacuation Commission Aboard. He Predicts a Great Future for Porto Rico. People Are Law-abiding and Pleased With American Control.

New York, Nov. 12.—The United States cruiser Newark, in command of Commander Goodrich, and flying the flag of Rear Admiral Schley, arrived yesterday from San Juan, Porto Rico, and anchored off Tompkinsville, S. I. She was greeted on her arrival by a salute from the battleship Texas, in honor of the Rear Admiral aboard.

The Newark sailed from San Juan on Sunday, November 6.

On board with Rear Admiral Schley were his staff, composed of Flag Lieutenant James H. Sears, Flag Secretary B. W. Wells, Jr., and Ensign E. McCauley, aide, and Hon. Charles W. Russell of the department of justice, legal adviser to the Porto Rican evacuation commission, who also accompanied the rear admiral when he went to Porto Rico.

The rear admiral had with him the report of the commission, consisting of three bulky parcels, with the documentary evidence, and estimated to contain at least sixty thousand words, which he took with him to Washington last evening.

He looked well, and said he felt well though tired and in need of rest; the tact that had to be exercised in the discharge of the work of the commission had been a great strain, and he wanted to get away off in the country on a farm, where he could be away from all care for a time.

He said that the meetings of the commission with the Spaniards had been very harmonious; the instructions that the American commissioners could not deviate from were gracefully submitted to by them, and before the meetings ceased the Spaniards had a very much higher respect for Americans.

The report contains a full statement of the finances, the revenues, and expenditures, the debts, the government and other conditions of Porto Rico and its inhabitants.

Rear Admiral Schley finishes up the work of the commission in conveying the report to the president.

Of the other two members, Major General John R. Brooke remains as military governor of Porto Rico, and Brigadier General W. W. Gordon returned home some two weeks ago.

As Rear Admiral Schley was commandant at Porto Rico, he did not leave before the arrival of Commander Snow, who reached San Juan by the hospital steamer Solace, from New York on Saturday, with several officers stores and marines to establish a barracks, and took immediate command of the station.

The rear admiral said that Porto Rico had a great future and advantages equal with Cuba.

The people, he continued, are agreeable, docile and amenable to law, and are just now carried away with admiration for the United States.

Flag Secretary B. W. Wells, Jr., said that the Spaniards had almost all left the island, being mostly in the military and civil service. The small number left, he said, were those compelled to stay by their interests.

The heat was great when the Newark left San Juan last Sunday, but the nights were cool.

He said that the soldiers are now getting acclimated, so that the number of sick in the hospitals is growing rapidly less.

The men are gradually being housed and will soon no longer have to live in tents and sleep on the ground.

There arrived also, from the West Indies yesterday the transport Berlin, Captain Wilson, which sailed from Santiago on November 6. She reached quarantine at 8 o'clock, and after being inspected by the health officer, proceeded to an anchorage off Bedloe's island.

The Berlin brought 137 passengers, consisting of discharged and convalescent soldiers, government employes and six contract female nurses.

Among these passengers were Captain Justo Garcia, son of General Calixto Garcia; Major Melendez of the Cuban army, and Senor Carulla, Cuban diplomat on a mission to the United States.

The Berlin is in charge of Captain Thomas Swohe, quartermaster. All on board the transport are well or convalescent. The convalescents improved steadily during the voyage to this port.

Four Men Killed.

Hanover, Mass., Nov. 12.—Fire in the general store of C. A. Stearns was discovered at 5.30 o'clock yesterday morning, and soon afterwards a terrific explosion took place, which blew out the sides of the building and killed four men.

The dead are Michael Robert Sylvester, Edgar Adams, C. A. Peterson and C. T. Tolman.

More than twelve persons were injured, principal among them being C. A. Stearns, the proprietor of the store, who had one arm and one leg broken, his shoulder crushed and was considerably bruised about the body.

The Virden Mine Trouble.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 12.—A dispatch to the Post-Dispatch from Virden, Illinois, says that indications point to a settlement between the striking miners and the Virden Coal Company.

Edward Cahill, president of the Miners' Union, has left for Chicago, in response to a telegram from T. C. Loucks president of the coal company.

Consul at Erzerum Reorganized.

Constantinople, Nov. 12.—After efforts lasting three years upon the part of the United States legation here, the United States minister, Oscar S. Straus, has succeeded in obtaining an irade authorizing the granting of an exequatur to the United States consul at Erzerum.

Norway and Sweden.

Christiania, Nov. 12.—The storthing has adopted a resolution to introduce a purely Norwegian flag, without the emblem of the union with Sweden.

DUN'S WEEKLY REVIEW.

The Record for November Thus far Shows Clearings Larger Than Last Year.

New York, Nov. 12.—The country has safely passed the trial of "off year" elections, which for forty years have always shown a tendency to a change of policy, but this year has entrenched sound money behind a majority impregnable for at least four years in the Senate, and has retained a working majority for sound money in the House.

Other business conditions are not less favorable, and with labor questions causing no general trouble, with no anxiety about money, and with heavy crops met by large foreign demand, there is every reason now to look for improvement.

No doubt the result of elections will also facilitate the settlement of pending questions with Spain.

Before this election everything except political uncertainties favored business enlargement. The volume of trade has been the greatest ever known in October, and the greatest ever known in any month except December, 1892. The record on November thus far shows clearings 10.4 per cent. larger than last year, and 9.3 per cent. larger than in 1892. The railroad earnings in October have been 5.2 per cent. larger than last year, and 8.0 per cent. larger than in 1892.

Foreign trade shows an increase of 20 per cent. in October exports, with 38 per cent. in exports from New York last week, while imports showed a gain of only 22 per cent. in October, and credits against foreign bankers were piling up at an inconvenient rate.

Wheat declined nearly a cent, but recovered all the los , with Atlantic exports, flour included, of 3,338,509 bushels, against 3,274,489 last year, and Pacific exports 1,016,961 against 1,592,353 last year.

Western receipts, 9,924,045 bushels for the week, against 7,255,514 last year, continue to render the holding back of stocks manifestly a failure.

Corn has but slightly changed in the price, with exports of 2,062,331 bushels, against 2,474,641 last year, and an increase of more than a half in western receipts. Cotton remains at the lowest price on record, with heavy receipts and without large milling demand.

Iron production, November 1st, was 228,935 tons weekly, against 215,635 October 1st, and a decrease is seen of 35,241 tons in stocks unsold outside the holdings of the great steel companies, indicating an actual consumption of 1,019,646 tons in October, about 283 tons daily greater than the largest ever shown in any previous month on record.

Wool sales for the past week were only 7,437,500 pounds, at the three chief eastern markets, and were secured by concessions at all markets, as last week, making 18,234,900 pounds.

Cotton goods are, on the whole, in better demand, although denims are slightly lower, and little can be said of an encouraging character as to the demand for staple goods of domestic use.

There is much stubbornness in the leather market, without much change in prices, although a weaker feeling appears in some qualities.

The money market has been practically unchanged, although for best paper slightly lower rates have been made, and there is a heavy demand on stock collateral.

Failures for the first week of November were $1,646,535 in amount against $3,009,637 last year.

The Race Troubles at Washington.

Washington, Nov. 12.—The cabinet meeting yesterday lasted more than two hours. While a large amount of routine business was transacted, considerable attention was devoted to the race troubles in the Carolinas.

The president expressed deep concern over the situation, but it was decided that the developments up to this time did not warrant federal interference.

The conditions in these two states, however, will be kept under close surveillance with a view to action should it be deemed necessary.

The president will confer with Attorney General Griggs concerning the situation in the Carolinas upon the latter's return to this city.

The Tin-plate Consolidation.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 12.—A conference of the leading tin plate manufacturers has been held here to complete the consolidation of all the tin plate factories of the country.

It is said by one of the principal promoters that the purchase price of the tin plate factories of the country has been agreed upon, and a deal for all the plants has virtually been closed at figures approximating $15,000,000.

This deal will include about 40 factories, thirty of which are located in Pittsburg and Wheeling districts.

These plants are to be purchased outright, and all are expected to be ready for the organization before the first of January.

English Opposition Withdrawn.

London, Nov. 12.—A special dispatch from Shanghai says that the British minister at Pekin, Sir Claude M. Macdonald, on learning from the American minister there that a concession to build the Hankow-Canton Railroad had been granted to an American syndicate, refused to support the application of the Anglo Eastern syndicate for the contract.

It appears that although the American concession was signed by the Chinese minister at Washington in April, the China department of the foreign office advised the Anglo Eastern syndicate to apply for it, which was done on October 10.

Adirondack Deer-hunting.

Malone, N. Y., Nov. 12.—Reports from various hunting centers in the Adirondacks show a falling off in the number of deer killed up to this date as compared with last year, although Game Protector Alfred, in the district along the line of the New York and Ottawa Railroad, says that one hundred and ten have been killed in his territory a number fully as large as that of last year.

In 187 snow fell earlier, a condition most favorable to still hunting.

The snow storm now prevail comes too near the close of the season to be of much benefit in tracking the animals.

COMING EVENTS.

November 13—William Hauptman, of the Twenty-second Regiment, New York Volunteers, will speak at the Y. M. C. A. meeting at 4:15 p. m.

The City Election.

While other sections of New Jersey are settling down to the even tenor of their way, leaving politics to those to whom it is of unusual interest, Plainfield is not thus confronted. On the contrary the city is about to undergo a political campaign that will stir up local interest to the fever-heat point. This condition will come about in the canvass leading up to municipal election December 6th, Plainfield being the only municipality in the State that has its local election follow immediately after the county and State election.

This year great interest is centered in the outcome. Formidable opposition is certain to appear against the regular Republican ticket, but whether it will be in the form of a straight Democratic ticket or Citizens' ticket remains to be seen. It is very likely to be the former, however. For years the Democrats have been in a disorganized state in this city, but recently a plan of reorganization was inaugurated and is being carried out successfully. Though there are some Democrats who feel that a Citizens' ticket will be the surest way of accomplishing Republican defeat in the city, there are many others that look at it in the light that the Democratic party has been a nonentity long enough and should put a straight party ticket in the field.

They urge that the Republican record in city affairs is such that there is every chance of victory for the opposition party, and if the Republicans are defeated at all it can be done as well under a party movement as under a Citizens'. At any rate, it is felt by many Democrats that even if defeat was met with again in the city election it certainly would show the Democrats to be alive and in this way the party organization would be strengthened and in future campaigns the Democrats would become more of a factor than heretofore in local affairs.

The officers to be elected are a Mayor, City Collector, City Judge, four Councilman and a member of the Board of Education.

In the consecration of the Church of the Redeemer at Jerusalem the Emperor William occupied the center of the stage and acted as grand master of the Teutonic Knights. This mediæval order of religious chivalry, unlike the Templars and Hospitalers, with whom it was contemporary, still retains some kind of skeleton and futile organization, and the kaiser took advantage of its historical memories to pose as successor of the old crusading chiefs. At the conclusion of the consecration service the new royal crusader read an allocution which contained this fervent apostrophe: "From Jerusalem there came the light in the splendor of which the German nation became great and glorious. What the Germanic peoples have become they became under the banner of the cross, the emblem of self sacrificing Christian charity. As nearly 2,000 years ago, so there shall today ring out from Jerusalem the cry voicing the ardent hope of all for 'peace on earth.'" It was not every crusader who went to the Holy City out of sheer religious enthusiasm. There were Bohemonds and Baldwins as well as Godfreys and Tancreds. Curiosity will wait with just a flavor of cynical interest to know what lies behind all this pretentious drama.

The New York Tribune advises the Republican leaders, if they want to have their party organization in good shape for the Presidential campaign, that it would be a good idea to have their State headquarters kept open the year around, for there are several counties where the Republican organization is in wretched shape and the work of getting them into effective order cannot be done in the heat and excitement of a political campaign such as has just ended What the Tribune advises for the Republicans is equally good admonition for the Democrats. In Union county the Republicans have got a fine working organization, but not so with the Democrats

THEY HOLD THE PURSE STRINGS.

It has become a settled practice in most European countries to consider the opinions of the Rothschilds before taking any important step likely to cause international complications. Two brothers of this financially powerful family, Baron Rothschild, of France, and Lord Rothschild, of England, have had more than is given out to do with delaying if not preventing war between England and France.

Now that Foster M. Voorhees is elected it becomes the duty of the newspapers to fill the offices at his disposal. For the present The Chronicle will be satisfied with one, and nominates Charles C. McBride, editor of the Elizabeth Daily Journal, as the Governor's private secretary. Mr. McBride is a Bound Brook boy, worked hard for Republican success, and deserves this place.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

We second the nomination. The affable, handsome and brilliant McBride is the man for the position. And he deserves well at the hands of Voorhees, too.

By going to Cuba for garrison duty the Plainfield boys in the Third Regiment are just as big patriots as the men who were in the front rank of assault on San Juan Hill. And they deserve just as much credit, for it's no pleasant job now to go to Cuba with nothing but dull and routine camp duty staring them in the face for the year and a half that they have yet to serve.

A writer who has an eye for details says that some front yards are so correct that they drive a man to set on his back doorstep and admire weeds.

If Spain gets balky in her peace negotiations it won't take Uncle Sam long to whip her into line again.

The best means for retaliating on a man who tries to make you feel mean is to have good humor.

The exact plurality of Congressman Howell in the Third district is 841.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Some newspapers have stated that after March 4th, for the first time in the history of the State, there will be two Republicans representing New Jersey in the United States Senate. This is incorrect, as from November, 1866, to March, 1869, the Senators from New Jersey were Frederick T Frelinghuysen and Alexander G. Cattell, both Republicans.—Newark News.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

As a result of trolley extension a woman residing in Bound Brook came to Plainfield a few days ago and purchased in the neighborhood of about $25 worth of goods in one of Plainfield's leading stores. This money did not go to New York and it only cost the woman 20 cents to make the round trip. This is one of many such incidents that have come along with trolley extension.

What is claimed to be the heaviest hog ever raised in the State of New Jersey, and perhaps in the United States, is owned by Robert Black, of Cream Ridge, Monmouth county. The hog, which is of the Jersey red variety, is three years old. On March 1st last the animal weighed 960 pounds, which had increased to 1,240 pounds on August 1st, with the further growth to 1,520 pounds on November 1st. The rate of increase at present is three pounds per day and the owner expects a live weight of 1,700 when the animal is killed in December. He believes that he has the heaviest hog ever grown in the United States.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

Henry Chanfrau, in "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," a play dear to the hearts of all American playgoers, will be the attraction offered to the patrons of Music Hall next Tuesday. The famous old comedy drama presents a story of American western life, full of heart interest and exciting scenes, and at the same time a goodly spattering of real wholesome comedy of the old school. "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," is a purely American drama. This season Mr. Chanfrau has surrounded himself with a clever coterie of select players. Edward Maynard will be seen as Manuel Nond, who wrecks Kit's home and causes the thread of the story to be woven. Sara MacDonald assumes the character of Mary Redding, and afterwards as Alice Redding, her daughter. The comedy is in the capable hands of Lawrence Barbour as the Major, W. D. Stone as the Judge, Andrew Collom as Julius Caesar and Leo Hardman as Jerry Sleepers. The remaining cast includes Will B. Alexander, Walter Stewart, May Alexander, Baby Clifford and Rodney Wagoner.

The funniest of all farce-comedies produced in recent years, "My Friend From India," will be the attraction at the Star Theatre, Fourteenth street and Broadway, New York, next week The comedy is from the pen of H. A. DuSouchet, and tells a story about a Kansas pork-packer who is trying to force his way into New York society through the medium of an alleged Indian mystic, who has fallen into his hands by accident. Ripples of laughter, like the first breath of an approaching gale, creep through the first act; while in the second act the gale itself breaks and sweeps in gusts over the audience. The third and concluding act is perhaps less violent, but it abounds in the same bubbling humor. From all parts of the country the most flattering receptions of the play are recorded. The production will be produced under the direct supervision of its managers and owners, Smyth & Rice.

Modern vaudeville is certainly undergoing a revolution, thanks to Manager F. F. Proctor's lavish expenditure in the matter of his programmes. The latest sensational announcement comes from his Pleasure Palace, Fifty-eight street and Third avenue, New York, to the effect that, in addition to the usual big vaudeville bill, there will be produced Monday, November 21st, for the first time on any stage, a grand military, patriotic and historical spectacle entitled "The Battle of San Juan Hill." To make the production more than usually perfect and impressive, Mr. Proctor has utilized what was formerly the Garden of Palms, in the rear of his present stage, thus giving him the enormous stage depth of 150 feet, and a width of 75 feet This quite eclipses the famous old Drury Lane stage, and gives to New York theatricals a new distinction In the production there will be over 200 soldiers, 30 horses, and a most elaborate display of scenery, painted especially from photographs taken on the spot The people will be made up of actual participants in the battle. The Rough Riders, 71st Regiment, the gallant negro troops, all will take part, and fight the battle over again. The heroes of the fight, Roosevelt, Wheeler, Lawton, Kent and Lieut. Ord, will be enacted with life like fidelity by capable actors.

—The Ladies' Aid Society of the German Reformed church will hold a fair in their church next week.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 12—Tomorrow night Rev. E. S. Jamison will preach a special sermon on the political questions of the day, taking for his topic "Some Thoughts Suggested by the Candidates for Political Office in the Recent Election."

Many of the streets in town need the attention of the road committee. Since the people have seen what a fine condition Notth avenue has been put in, they want all the streets made as fine. A few loads of cinders and cracked stone would make a big improvement on several of them.

Crandall, the jeweler, is receiving his holiday goods day by day, and has a nice supply of watches and pins on hand. He has also added eye glasses and spectacles as a side line.

Eugene Runyon, the real estate dealer, is doing quite a business now in houses and lots. He has several fine ones on hand to dispose of which are going at a bargain.

Mrs. Thomas Robinson, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Staats, has gone to her new home in Newark.

Sunday is always a big day for the trolley. On that day the Bound Brook cars run on half hour headway instead of 60 minutes.

The Middlesex County Bowling Green Club are bowling this afternoon for the last time for the Booth prize.

The offering tomorrow morning in the Methodist church will be for the Episcopal fund.

Willard Trombley has returned from a visit with friends in Waverly.

William H. Terry spent yesterday in New York.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, November 12.—Abner Coriell lost a valuable cow early this week. The animal is thought to have been poisoned. It was out to pasture as usual that day, but when it was brought home and put up in the barn the cow showed symptoms of illness and soon afterwards expired.

Mrs. Joseph Metz has been visiting relatives in North Plainfield.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 12—W. D. Murray, of Plainfield, will make an address Sunday evening in the Baptist church upon Y. M. C. A. work and the need of such an association in Scotch Plains. It is hoped a large number will turn out and encourage those who have made it possible for the village to have such an association. Young men of the village are especially invited.

Charles Frentz, George Johnston, John Reick and Henry Schwallbach returned yesterday from a two days' hunting trip to Annandale. The result of the trip was 53 rabbits.

Miss Adams, Miss Reger, Miss Robison, Mrs. Wm Maguire and several others attended the concert in the Presbyterian church in Westfield last evening.

The local football eleven are playing the Alis second team this afternoon on the gridiron in the rear of the school building.

George Baldwin is visiting friends and relatives in South Jersey. George expects to be gone two weeks.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov 12—Miss Adeline N. Sterling, book critic of Harper's Publishing Company, will deliver a lecture on "Some Passing Thoughts on Current Literature" in the Congregational church Tuesday evening.

Mulford M. Scudder, of this town, feels very proud that he received the largest vote of any candidate on the Democratic ticket. Mr Scudder was a candidate for Assemblyman.

The Christian Endeavor meeting in the Congregational church Sunday evening will be led by A. L. Alpers. The text will be "Christian Recitation."

It has been fully demonstrated that Ely's Cream Balm is a specific for Nasal Catarrh and cold in the head. This distinction has been acheived only as the result of continued successful use. A morbid condition of the membrane in the nasal passages can be cured by this purifying and healing treatment. Sold by druggists or it will be mailed for 50 cents by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York. It spreads over the membrane, is absorbed and relief is immediate.

PAUL MORPHY AND THE DEVIL.

How the Great Chess Player Defeated His Satanic Majesty.

On reading the notes in the July number on Paul Morphy's visit to Philadelphia, I am reminded of an incident in connection with his visit to Richmond, Va., about the same time, which was related to me some years ago by Rev. Mr. H. of that city. I do not remember ever to have seen it in print. Mr. Morphy was Mr. H.'s guest while in the city, and on his arrival was at once attracted by a painting over the mantel, which was a fine copy of a celebrated painting representing a game of chess between a young man and the devil, the stake being the young man's soul.

The artist had most graphically depicted the point in the game where it was apparently the young man's move, and he seemed just to realize the fact that he had lost the game, the agony of despair being shown in every line of his features, and attitude, while the devil, from the opposite side of the table, gloated over him with fiendish delight. The position of the game appeared utterly hopeless for the young man, and Mr. H. said he had often set it up and studied it with his chess friends, and all agreed that the young man's game was certainly lost.

Mr. Morphy walked up to the picture and studied it for several minutes, when finally, turning to Mr. H., he said:

"I can win the game for the young man."

Mr. H. was, of course, astonished, and said: "It is impossible!"

Mr. Morphy replied: "Get out the men and board and let us look at it."

The position was set up, and in a few rapid moves he demonstrated a complete win for the young man, and the devil was checkmated.

Rev. Mr. H. was wont to apply the evident and beautiful moral, which I leave to each one of your readers to think over.—R. Munford in American Chess Magazine.

ONLY A CLERK.

"I am sorry to disturb you, but the tide is coming up rapidly, and you have only just time to get round the point."

Mabel Rorke was so engrossed in her sketch she had forgotten everything else. There certainly had been a young man hovering about for the last half hour, but she had a soul above young men, and barely noticed him.

"I am very much obliged to you. I will move in a few minutes."

"Excuse me, you must come immediately," and he snatched up her paint-box. "Run, run," he said. "What a fool I have been to leave it so long."

It was terrible work running through the heavy sand, hearts pumping like steam-engines with fear, and when at last knee-deep in water they turned the point the strong-minded young woman was disgracefully near fainting.

"You can rest now," he said kindly; "we are safe."

"I shall be all right in a minute," she panted.

"No hurry, I will be packing the easel and things."

"You are an artist, I see," she said as she saw how neatly he packed up. "I thought you looked like one; don't be too severe on my poor daub."

"I am not an artist," he said, coloring slightly, "and it is not a poor little daub. I ventured to admire it from a distance when I ought to have been watching the tide."

"It is very kind of you to say so. Shall we go on now?"

"If you feel able. Let me carry your things; it is a rough walk. If you will take my hand I can help you over the stones."

"No thank you—there I go again. How abominable slippery the rocks are."

"You must take my hand," and she was not sorry to cling tight.

"What a mess I am in; look at my poor frock."

"Your frock will be all right when it is dry; it is good, substantial stuff."

"Men don't understand those things."

"I assure you—"

"Never mind—I don't care. There's our cottage; I had better hurry. I hope you will call and see us," as she stopped to say good-bye. Then, with a slightly trembling voice, "I don't forget what I have to thank you for. I shall never forget it. Good-bye."

"Do you know that man you were bidding such an affectionate farewell to?" said Mary Moore, the "bachelor" friend she was touring with.

"Know him, in the vulgar conventional sense I dont, but know him for a gentleman and a brave man who has saved my life."

"You needn't go into such heroics."

All the same Mary Moore was more interested in the story than she would condescend to confess.

If we were not prejudiced, and had eyes for anything else in the world but the shops, we should admire Oxford street on a fine day in October. There are some really lovely sunsets to be seen from Marshall and Snelgrove's. Nevertheless, "How I wish I was back at Tregurrian," thought Mabel.

"That velvet is lovely, I will do up my old hat, the one I wore at Tregurrian, I am fond of that hat," and she went into the shop.

She was conducted to a counter—"Here, Walker, are you serving?"

"No, sir."

A tall fair man came forward. Mabel looked at him, stared hard, and couldn't believe her eyes; and he, poor fellow, turned pale. He, too, had had his dreams. But he had nothing to reproach himself with, he had taken no advantage whatever, not even called when invited. He was brave then, he was more brave now.

"What can I do for you, madam?"

"Some velvet, please, something cheap—the very commonest you have is good enough."

But she worried over it, and was hard to please somehow.

With a cool "good-morning" she went.

* * * * * * *

"Mary, Mary, put down that wretched paint brush, what are you working over that thing for? I hate the very sight of pictures, and all that rubbish."

"Why, what is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, nothing is the matter, I am all right, only I am the most vile, ungrateful wretch that ever lived. I have behaved infamously, disgracefully; I wish to goodness I had never been born; I wish we lived on a desert island."

"Do tell me what is the matter?"

"I've seen him again, I've seen him again, and I tell you I have behaved like a cad. Yes," she went on hysterically, "he's in a shop, he served me, called me 'madam,' and his name is Walker."

"Good heavens! you don't say so; how awfully annoying. You took his arm, too, didn't you Mabel?"

"I didn't take his arm," furiously, "for I took his hand; and I will tell you what I am going to do. I am going back to the shop to-morrow, and I shall ask him to come and see my pictures and have tea."

"Please yourself of course; I shall be out."

* * * * * * *

"Jim, dear," said Mrs. Walker, "did you notice that little man with long hair and a velvet coat who just bought a red necktie?"

"Yes; was he a brother of the brush, Mabel?"

"He's Mary Moore's fiance. I can't say I feel inclined to change; dont be conceited; that's my row. Come and look at my show room; I have made it perfectly lovely."—Golden Penny.

THE HORSE SHOW.

The History of New York's Chief Society Event.

The original projectors of the Horse Show build-d far better than they knew when they first met and arranged for their first display in 1883. The idea of the Horse show was first developed in and among the then comparatively small element in the New York society world known as "the hunting set," and whose chief headquarters then as now were in the saddle at Hempstead and Far Rockaway.

The first five shows in the old Garden were very modest affairs compared with those of the past six years, and the figures both of the attendance at these and of their receipts look almost ridiculous beside those of to-day. But each year saw a steady improvement in the attendance and consequently in the receipts. With the opening of the new Madison Square Garden in 1890 the public began to realize that the show afforded it an opportunity to inspect the much-talked-of and much discussed beauties and leaders of New York society at close range and to study their costumes and gowns, with the result that they rushed to the Garden. The show had its red-letter year in 1892, although that of last year was almost equal in the figures of attendance and receipts.

As the years went by, the demand for the best boxes became such that the premiums paid at the auction sales reached surprising figures, until upward of $500 was cheerfully given for the choice of a prominent box for the week. The ticket speculators saw their opportunity in this craze and frequently managed to secure some of the best boxes, as well as the best seats. One of these three or four years ago held a box in a good position at $1,000 for the week of the show. He offered it to Mr. William K. Vanderbilt, who refused to pay such a price, but immediately afterward sold it to Captain De la Mar. This is the highest recorded price paid for a box at the Horse Show.

Until three years ago New York society made the show so much of its own that it intrenched itself in all the boxes and aspiring millionaires from other cities were not able to break into the charmed circle, although several attempts were made to do so. Three years ago, however, Philadelphia secured a box, and the next year Boston, Baltimore and Pittsburg were represented. Last Autumn other cities held at least a third of the prominent boxes.

Considered solely as a social function, the Horse Show, notwithstanding the fact that it has ceased to be a novely and that the interest of New York society in it is somewhat waning, is still undoubtedly the most important event of the year in the society world, not only of New York, but of America. It is the Advent season of the society year, and its week means the opening of the Winter's gayeties. The members of New York society regulate, to a large extent, their time of returning to their city homes by it and date the events of the year from and by the show week. For it the matron and belle prepare their most elaborate gowns, and the man of fashion overhauls his wardrobe and gives extra instructions to his valet.

As may be supposed, it is the event of the year to the milliners and dressmakers not only of this country, but also to some extent of London and Paris, for many workshops in those cities are busied every summer on orders from American women for Horse Show gowns. As is natural, therefore, the show sets each year the fashion in Winter gowns and even in men's clothes, and is the Mecca of all the leading milliners and dressmakers of the country who assemble at the Garden during the week to study their own and their fellow's productions and to get points for the Winter's fashions.

At the show the Winters' gayeties are planned entertainments are organized, engagements announced, and scandals whispered. It is the first meeting day of the society clearing house after the long Summer and Autumn, and to a large extent it sets the pace for the six months to follow.

The mornings of the show are favored by the more enthusiastic members of the hunting set and by the children of society. About three o'clock the advance guard of the fashionable throng begins to arrive, and by four the boxes and prominent seats are filled with fashionably dressed occupants, and the public begins its rounds of study and comment. At six o'clock the human tide begins to ebb as dinner hour approaches, and at eight it begins to flow back again. By 9:30 every night the function is at its height, and at eleven the show is over. Then the fashionable restaurants and cafes are filled until long after midnight with the brilliantly dressed throng discussing the events of the day.

Sympathy in Children.

Collecting butterflies, bird's eggs, etc., should never be encouraged. It is apt to develop all that is hard and cruel in a child's nature, and to make him heedless of giving pain and sorrow to others. Any sign of cruelty in a child's nature should at once be checked, as should also the fear of any insect or animal. Instead of telling the child to "throw away that nasty caterpillar," instruct him to touch it very gently so that he will not hurt it, and to admire its beauty of form and coloring. Always encourage the love of animals in children.

Birdie—There's a Frenchman behind us; I'd better tell you this in English.

Bertie—On the contrary, you'd be safer if you were to speak French!—Judy.

FATHER AND SON.

Both are Kings and Have Reigned for Thirty-Five Years.

Father and son celebrate the thirty-fifth anniversary of their accession to thrones within a month of each other, and strange to say, King George, of Greece, had royal honors even before his aged father, for the former ascended his throne, October 31st, 1863 and King Christian, of Denmark, was crowned on November 15, of the same year.

Prince Christian, a fourth son of the Duke of Schleswig-Holstein, had been brought up in the ordinary military career of princes without expectations. He had a small salary, she a small dot. For ten years they had to practice the most rigid economies. Then came a slight betterment in his condition and an enormous and unexpected change in his prospects. On May 8, 1852, the apparently inextricable confusion into which the question of the Danish succession had lapsed was straightened out by the protocol of London, and Prince Christian was formally recognized as heir to his wife's cousin, King Frederick VII. of Denmark. The couple received the title of Royal Highnesses, and later Christian became inspector general and commander in chief of the Danish cavalry in a miniature army of forty thousand all told. This turn of Fortune's wheel, however, made little throne as Christian IX of Denmark.

Simultaneously with the accession of the Prince of Schleswig-Holstein to the throne rival claimants arose for the duchies of Schleswig-Holstein, which had been part of the possessions of King Frederick VII. of Denmark. The extinction of his dynasty, it was asserted, and the substitution of a new one, had entirely altered the change in the household's style of existence until the year 1863, when Frederick's death brought the prince to the rights of succession in these provinces. It is needless to enter into the merits of this involved and difficult controversy. Lord Palmerston used to say:—"There have been but two men who really comprehended the question about the duchies—Prince Albert, who is dead, and I, who have forgotten." Suffice it to say that after diplomatic wrangles, which closed in an appeal to arms, Prussia, Austria and Germany all took a hand in the fight, and the first of these great countries, under the wily hand of Bismarck, succeeded in robbing little Denmark of the three duchies of Holstein, Schleswig and Lauenberg and attaching them to her own dominions. France and England looked on growlingly, but both concluded not to interfere.

After this loss of one-third of the kingdom internal troubles arose in that portion of his dominions which still remained to King Christian. King and parliament could never agree, a characteristic that both have retained almost to the present time. Ministerial crises in Denmark have been as frequent as revolutions in South America.

But in his home life he found a relief from the strains of ruling, and the story of the splendid marriages of his sons and daughters has become an old-time tale to every household in Christendom.

THE WASP AS AN ENGINEER.

Bit of Insect Cleverness That Won Praise From Army Men.

Several members of the United States engineer corps were interested witnesses of a feat of insect engineering near the road on which they were working. One of their number found a blue ground wasp dragging along the ground a dead swamp spider one-quarter the size of a full grown tarantula. Whether the wasp killed the spider or found it dead is a question beyond solution. He was having a hard time dragging his prey along, and presently left it to go prospecting for his abode. The discoverer of the wasp called his companions, and one of them in coming stepped upon the wasp's ground hole, crushing down some blades of dried grass across it. This caused no little trouble to the insect, who, upon locating the hole, nipping away at the obstructing stalks with his strong mandibles until he had cleared a passage. Then he went back and sized up the spider, walking around the big body and surveying it from all sides.

"He's reckoning that the hole isn't big enough," said one of the engineers.

"That's all right, he'll fix it," said another, as the insect went back and commenced vigorously widening the entrance to his domicile.

Again he returned to the spider, seized it and dragged it to within a foot of the orifice. To the spectators it was evident that more work would have to be done before the spider could be dragged in. This struck the wasp, too, for again he ran around the body, examining it carefully, and returned to the hole to take measurements. He went to digging a second time. Having dug for two minutes, he brought his prey up to the edge of the hole, nipped out a piece of dirt here, cut away a grass stem there, and after fifteen minutes of hard and skillful labor disappeared underground, dragging the spider after him, doubtless to form the piece de resistance in a winter storehouse. The engineers then resumed their work, exchanging comments of admiration.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"If you do not marry me I shall hang myself," exclaimed a lovelorn Denver young man.

"Well, if you do, please go down a block," was the cheerful response, "for I heard papa say he did not want you to hang around here."—Denver Times.

Mecklenburg.

Doberan. Es wird geplant, die Seebäder Heiligendamm, Brunshaupten und Arendsee durch eine elektrische Bahn zu verbinden. Auch würde dann die Bahn Doberan-Heiligendamm elektrisch betrieben werden. Wegen der Anlage steht die Baltische Elektrizitätsgesellschaft in Kiel mit der Großherzoglichen General-Eisenbahndirektion in Unterhandlung. Es soll über das Projekt noch dem diesjährigen Landtage eine Vorlage zugehen. Dieselbe Gesellschaft beabsichtigt auch, hier elektrische Straßenbeleuchtung einzuführen.

Oldenburg.

Nordermoor. Hier erstach während des Tanzes ein junger Knecht den Posthilfsboten Cordes aus Elsfleth; ein Anderer erhielt von demselben einen Messerstich in die rechte Brustgegend, ein Dritter in den linken Unterarm, als sie den Knecht beruhigen wollten. Der Thäter wurde in das hiesige Gefängniß eingeliefert.

Braunschweig.

Wolfenbüttel. In tiefe Trauer ist die Familie des Oekonomen Schmidt im nahen Dettum versetzt worden. Bei Abschlachtung einer Kuh, welche milzbrandverdächtig war, half der Sohn Schmidts und zog sich eine kleine unbedeutend erscheinende Wunde am Finger zu. Es trat Blutvergiftung ein, welche alsbald den Tod des jungen Mannes nach sich zog.

Großherzogthum Hessen.

Darmstadt. Der auch hier recht fühlbare Mangel an kleineren Wohnungen, der durch den Bauverein für Arbeiterwohnungen nicht ganz hat behoben werden können, veranlaßt die Bürgermeisterei, den Bau von Wohnungen für Arbeiter und den Mittelstand in Aussicht zu nehmen. Es werden Informationen in solchen Städten eingeholt, in denen in dieser Hinsicht bereits praktische Erfahrungen gemacht wurden.

Mainz. Die Armen von Mainz sind bei der Eröffnung des Schlacht- und Viehhofs in anerkennenswerther Weise bedacht worden, indem jede Familie drei Pfund besten Fleisches empfing.—Ueberrascht hat die plötzliche Kündigung des Directors des neuen Schlacht- und Viehhofs, Herrn Schilling.

Bayern.

München. Die Hauptrechnung über die Lokalarmenpflege Münchens für das Jahr 1897 hat folgenden Abschluß: 1,287,875 Mark 94 Pfennige Einnahmen, 1,282,982 Mark 66 Pfennige Ausgaben, so daß sich ein Aktivrest von 4893 Mark 28 Pfennige ergibt.—Das Landgericht verurtheilte einen Bauarbeiter, der auf Geheiß seines Meisters einen anderen Bauarbeiter vom 4. Stockwerke eines Neubaues hinabzuwerfen versuchte, zu einem Monat Gefängniß.—Für die bayerischen Jäger-Bataillone ist nun die versuchsweise Einführung des Schneeschuhlaufens in Aussicht genommen. Jedes Bataillon erhält zunächst 12 Schneeschuhe norwegischer Konstruktion, mit deren Beschaffung das Bekleidungsamt des 1. Armeekorps betraut ist.

Augsburg. Der vom Militär entlassene Joseph Maier tödtete nach voraufgegangenem Streit seine Geliebte durch zwei Revolverschüsse; sich selbst verletzte er durch einen Stich in die Herzgegend lebensgefährlich. Eifersucht ist das Motiv der That; seine Geliebte war ohne sein Wissen zur Kirchweih gegangen.

Holzkirchen. Die hiesige Marktgemeinde-Verwaltung beabsichtigt die Anlage einer Wasserleitung in größerer Ausdehnung, wozu die in der Gemeinde Wiesen gelegenen Quellen der Gaißach und des Kaltenbaches gewonnen werden sollen.

Passau. Ein merkwürdiges Gerücht war dieser Tage hier aufgetaucht. Unser Magistrat, so raunten sich die Leute schaudernd in die Ohren, sei der Familie Bismarck einen erheblichen Betrag schuldig, dessen Rückzahlung ihm nicht möglich sei. Das unsinnige Gerücht hat eine Reihe von Dienstmädchen und andere kleine Leute veranlaßt, bestürzte Nachfrage zu halten, ob ihre—Spareinlagen verloren seien.

Biggest, Best Stocked Stove Store in City--

One visit here will show how great a stove line we carry, from cylinder and parlor stoves to ranges of every size and pattern. Maker's warrant and ours means double safety for you. Lowest prices on record. Cylinders, $2.95 up. Self-feeding parlor stove, $7.49 up. The "Portland" Range stands at head of range list—but we've a score of other reliable sorts.

Great Push in Combination Desks.

We never do things by halves. This sale of 30 elegant combination desks and book-cases is but an instance. Solid oak, solid trimmings, late patterns, also. $12 one for $8.75. $25 and $28 ones at $15. A $30 one for $20. $35 one for $18. $40 one at $25—we really feel there's no line at such figures in all New Jersey. Special in folding beds, $7.75. Just ten left—were $10.

Bedroom Suits at "Snap" Figures.

—$25 ones, $14.95. Solid Cherry Suits at $25—elaborate design Oak Suits for $40—were $55. One of our star departments is this bedroom suit line. The Parlor Suit floor has 100 styles—all new—$16.50 up.

Carpets at Right Prices

—right because below the mark of any competitor—and because on new 1898 weaves—shown in a light, airy 200 ft. floor. Heavy Ingrains, 39c. yard. Body Brussels, 90c. yard. All-wool Ingrains, 65c. yard. Moquettes, 90c. yard.

MASTER'S SALE IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY. Between Mary A. Day, complainant, and William F. Lang, et ux., defendant—Fi fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House in Somerville, county of Somerset and State of New Jersey, on at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all those tracts or parcels of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being partly in the township of Warren, in the county of Somerset and State of New Jersey, and partly in the township of New Providence, in the county of Union and state of New Jersey, bounded as follows: The first tract being Lot No. 3 in the division of the real estate late of George Townley, deceased, and begins in the road running from the Union village to Thomas Coun's, at a corner of (No. 2) Enos B. Townley's lot, at a point sixteen links westerly from the centre of the well, and four links southerly from the corner of (No. 1) the Hadly lot; thence in said road north forty-four degrees west on a line of the Widow Townley's dower lot, four chains and sixty six links; thence on a line of (No. 4) formerly belonging to Benjamin Moore, north fifty-five and a half degrees west, two chains and thirty links; thence on the same, in said road, north forty-seven and a half degrees west, passing close to the northeast side of two hickory trees near the river, six chains and fifty-five links to the bank of the Passaic river; thence up the bank of said river south sixty-seven degrees west three chains and seventy links to Lines Tucker's corner; thence on his line south one degree east fifteen chains and thirty links to a stake at a corner of said Enos B. Townley's lot; thence on his line north fifty-nine and three-quarter degrees east, a hickory tree being in this line seven chains and forty-four links from a stake in said Tucker's line, fourteen chains and eighty-five links to the place of beginning. Containing twelve acres and twenty-eight hundredths of an acre of land, strict measure. Being the same premises conveyed by Squire Parrot and wife and Daniel Runyon and wife to Christopher Zuckschwert by deed dated July 5th, 1845, and recorded in the Clerk's office in the county of Somerset, July 14th, 1845, in Book B. 2, page 549, etc.

The Second Tract, being lot No. 2, of the division of the farm late of George Townley, deceased, and which was set off in the said division to the said Enos B. Townley and begins in the road leading from Union Village to Thomas Coun's, opposite the middle of the well and sixteen links distant from the centre of it; thence running south fifty-nine and three-quarter degrees west, a hickory tree being in this line, fourteen chains and eighty-five links to a stake in Lines Tucker's line; thence on his line south one degree east eight chains and seven links to a basswood tree in William Titus' line; thence on his line and others, north eighty-eight degrees east twenty-seven chains and seventy links to a stake in said road; thence in said road on the line of lot (No. 1) set off to the heirs of Johanna Headley, north fifty-four and a half degrees west five chains; thence north forty-five degrees west six chains; thence still in said road on the line of lot (No. 1) north forty-two and a half degrees west nine chains and eighty links to the place of beginning. Containing twenty-five acres of land, strict measure. Being the same premises conveyed to Christopher Zuchschwert by Enos B. Townley by deed dated March 28th, 1846, and recorded in the Clerk's office of Somerset county, in Book O. N. 2, pages 160, etc.,

The Third Tract, situate, lying and being in the townships of Warren and New Providence, in the counties of Union and Somerset, beginning in the middle of the road leading from Union Village at a corner of lands of David A. French, and from thence running south eighty-eight degrees, west two chains and fifty links to the middle of the mouth of the road leading to Townley's bridge over the Passaic River, at a corner of lands of said Christopher Zuckshwert; thence on his line (2) north forty-five and a half degrees west in said last named road five chains; thence (3) north forty-five degrees west six chains; thence (4) north forty-two and a half degrees west nine chains and eighty-four links to a point sixteen links distant from the middle of the well; thence (5) in the middle of said road and still on said line late of said Zuckschwert north forty-four degrees west four chains and sixty-two links to a point at a corner of a lot formerly of Benjamin Moore's in the road opposite the middle of the cider house; thence on his line to the middle of the cider house north thirty-eight and a half degrees east ninety-one links to the eastermost side of said cider house; thence (7) north sixty-two and a half degrees east, passing close to the north side of an Elm tree, marked, on this lot, twenty-one chains and fifty-two links on a line formerly of said Moore to line now or formerly of Ezra Wilcox, at a small birch bush; thence on lines now or formerly of said Wilcox and said David A. French, south two degrees east twenty-eight chains and thirty-four links to the place of beginning. Containing thirty-two and one-tenth acres of land. Being the same premises conveyed by Squier Parrot and wife, and Daniel Runyon and wife to Christopher Zuckschwert, by deed dated May 17th, 1850, and recorded in the Clerk's office of the county of Somerset in Book R, No. 2, pages 264, etc.

The Fourth Tract, situate in Warren township in the county of Somerset. Beginning at a stone at the edge of the Passaic River at a corner of a lot, now or formerly, belonging to Squier Parrot, and Daniel Runyon, on corner of Essex, now Union and Somerset; thence south nine degrees east on the line of said Parrot and Runyon, the Headley woodlot, and E. G. BREAKING THE NEWS

"Do you think he'll take it very badly, Nora?"

Nora Helmsley shrugged her shoulders.

"My dear Betty, you ought to know more about Mr. Markham's powers of endurance than I."

"But what do you think he'll do? What do you suppose"——

"Why waste our time in supposition? He'll be here most likely this afternoon, and you will be able to judge for yourself."

Betty Oakhurst sprang to her feet.

"Ted is coming here this afternoon? Why on earth didn't you tell me before?" And she figetted nervously with her hat before the glass as she spoke.

"But you knew. Betty, where are you going?"

"Anywhere out of this," cried the girl, laughing nervously as she stooped to kiss her friend.

Nora, however, caught her arm. "Nonsense, Betty! You'd much better tell him straight out now and get it over. It will be ever so much more awkward for you if the news reaches him from the outside."

"I don't see that at all," returned Betty quietly, as she drew away from her companion. "I am sure that if—if you"——

She paused tentatively.

"You don't mean to say that you expect me to tell Ted Markham that you've jilted him?"

"I certainly don't expect you to put it in that way," replied Miss Oakhurst, with a little laugh; "but I am quite certain that you would explain it to the poor fellow much better than any one else."

"Explain!" exclaimed Nora, impatiently. "I don't know that there's anything to explain, except that you've put yourself and me in a most ridiculous position."

"Nora!"

"I wish I'd never had anything to do with it. I never felt so uncomfortable in my life as I have done since you dragged me into this precious scheme of yours."

"Poor old Nora!" murmured Betty sympathetically, while she cast furtive glances at the clock.

"You came here and shed any number of tears, declared that you adored Ted Markham; that your father wouldn't hear of an engagement, but that if you only had a little time before you, you were sure everything would come right."

"So it has," remarked Betty, sotto voce. "It's only a question of point of view."

Nora flashed an indignant look at her.

"I think you might be serious now, and at least pretend that you're ashamed of yourself. You begged me to help you to get my aunt to ask him here, to act as screen in fact, so that your people might imagine it was all over and that you had both changed your minds, and now—now"——

The sound of a bell broke in upon Miss Helmsley's eloquence, and Betty caught up her gloves.

"I'm awfully sorry, Nora. Abuse me as much as you like. Goodby!"

And before Nora could stop her she had darted through the door and was on her way downstairs. She let her go. After all, it never was of any use to argue with Betty; she was one of those delightfully irresponsible creatures who always manage to shift the blame of their shortcomings on to other people's shoulders, and whom no one—no man, at any rate—ever dreams of judging by ordinary standards. Nora wondered, as she stood there idly looking into the street, how she could ever have been foolish enough to take Betty's love troubles seriously.

Meantime, that same folly of hers was going to bear some very unpalatable fruit. In less than ten minutes young Markham would be there. He had arranged to call for Miss Helmsley and her aunt, Lady Hewitt, to escort them to an afternoon concert. The elder lady had declared at luncheon that the weather was far too depressing for it not to be madness to risk the probability of a further fall of one's moral barometer by a couple of hours of orchestral music, and that Nora must give him some tea and her excuses.

Nora was conscious that this was a neat pretext for giving the young man the chance of a tete-a-tete with herself. Lady Hewitt was too indolent, naturally, not to be heartily weary of her duties as chaperon to her niece. An attractive heiress was a responsibility little to her taste, and the girl felt that, ineligible as most mothers and responsible people would have termed Ted Markham, with his post in the Foreign Office and his meagre personal fortune, Lady Hewitt would open her arms to him gladly if he would but relieve her of her onerous duties of watchdog, and would declare that Nora had money enough for them both.

Nora sighed as she stood at the window. It was a topsy-turvy world, and the wrong people were always being thrown together. If only——

"Am I disturbing you? I was told to come in here."

Nora started, and the color rushed to her face.

"Oh, I hadn't heard you come in! Do sit down. Aunt isn't well. I am so sorry you should have had the trouble of calling for nothing, but she hoped to be able to go until the last moment. Won't you let me give you some tea?" She spoke with nervous hurry, scarcely pausing for an answer.

Ted Markham took the chair she offered him, and listened in silence while she rattled on. Suddenly she stopped, conscious of his fixed glance.

"Is anything the matter?" she asked, in a slightly alarmed voice. It was surely not possible that he could already have learned Betty's treachery.

"Yes. We can't go on like this, Miss Helmsley!"

"No?" Nora felt the color go out of her face.

"It isn't fair to you, and besides I—things have changed"——

"You mean that Betty"——

"Miss Oakhurst is going to be married." Nora gasped, but did not speak. "She is engaged to Lord Barthorpe I met Lady Oakhurst just now, and she was overflowing with loving-kindness to the world in general."

"Betty has behaved abominably!" put in Nora, indignantly.

Ted Markham smiled.

"I think, on the contrary, that she has shown remarkably good sense. I am going to leave London; I really came this afternoon to say goodby."

Nora bit her lips.

"I am very sorry," she began hesitatingly. "I am afraid I was rather to blame, but I thought Betty really cared, and"——

She left the sentence unfinished. Ted Markham's demeanor puzzled her. he was quite white, and there was a look in his eyes which troubled her. What was there in her fluffy-haired, blue-eyed little friend to move a man so? That her companion had taken some great resolution, and that a singularly difficult one, it was easy enough to perceive.

"Are you going to be away long?" she askeu awkwardly. "I mean, are you going far?"

"I think of going to have a look at the antipodes. My father has some interest, and I hope to get sent off to Melbourne."

"But haven't you made up your mind rather hurriedly?" she objected timidly.

"Hurriedly? Why, I put things in train weeks ago!"

"Weeks ago!" she exclaimed. "But Betty's engagement is quite fresh. Did you suspect"——

"I suspected nothing. I knew"——

"You knew!" she exclaimed indignantly. "Then why didn't you speak? Why didn't you tell me?"

"Tell you!" She stared at him, his tone was so vehement. "Oh, about Betty, you mean!"

"Of course. What else could I mean?"

"Nothing, of course"——

"Really, I don't understand you."

He laughed drearily as he rose. "No, I must not explain. Goodby."

She looked up at him with startled eyes.

"You are too hard on Betty. She"—

"On Betty? Don't you know that I haven't thought of her for weeks—that I found out long ago that we had made a mistake?"

"Then why are you going?"

She managed to keep her eyes upon his face, though her cheeks burned and she felt almost choked.

"Don't you know that I am almost a pauper?" he said bitterly, as he turned away.

Nora took a step after him. "Are you going," she asked in a trembling voice, "because you want to make your fortune, or because—because I am too rich?"

"Nora!"

She covered her face with her hands.

"Oh, if you were not in love with Betty, didn't you see—didn't you guess weeks ago"——

The voices of the chaperons were loud in condemnation when the engagement was announced, and the mothers of younger sons and ungilt titles declared that Lady Hewitt had allowed her niece to throw herself away; while Betty Oakhurst shook her pretty head and reflected sadly that men were fickle creatures and that feminine friendship was but a broken reed.—London World.

JOE JEFFERSON'S LONG SNOOZE.

There Was No Pretence and the Resonant Snore Was Genuine.

While he was playing "Rip Van Winkle" at Chicago Jefferson once went to the theatre very much exhausted by a long day's fishing on the lake. As the curtain rose on the third act it disclosed the white haired Rip still deep in his twenty-years' nap. Five, ten, twenty minutes passed and he did not awaken. The audience began to get impatient and the prompter uneasy.

The great actor doubtless knew what he was about, but this was carrying the realistic business too far. The fact was that all this time Jefferson was really sleeping the sleep of the just, or rather of the fisherman who had sat eight hours in the sun. Finally the gallery became uproarious, and one of the "gods" wanted to know if there was going to be "nineteen years more of this snooze business."

At this point Jefferson began to snore. This decided the prompter, who opened a small trap beneath the stage and began to prod Rip from below. The fagged comedian fumbled in his pocket for an imaginary railway ticket, and muttered drowsily, "Going right through, 'ductor."

At this entirely new reading the audience was transfixed with amazement, when all at once Jefferson sat up with a loud shriek, evidently in agony. The exasperated prompter had jabbed him with a pin. Consciousness of the situation came to him and the play went on after that with a rush.—Philadelphia Post.

How It Happened.

The house surgeon of a London hospital was attending to the injuries of a poor woman whose arm had been severely bitten. As he was dressing the wound, he said: "I can not make out what sort of a creature bit you. This is too small for a horse's bite and too large for a dog's." "Oh, sir," replied the patient, "it wasn't an ankimal it was another lydy."—Washington.

THE CROSS OF LILIES.

"You shall not go—I would rather see you dead at my feet."

"I shall go, father—some day." And so she went out of his life.

He was an old Puritan—grim, ascetic, dead to all pleasure and amusement. There were but three things for him: his Bible, his sword and his daughter. He had laid aside his sword, for he was growing old; but the Book was always by him, and he loved to interpret it in his own harsh fashion. And then his daughter—but she had gone.

She was young and beautiful, panting for all that makes life sweet and grateful—for love, for triumph, for the applause of thousands. She had resolved to be an actress and to have them all. She was stifled in that ugly, square house in Scotland. So one day she disappeared, and James Gordon was left alone with his Bible.

Meanwhile Ruth Gordon's name was on everyone's lips in London. Her beauty had brought her all she had ever dreamed, more than she could ever have hoped. It was the last night of the burlesque wherein she made herself famous. The house was crowded, and she excelled herself in every song and dance. At the close of the piece the stage was covered with bouquets from admirers—from men she knew and from men who wished to be known to her.

Then, when the curtain had gone down for the last time, she picked up one or two of the offerings and went off to the dressing room. One she held in her hand had attracted her by its uncommon shape and condition. It was a half-faded cross of white lillies. She threw it contemptuously on her table, and pressed the other—the gift of a young earl—to her lips.

"Who dared send me that shabby thing?" she said to her dresser, and then picked it up, from sheer curiosity to see the name of the man who had ventured to offer it. She dropped it, and uttered a cry of surprise and pleasure, then picked it up again and kissed it passionately. The label read: "To my daughter. Come home. I am angry no more." Truly it was the happiest day of her life—a triumph and reconciliation.

She left for Scotland that night. How slowly the train crawled on through the darkness! She could not sleep, and she watched the lighted towns go by one by one until the dawn.

She drew near her home, and the scenery became more familiar. Every spot she passed was bright with memories of childhood. The train slowed down and stopped. She got out, left her luggage at the station, and walked towards her home.

In ten minutes she had reached the house. It looked more cold and grey than ever after the brilliance of London. She hammered at the door, waited for a minute or two, and then struck it again. Presently faint shuffling footsteps sounded in the hall, the door opened slowly, and Jeannie, the old servant, confronted her. She threw herself on the old woman's neck and kissed her

SPORTING.

WHIST

The "Big Four" whist team of the Park Club, having won all the honors they care to, have decided to withdraw from future contests. The team has had a memorable career and won many notable victories. The "Little Four," recently organized, is starting in at a good pace. They have already won the two matches played and under the coaching of the "Big Four," there are no reasons why they should not achieve fame and glory for the famous Park Club.

GOLF.

There will be playing on the Park Golf Club course this afternoon, and a tea will be given in the clubhouse. While the good weather prevails there will be playing on the links every week.

JAMES KELLEY'S DEATH

head had not been caused by a bullet. It was only a flesh wound at the scalp, did not penetrate to the skull and was ragged and apparently caused by the man having a hard, backward fall and striking on a nail or sharp edge of something. The skull was not fractured and the brain was in good condition except evidences of concussion, as if from a fall.

When the body was opened, however, the entire aspect was changed by what was revealed. The stomach and intestines were found to contain a quantity of arsenical poison, paris green, sufficient to kill several men. The County Physician at once expressed a belief that Kelley had taken the poison with suicidal intent and had crawled into the freight car to die, sustaining the injury to his head by falling while doing so.

Kelley's funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house and 2:30 from St. Mary's church.

Col. Scott's Sickness.

Several articles published in the Plainfield papers since the begining of Colonel Scott's illness have given the impression that the comfort which he enjoys as a private patient in a private room at the hospital are due to the kindness of a well-known gentleman of the borough. Since these publications have caused such widespread misapprehension of the fact, it is proper to state that, though much kindness has been shown, and invitations have been received from many sources, Col. Scott occupied his present quarters as the "guest" of no one, and that whatever bills he may make while there, will be paid by himself.

A friend of Colonel Scott.

—A meeting to which all are invited will be held at the W. C. T. U. rooms this evening Philip Van-Arsdale will conduct the meeting.

Debated a Big Question.

The members of the Plainfield Law Debating Society and the North Plainfield High School debaters met last night and debated the question whether the United States ought to annex the Phillipine Islands or not. Prof. Wightman, Attorney Francis J. Blatz and Justice H. S. Thomas were the judges and decided in the affirmative that the Phillipines should be annexed. The North Plainfield High school had the affirmative.

Want to Be Red Men.

At the meeting of Miantonomoh Tribe last night nine applications for membership were made. Ten were proposed last night, so there are now nineteen already secured for adoption the first of next month. At that meeting the entire board of great chiefs will be invited to be present. A committee of three, consisting of Past Sachems Westphal, Allen and Johnson, were appointed to arrange for a collation.

BATCH OF PLUCKY TELEGRAPHERS.

During the whole of the action of May 1, when Cavite was bombarded by the American squadron, the staff of the cable company, from the superintendent downward, were at their posts, although their office was situated only 200 yards from a Spanish battery, which several times opened on the American ships. Fortunately, however, the latter did not reply. Having completed the destruction of the Spanish fleet and Cavite arsenal, the American Commodore lined his ships up in front of Manila, with their guns trained on every shore battery, with the evident intention of commencing a bombardment should a single shot be fired on his squadron from any of the batteries. The operators of the cable company were all this time in their office, transmitting the telegrams which were handed to them, as if nothing unusal was happening. On the evening of May 2 the Hong Kong cable became interrupted. Two of the servants of the company immediately proceded to the cable house on the beach, which was within a stone's throw of a battery, then threatened by the American guns, and, having set up a testing apparatus, found that the cable was broken about ten miles from shore. From that time to the end of the war the telegraphers stood by their office day and night, although the building was repeatedly struck and pierced by bullets from the insurgent forces, who had been maintaining a determined attack on the Spanish intrenchments in the neighborhood. Altthough they were given by the directors permission to retire to a place of safety, they never left their posts.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

FANNY KEMBLE'S DRIVER.

She Paid His Extraordinary Charge and Continued to Employ Him.

A story is told of Fannie Kemble, whose favorite summer resort was Lenox, that on her first season there she employed a self-respecting villager, who had a comfortable turnout, to drive her about. He, feeling it to be his duty to make the drive as entertaining as possible, began to call her attention to the beauty of the scenery—which she wished to enjoy undisturbed—and to tell her who lived in certain houses as they passed along, until finally Mrs. Kemble, being unable to stand it any longer, said, in the high-tragedy manner somewhat peculiar to her: "I have engaged you to drive for me, sir, not to talk."

The driver ceased talking, pursed up his lips, and in all their subsequent drives his only remarks were such as he found necessary to address to his horses. At the end of the season he handed in his bill for the summer services. Running her eye down its awkward columns, she paused at an item she didnt understand.

"What is this, sir? I cannot understand it?"

"With equal gravity he replied: "Sass. I don't often take it, but when I do I charge."

She paid the bill without comment, and continued to employ the same driver during many summers she spent there.—Chicago Tribune.

"This train makes a good many stops."

"Yes. It is a milk train. It is probably stopping for water."

Final Decree of Divorce.

A final decree of divorce has been signed by Chancellor McGill in the case of Miller against Miller granting the prayer of the petitioner, Lena Miller, for separation from her husband on the grounds of desertion. William Newcorn was solicitor for the petitioner.

HUMAN HAIR HARVEST.

Regular Crop is Grown To Supply Switches and Wigs.

If the tresses you wear did not grow on your head they probably are imported. The United States buys more than $2,000,000 worth of hair each year, much of which is used in the manufacture of wigs and switches to supplement the cranial hirsute adornment of those whose locks are scanty.

The popular idea is that the material for switches is supplied by poor girls who, to raise a mortgage or pay the rent or something of the sort, do as the girls in story books, and go to a hairdresser and sacrifice their magnificent "crowning glories" for their family. It is true that some hair is obtained in this way, but the supply is too inconstant to be depended upon.

There is a regular hair harvest, just as regular as the wheat crop. In fact, it is more to be depended upon, drought does not affect it. This hair comes from Switzerland, Germany and the French provinces. There is a human hair market in the lower Pyrenees held every year. Scores of hair traders walk up and down the village streets, their shears dangling from their belts, and examine the braids which the peasant girls let down for their inspection. If a bargain is struck the hair is cut and the money paid on the spot.

These girls have fine hair and can raise more than one crop. A woman's hair may grow to the length of six feet. A single hair will bear up a weight of four ounces without breaking, but the hair thus heavily tried must be dark brown, for blonde hair will break under a strain of two and a half ounces.

The hair that is cut is the best. Dealers can easily tell whether the locks offered them have been cut off or combed out. They do this by rubbing the hairs through their fingers. If the hair has been cut from the head and has not been misplaced it remains in the original position. If it has been pulled or combed out and put together regardless of the direction in which it grew, one portion will slip to the right and another to the left. It does this because the jagged edges catch upon each other and pull in opposite directions.—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Largest Overcoat and Suit Sale

OF THE SEASON will begin tomorrow, SATURDAY,

November 12, 1898, at 8 a. m.

Do not miss the opportunity of a life time and don't buy a dollar's worth of clothing anywhere else until you have been here first of all. Everything will sell fast so come at once and don't delay. Secure yourself with an overcoat or a suit at this great sale at one third its value. Be on hand early and get the first pick.

You can see more clothing at this sale and there is more clothing sold here than in any two stores in Plainfield, and is it any wonder? When you can get the finest goods here at one third the prices you have to pay in any store in the world for goods far inferior to the clothing sold at this sale.

We have been packed last Saturday, but we expect to be jammed this Saturday, and hundreds of pleased buyers from all over Plainfield and surrounding country have carried home some of the biggest bargains ever heard in this entire sale.

There is over $25 000 worth of fine clothing here in our store of the late New York failures, and we can show you three times as many suits, overcoats and trousers than any store in this city. It will all be sold immediately at less than one third of its first cost in order to raise the money. Keep this price list, bring it with you and ask for any of these bargains, and remember there are others more besides.

Men's mixed cassimere suits, $3.75 worth $10.00. Silk-roll melton overcoats, $4.50 worth $12.50. Elegant silk lined melton overcoats at $5.25 worth $13 50, Cutaway diagonal dress suits, $7 25 worth $18 00. Finest silk worsted dress pants $2 50 worth $6 50. Double breasted cheviot dress suits at $5 90 worth $14 00. Youths' nobby straight cut suits, $5 75 worth $11.00. Men's hair lined, striped, wool pants at $1.50 worth $2 75.

Men's smooth serge, black and blue, double breasted, silk roll to the front at $8.40 worth $18 00.

Genuine carr melton overcoats, $7.25 worth $19 00.

Dawyer or Harriss' cassimere suits at $8 90 worth $18 00. Imported melton and covert cloth overcoats at $7 50 worth $16 75. Scotch cheviot sack suits at $4.50 worth $12 00. Boys' school suits at $1 60 worth $2 75. Childrens' suits, age 3 to 8 years, at $1.00 $1.25 and $1 50 worth double. Working pants, 75c.

Men's and boys' winter suits, overcoats, ulsters and reefers by the hundred. Suits, overcoats and pants as large as 50 inches in size.

Goods and prices tell the story. Come! There will be a big demand for these bargains and everything will go rapidly, be very cautious so that you get to the right place.

Sale every day until futher notice.

Dressed Chickens

There is nothing quite so good for dinner as chicken, is there? It is something of which we never tire. A tender juicy fowl, nicely browned, and a hungry man—well, they instantly become one. We pride ourselves on our dressed chickens. We would like to have your meat trade—and we think a plump dressed chicken would be a good introduction.

PRINCETON TIGER DOWNED OLD ELI.

Many Plainfielders Witnessed the Great Game.

SIXTEEN THOUSAND THERE.

THE GREATEST FOOTBALL GAME PLAYED IN JERSEY.

Charles Dupee Was a Substitute on the Yale Team But Did Not Get a Chance to Play—Plainfielders of Both Universities in the Cheering Squads—Princeton Won by a Score of 6 to 0.

(By a Staff Representates.)

Princeton, Nov. 14.—The Princeton Tiger is purring most melodiously today, for did not the stout sons of Old Nassau defeat their old rivals from Yale in the greatest football game of the season Saturday afternoon. All Princeton is jubilant. The game was positively exciting from start to finish and the sixteen thousand people, who witnessed the contest from the great stands that surround Brokaw Field, Princeton, yelled themselves hoarse over it. It was the greatest contest ever fought on the gridiron in Jersey and the deatils of the fight will furnish stories for the Princeton students for many moons.

Plainfield was well represented among the crowd. Among the body of Princeton students, a thousand strong, that cheered and sang all through the game, were Arthur W. Lederer, 1902, and Thomas D. Blair, '99, both of Plainfield. The other students from Plainfield, half a dozen in all, occupied seats in the eastern and southern stands. Orange and black was united in the eastern stand and predominated in the two end stands. The bonny blue of old Eli waved in the western stand with here and there at the ends a standard of Nassau. There was a score of old Princeton students who had come from Plainfield to root for their old college. In addition there were several hundred enthusiasts who wore the orange and black. They came from Plainfield by the way of New York, Elizabeth and New Brunswick.

On the side lines, where the followers of Yale congregated, there was Charles Dupee, of Plainfield, clad in his mole skins and ready to take McBride's place at full back should he be injured. Dupee, however, had no chance as the Yale full back stuck it out for the whole game. Raymond A. McGee, who was forced to give up his chances for left tackle on account of a game knee, was also noticed on the side lines watching the play. He came to Princeton with the 'varsity squad although in no shape to play.

Plainfield has for years sent many of her sons to Yale, and there were a number of them amongst the big crowd of Yale rooters who occupied the cheering section in the west stand. Then there was a goodly delegation of Yale graduates among whom S. St. John McCutchen figured prominently. Senator and Mrs. Charles A. Reed and the Senator's brother occupied seats on that stand. Charles H. Lyman sat near by.

Governor Voorhees sat on the east stand in the midst of a band of howling Princetonians. Former President Cleveland and his wife were on the same stand, all bedecked in orange and black.

Harry Woltman, 1902, of Princeton, entertained several members of the Bachelors Club, a Plainfield organization of which he was a member. They occupied seats on the south stand near a party of Somerville young people. Another party of young people from Plainfield who wore the blue, was chaperoned by Mrs. F. H. Andrews, of Central avenue.

Aside from the Yale men and their families, most of the Plainfield enthusiasts wore the colors of Old Nassau.

The game itself was well worth witnessing. The results were somewhat of a surprise to those who had followed the showing of both teams in other games. The veteran line of Princeton, from which so much was expected, fell before the determined rushes of the Yale backs. The Princeton line, however, held well on the kicks while the Princeton ends were down the field every time, a thing in which the Yale ends were lacking.

The sensational run of Poe's on which the touchdown was made showed that the Princeton coaches had prepared their charges to take advantage of every misplay of Eli's supporters. When Poe went down the field, the crowd broke into the wildest enthusiasm. Dignity was thrown to the winds and the Princeton rooters rose up in a body and let forth a yell, the echoes of which reached even to CLIMAX CLUB WINNERS.

Last Contest Held on the Grounds of the Climax Gun Club Saturday, But the Attendance Was Rather Poor.

Owing to the open season for game shooting, the attendance at the final tournament of the New Jersey Central Trap Shooters' League Saturday was not at large as the occasion deserves. Only two complete teams put in an appearance at the grounds of the Climax Gun Club, the Reservoir Club of New Brunswick having but three representatives and the Dunellen Club but four. Had either of these clubs put in full teams they would have had a chance to become owners of the handsome loving cup which had been presented for competition by the Peters' Cartridge Co., of Connecticut, through their Eastern representative, T. H. Keller. Previous to Saturday's shoot the Climax Club had scored three wins for the trophy, the Dunellen Club two and the Reservoir Club two. A win on Saturday for either would have tied the Climax Club and a shoot off would have been necessary. The win of Saturday now makes the Climax Club absolute owners of the trophy. The league did much toward exciting a new interest in trap shooting in this vicinity and has been the means of bringing the sportsmen of Union, Somerset and Middlesex counties together and it is hoped after the game season closes that the league will be revived. The first of a series of live bird tournaments will be held December 1st at New Brunswick by the Reservoir Gun Club.

Following is the score:

Peters' Cartridge Company trophy contest.

CLIMAX GUN CLUB, OF PLAINFIELD.

C. Smith	14
Keller, Jr.	16
Goodman	12
Darby	12
Swody	11
	69

BOUND BROOK GUN CLUB, OF BOUND BROOK.

Tingley	14
J. Zeglio	15
Hobart	13
Jackson	9
S. Terry	9
	60

DUNELLEN GUN CLUB, OF DUNELLEN.

Apgar	19
Manning	16
Brantingham	16
Cramer	20

RESERVOIR GUN CLUB, OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

Bissett	17
Belloff	12
H. B. Smith	18
	40

Regular club shoot of Climax Gun Club: Brantingham, 23; Keller, 22; C. Smith, 21; Manning, 20; Swody, 19; Goodman, 18; D. Darby, 16; Keller, Jr., 16; O. Terry, 15; C. Louber, 13.

The low scores in the trophy contest are accounted for, as the affair was not ended until it was too dark to see the targets. Consequently the last ten birds shot at by each man was hardly a test of skill.

DEATH OF MRS. SARGEANT.

Died at Her Home in Brooklyn—Was Well-Known in Plainfield

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Sargeant, of 455 Putnam avenue, Brooklyn, aged 71 years, died Saturday morning after a two weeks' illness of pnumonia. Mrs. Sargeant was quite well-known in Plainfield, as she frequently visited the homes of relatives in this city. She was an aunt to Chief T. O. Doane, also to J. Hervey, Charles E., and John H. Doane. She was also a cousin to Mrs. A. L. Force and a niece to Mrs. Sarah Bradshaw, of the borough. Her funeral will take place this evening at 7:30 from her late residence, and the interment will be private. Mrs. Sargeant had been a great sufferer for many years with asthma. She was a devout Christian mother, willing and fully prepared to change her earthly home for the glorious one that awaited her in Heaven.

Special Services in Warren Chapel.

There will be special meetings in Warren chapel every evening, except Saturday, of this week, at 8 o'clock. The speakers will be: Monday—Rev. H. W. Hathaway, of Elizabeth; Tuesday—Rev. G. W. Gardner, of Grace M. E. church; Wednesday—Rev. G. K. Newell, of Hope chapel; Thursday—Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., of Crescent avenue church; Friday—Rev. G. K. Newell, of Hope chapel. All are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

An Illustrated Lecture.

An illustrated lecture entitled "With the Workers in France," will be delivered by Mrs. Mitchell Tyng, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Saturday evening. The lecture will be given under the auspices of the McAll Auxiliary and will tell of the work of that organization.

Democratic Association to Meet.

The next meeting of the Democratic Association will be held Thursday evening of this week. Important business in relation to the approaching city election will be transacted.

COLLEGE Y M C.A. WORK

FRED H. ANDREWS DESCRIBES IT AT TRINITY CHURCH.

Opening of the Week of Prayer Instituted by the Y. M. C. A.—Mr. Andrews' Talk Was Very Interesting.

An interesting service was held at Trinity Reformed church last evening in behalf of the young men and the week of prayer for them as instituted by the Y. M. C. A. This is an annual affair and usually services of a similar nature are held in all of the local churches.

Councilman Fred H. Andrews was present at Trinity church and made a short address along the line of work being carried on for young men in the preparatory schools and colleges of this country. The devotional exercises were in charge of the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., and a feature was the special music given by a double male quartette consisting of F. S. Runyon, Thomas A. Cuming, A. J. Moore, H J. Martin, H. J. Martin, Jr., Nelson Runyon, Charles Hummer and L. A. Hummer. The singing was thoroughly enjoyed as was also an offertory solo by Mr. Cuming.

Pastor Schenck read as the Scripture lesson the parable of the young man and the vineyard, very appropriate to the occasion, and after offering prayer, he made a few remarks on the subject of "Young Men's Ideals," as based on the 16th chapter of Psalms and eighth verse.

Following Mr. Schenck's remarks, Mr. Andrews was introduced. During the past six years Mr. Andrews has held the position of State secretary of the work for college and preparatory school students and is well informed on the subject and work. Today there are between five and six hundred Y. M. C. A. Associations among these colleges and smaller schools from Maine to Washington. Mr. Andrews spoke of the work being carried on in Princeton College, how committees from the Y. M. C. A. would make it a point to see the freshmen that enter college each year and to secure their interest in Christian work. He spoke of the four places in this country where annual conferences are held for college men, namely: Asheville, S. C.; the Pacific slope, Lake Geneva, Wis.; and Northfield, Mass., and he spoke of the great work accomplished at these places every year. He spoke of some young men in the west who rode in a cattle train two days and one night to attend one of these conferences. In conclusion he spoke of the work being carried on in foreign fields, and how at one conference in India there were 1,230 students present. He spoke of the World's conference at Northfield, when twenty-six countries were represented. In the opinion of Mr. Andrews he thinks the world is getting better, and he made an earnest appeal to the young men present to accept of Jesus Christ as their King and Savior.

Promoted in His Work.

C. E. Ball and family, of North avenue, remove to Dover, Morris county, tomorrow. They have a host of friends in Plainfield who are sorry to learn of their removal. Mr. Ball has recently been promoted by the Prudential Insurance Company, as superintendent for the Dover district. The Press compliments Mr. Ball on his appointment and the Prudential on their selection of so worthy a person.

A Sacred Concert.

The choir of the First Baptist church, under the direction of E. J. Fitzhugh, will at an early date give a sacred concert and Mendelssohn's "Athalie" will be given in full. The work comprises several beautiful solos and choruses. The choir will be augmented for the production. The concert will be given some evening during the week at the First Baptist church, and the date will be announced later.

Interesting Men's Meeting.

The Sunday evening men's meetings at the Seventh-Day Baptist church were resumed last evening. A special effort will be made this year to have them unusually interesting. They will be for men of all denominations. Last evening Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis gave a very interesting talk on "Higher Education for Business Men." Despite the fact that the evening was an unpleasant one, there was a good attendance.

Organ Stopped Suddenly.

The self-control of the members of Grace P. E. church was well shown yesterday morning. In the midst of the Te Deum, the electric motor got out of order and the organ suddenly become silent. The choir, without a break, continued to sing and finished the piece as well as though the organ had accompanied them all the way through.

—Queen City Lodge, I. O. O. F., will hold its regular meeting this evening.

HORSE CAUSES TROUBLE.

MR. HETFIELD SAYS TENEYCK DROVE IT TOO HARD.

TenEyck Borrowed Animal to Move Some Household Goods—Went to Irvington and Returned During the Evening.

Oscar TenEyck borrowed a horse belonging to Hetfield & Gallop Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Mr. Hetfield says he only borrowed it for an hour. Twelve hours later Mr. Hetfield saw the horse hitched to a broken truck on East Front street near Caspar's Hotel. The driver, he says, was drunk. This morning, the driver was held accountable in the City Court.

This morning Oscar TenEyck was arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly. William G. DeMeza appeared as his counsel and entered a plea of not guilty. His side of the affair was not heard. Mr. Hetfield, however, related to the court what the trouble was.

According to Mr. Hetfield's story, TenEyck came to him early Saturday morning and asked the loan of a horse for an hour as he wanted to move his goods and chattels. The colored man had been in the employ of the firm. Mr. Hetfield told him that he might have the horse and there would be no charge. At 9 o'clock he came after the horse and put it to one of Carey's trucks. Then, Mr. Hetfield says, he drove clear over to Irvington after some household goods. He returned during the evening and the truck broke down on East Front street blocking the trolley tracks. It was necessary to unhitch the horse and lead him home and run the truck into a neighboring alley.

According to the story of Mr. Hetfield, TenEyck was drunk while the horse was dripping with sweat as if he had been driven very hard. Mr. Hetfield told the circumstances to Patrolman Totten who arrested TenEyck and locked him up in the city jail for the night.

As the witnesses for the complainant were not present, the Judge set the case down for trial Saturday morning.

FUNERAL OF C. F. WALZ.

Six of His Young Companions Acted as Pall Bearers.

The funeral of Charles Francis Walz was held yesterday afternoon at the home of his parents on LaGrande avenue. The attendance was large, many of his young friends being present. Rev. Dr. Richards officiated and made the remarks, and Rev. G. Kennedy Newall offered the prayer.

The choir from the Crescent Avenue church rendered two hymns effectively, "O Mother Dear, Jerusalem," and "For All Thy Saints." The pall bearers were six young men, all of whom were intimately acquainted with the deceased. They were Morris Dumont, Carroll L. Runyon, Van R. Schuyler, Henry Leal, Edward Kline and Stanley Hunter. Interment was in Hillside.

DEATH OF ISAAC COLTHAR.

Isaac Colthar, of Grandview avenue, one of Somerset county's oldest and highly respected citizens, died at his home at 4 o'clock yesterday morning in the eightieth year of his age. Death was due to consumption, and Mr. Colthar had been a sufferer for a long time. He was born near Martinville, and for a great many years followed the trade of carpenter. For a number of years past he has lived a life of retirement, partially on account of his illness. He was a Christian man and always was considered upright and fair in all his dealings. He leaves two daughters and one son. Notice of funeral will be given later.

Little Anna McKenna Dead.

This morning at 3 o'clock occurred the death of Anna McKenna, six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McKenna, of 198 Grove street. The little one had been ill for some time and death was not wholly unexpected. The parents have the sympathy of a host of friends in their bereavement. Announcement of the funeral services will be made later.

Offering for Missions.

The yearly offering for the American Baptist Home Mission Society will be taken at the First Baptist church next Sunday morning. An address will be delivered by Gen. T. J. Morgan, who was associated with ex-President Harrison in the Indian affairs when the latter was President.

A Plainfielder Heard From.

William J. Stephenson, formerly of this city, but now chief cook on the U. S. S. Gunboat Essex, has been heard from. His boat left Portsmouth this morning for Newport, R. I., where they will remain for a time. Mr. Stephenson is well and getting along nicely.

SUSPECT TO NEWARK.

NEWARK DETECTIVE TOOK FROELICH TO HEADQUARTERS SATURDAY.

Police Are Confident That the Young Man Knows More About the Death of His Friend Than He Has Already Told.

The police of both Plainfield and Newark are pretty confident by this time that Charles Froelich knows more about the death of James J. Kelley than he cares to tell. They do not say that Froelich is guilty of any great crime, but the fact that his story does not correspond with the facts ascertained from other sources, certainly gives the appearance that he is concealing something.

The circumstances of Kelley's death still remain a mystery. The theory that he was shot has long since been given up, as the wound found on his head was plainly shown on examination to be caused by striking some pointed object in falling. The autopsy that discovered the Paris green in the dead man's stomach gave rise to the theory of suicide. The mystery that hangs about it and the behavior of young Froelich has aroused the suspicions of the Newark police, and they are now inclined to think that Kelley did not meet death at his own hand.

Saturday afternoon Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely, of the Plainfield force, went to Newark and held a conference with the police authorities there. Chief Grant advised that Froelich be sent for as the Plainfield city jail was a poor place in which to keep him. At Newark, Froelich might be confronted regarding the story he told of his happenings the night of Kelley's death.

Saturday night a member of the detective force of Newark came to this city and took charge of Froelich. Froelich was immediately taken to Newark by train and locked up there.

The remains of young Kelley were brought to Plainfield Saturday afternoon at 1 o'clock, and taken to his home by Undertaker Cole. Yesterday afternoon, the funeral was held from the house at 2 o'clock and from St. Mary's church at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. Father Smyth officiated. There was a large number of friends of the deceased present at the services. There were also many floral tributes. The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

MRS. N. P. ROGERS WON.

Defeated Miss VanBoskerck in Close Match on Park Club Links.

There was a goodly number of golf enthusiasts on the links of the Park Golf Club last Saturday, and especially in the morning was the course crowded. There were no special features excepting the contest between Mrs. N. Pendleton Rogers and Miss Maude VanBoskerck for the lowest score. It will be remembered that on election day Mrs. Rogers made the lowest score for the women and thereby secured the silver loving cup offered as a prize. Miss VanBoskerck was second and only one point behind with a score of 135. Mrs. Rogers made a score of 134. Mrs. VanBoskerck felt sure that she could lower her score and Mrs. Rogers also felt that she could maintain a low score. The contest took place last Saturday morning, and Mrs. Rogers won. It is quite likely that another friendly contest will be arranged between these two enthusiasts. In the afternoon there was a large number of players on the links and some excellent scores were made. A tea was given in the club house during the afternoon, and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, assisted by Mrs. E. T. Douglass, presided. The tea was well attended and was a decided success. Next Saturday afternoon another tea will be given by some of the lady members.

FRIGHTENED AT PAPERS.

Exciting Runaway at Dunellen Yesterday—No One Was Hurt.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 14—Peter Steven's horse ran away and caused quite a little excitement near the Whittier schoolhouse yesterday morning. Stevens and his family, who live in Stelton, were on their way to visit friends in Dunellen, when near the schoolhouse a bunch of papers blew out in front of the horse and frightened him. One shaft became lose, and the horse ran as far as the railroad track drawing the carriage by one shaft and a small strap before Mr. Steven could stop him.

Tandem Came to Grief.

Two young men who said they were from Amboy, took a spill from their tandem yesterday afternoon at the corner of Seventh street and Park avenue. The front wheel became loose, and threw the riders, neither one of whom were hurt. The tandem was not damaged, so the front wheel was adjusted and the couple rode on.

QUICKLY PASSED AWAY.

MRS. EDWARD VANDERWEG, OF EAST THIRD STREET, DIES SUDDENLY.

While in the performance of her duties at the home of Charles L. Peterson, of 221 Watchung avenue, this morning, Mrs. Vanderweg, wife of Edward Vanderweg, of 224 East Third street, died of apoplexy. For three years past Mrs. Vanderweg has been employed by Mr. Peterson to do washing at his home. She came as usual this morning and seemed to be in her usual good health.

It was about 11 o'clock that she was standing at the wash-tub, when Miss Peterson noticed that Mrs. Vanderweg acted strangely She spoke to her, but Mrs. Vanderweg made no reply. This excited Miss Peterson's curiosity and she walked to where Mrs. Vanderweg was standing. She found that she was leaning against the window and that she was unconscious. She immediately called her father, and Mrs. Vanderweg was carried to a front room. Dr. J. B. Probasco was sent for at once, and after examination he pronounced the illness apoplexy. He then went for Dr. Murray, and when the two physicians returned Mrs. Vanderweg was dead. During her short illness she had two or three spells, but from all appearances she did not suffer much pain.

As soon as death occurred, word was sent to Patrolman Martin Vanderweg, son of Mrs. Vanderweg, and he in turn went to Roselle, where his father is employed to tell him of the sad news. The body was removed later to the home on East Third street. Mrs. Vanderweg leaves a husband, and three sons. Two of the sons, Martin and William, live in Plainfield, and John, a younger son, lives in Connecticut.

Mrs. Vanderweg had lived in this city for many years, where she was respected by all who knew her. She was a good wife and a kind mother. She will be missed very much in the circle in which she moved. Announcement of the funeral services will be made later.

FUNERAL OF JACOB LONG.

Attended by Relatives and Friends From All Over the State.

The funeral of the late Jacob Long was held this morning at 11 o'clock from his late home on Craig place. The officiating clergymen were Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church, and Rev. Mr. Nelson, a retired clergyman and a personal friend of the deceased. Both clergymen made comforting remarks.

Elmer E. Runyon sang two solos, "I Would Not Live Alway" and "Nearer My God to Thee." The pallbearers were the four sons—William H. Long, J. S. B. Long, Jacob Long, Jr., and Dr. Monroe B. Long. Interment was in Hillside. The services were well attended by relatives and friends from all over the State.

NEARLY LOST HIS WHEEL AGAIN.

Stranger Frightened Away Just as he Was About to Steal Bicycle.

Frank Dencklau, of East Second street, is beginning to believe that his bicycle is fated. Saturday evening, he left it on the piazza of his home while he went on an errand. Soon after, his brother came around the house and noticed someone standing by the wheel. He supposed it was Frank until the man made a sudden break for the front gate and ran away down Second street. It was too dark to see who the stranger was but from his actions it was very evident that he was after Dencklau's wheel. Dencklau has decided to take wonderful precautions in the future.

Arranging Anniversary.

The members of the missionary and social committees of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet tonight at the home of Miss May Thompson, on Belvidere avenue, in the interests of the tenth anniversary of the society to be observed November 25th.

To Take Better Position.

Edison Brown, who for some time past has been the efficient night operator at the local telephone office, has secured a lucrative position with an electric power plant at Bristol, Conn., and will leave Plainfield in a short time to assume his new duties.

Editor McBride in Town.

Editor Charles McBride, of the Elizabeth Journal, was a welcome visitor at The Daily Press office today. He was called to Plainfield on the sad mission of attending the funeral of the late Jacob Long, who was a personal friend.

—The macadamizing of Summit avenue is progressing favorably. The course of large stone has been laid, and is now being rolled in.

FARMERS' CARD IS THE WINNING ONE NOW

It Bears an Inscription Warning City Sports.

TO KEEP OFF POSTED LAND.

FARMERS PROPOSE TO HAVE A CHANCE AT GAME, TOO.

They are Tired of Having a Horde of Modern Nimrods Swoop Down Upon Their Farms and Slaughter all the Best Game Before They Get Their Guns Cleaned—Prepared to Enforce the Law.

The modern Nimrods, attired in canvass jackets, shod in high top boots, accompanied with packs of dogs and retinue of servants, equipped with the latest rifles and possessors of all other details of hunting paraphernalia on an elaborate scale, who have in years heretofore invaded this section on the opening days of the hunting season and ruthlessly shot down all game that they came across, are this year euchered. The farmers hold the winning card this year, on which appears the following in good plain type:

NO TRESPASSING.
On these grounds
With dog or gun.
Under penalty
OF THE LAW.

In former years the city sportsmen, both from New York and the larger cities in New Jersey, have invaded the splendid hunting preserves in the Washington and Passaic valleys and along the Watchung range of mountains unhindered, but since Thursday, when the open game season commenced, they have found their hunting expeditions blocked on every side by the above formidable and omnipresent notices. In the open ground these cards can be found posted in great number on fences, and in the woods many trees are covered with them.

The farmers have always complained that city hunters appeared at the opening of the hunting season in such a horde that by the time the agriculturists could get down their guns and have them cleaned the game was pretty well annihilated. Under a recent State law farmers are now authorized to arrest, without a warrant, all trespassers and illegal hunters on their lands, and in this way where the trespass law was virtually a dead letter previously it is now enforced in a vigorous manner. In many sections the farmers have banded together for mutual protection, and sorry be it for the city sportsmen who invades posted ground.

Besides the individual efforts of the farmers the city sportsmen are also confronted with the Union, Somerset and Middlesex Counties' Game Protective and Propagating Association, which has leased several hundred acres of farm land in the three counties and stocked it with young game during the summer months. The association has fully-posted all their preserves and in co-operation with the game wardens and the farmers, who are made members of the association if land is leased of them, trespassers are kept off the preserves in the knowledge that violators will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

This attitude of the farmers and the game association is particularly grievous to the city hunters this year in view of the fact that game is unusuallly plentiful and fat now.

Another Popular Sale.

Another of those popular Saturday night sales took place at Woodhull & Martin's last week, and was as well patronized as the first. The goods placed on sale are all first-class, and the customers have found that out. Beginning at 6 o'clock the sale lasted until nearly midnight, and would have lasted longer, but some of the stock gave out.

A Fund to Purchase Instruments.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 14—Dr. J. Ackerman Coles, of Scotch Plains, on Saturday presented to the Newark Eye and Ear Infirmary two bonds of $500 each as an endowment fund for purchasing surgical instruments for the institution. The fund is to be known as the Dr. Abraham Coles Surgical Fund.

Annual Meeting of Primary Union.

Next Thursday afternoon and evening the annual meeting of the Plainfield Primary Teachers' Union will be held in the First Baptist church. Miss Harlow, of John Wanamaker's Sunday-school in Philadelphia and will teach the lesson for next Sunday. In the evening she will give an address. All are invited to attend.

—The Women's Association of the Congregational church will hold a sewing meeting in the church parlors Thursday afternoon

SPAIN MUST GIVE UP

Positive Orders on the Philippine Question.

COMMISSION IS INSTRUCTED

A Special Night Meeting of the Cabinet is Held. Further Discussion as to Right of Spain to Consider Disposition of Philippines Must Cease.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The cabinet held a special session Saturday night at which instructions, understood to be of a positive character, bearing on the Philippine question, were drafted for dispatch to the American commissioners in Paris. These instructions were the outcome of a conference held earlier in the day.

They instruct the American representatives to admit of no further discussion as to the right to consider the disposition of the islands, and state that on that point the instructions already sent must stand, the only matters for discussion being the manner of giving over the islands.

A special cabinet meeting was held earlier in the day to consider a dispatch received from Judge Day, in Paris, in which he informed the president that the Spanish commissioners had asked for additional time to prepare their reply to the proposition submitted by the United States.

Although the president and his advisers are exceedingly anxious that the negotiations should proceed as rapidly as possible, the request for additional time was granted, and the Spanish commissioners will have until next Tuesday to prepare their reply.

The meeting, which was called by the president in the morning, lasted until one o'clock. As a cabinet meeting on Saturday is unusual, many reports were afloat as to the urgent and critical character of the subject considered.

But the members of the cabinet said most positively at the close of the session that nothing of a critical or disturbing character had developed at Paris or had been under consideration.

The attitude of the insurgents in the Philippines has given the administration considerable uneasiness, for it is feared that if they are allowed to continue their hostile activity there may be protests which this government will be compelled to regard. The difficulty in the situation is that the insurgents are operating at points outside the island of Luzon, where the United States has never been in actual possession and where it would be difficult to place any troops to maintain the status quo.

Nevertheless, it is believed to be incumbent on this government to do something in this direction, and the military and naval authorities at Manila will be so advised.

The president has received a personal message from Judge Day thanking him for his inquiry as to the judge's health and saying that he was very much improved.

Fleet to Gather Here.

New York, Nov. 14.—As soon as the slight damage to the propeller shaft of the battleship Texas has been repaired there will be a fine naval show off Tompkinsville, where the vessels of the North Atlantic squadron will assemble preparatory to sailing in company for Hampton Roads.

In the fleet will be the cruisers New York, Brooklyn, Newark and New Orleans, and the battleships Indiana, Massachusetts and Texas. The New York will be the flagship.

Every one of these ships will be in the pink of condition. The battleships have been provided with new rapid-fire six-inch guns in place of the old-fashioned weapons they formerly carried. All the ships have been repainted. The Indiana and Massachusetts will probably leave the navy yard in a few days and join the New York off Tompkinsville. They are now ready to sail.

The Brooklyn is ready for sea. She has just taken on 600 tons of coal, which Captain Cook believes will last until she arrives at Norfolk. The Brooklyn still proudly carries two battle scars, one at the top of an exhaust pipe and one on the after smokestack.

Oldest Actress Dies.

New York, Nov. 14.—Clara Fischer Maeder, who was supposed to be the oldest living actress, died Saturday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Post, New street, Metuchen, N. J. Mrs. Maeder was 87 years old. She was born in England July 14, 1811, and at the age of six years made her first appearance on the stage in England as a child actress. This was on December 17, 1817. For years she was known as the child wonder of the English stage.

She came to this country in 1827 and made her first appearance in "A Lottery of Love" at the Park theatre in New York. She afterward became a prominent actress in this country and gained great fame in supporting Wallace, Forrest, Brougham, McCready and Keene.

Her last appearance on the stage was in 1888, when she appeared with Daly's company in this city. She was then nearly eighty years old.

Lord Aberdeen's Successor.

Quebec, Nov. 14.—The Earl of Minto, the new Canadian governor general in succession to Lord Aberdeen, arrived here on the steamer Scotsman from Liverpool, accompanied by his wife and family and suite. He was met at the landing stage by Lord Aberdeen and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, several members of the cabinet and some of the provincial lieutenant governors. The party drove to the provincial legislative buildings, where the new governor general was sworn in.

Kaiser Returning Incognito.

Beyrout, Nov. 14.—The Emperor and Empress of Germany sailed from here at six o'clock yesterday morning on board the Hohenzollern. The imperial yacht will first call at the island of Rhodes for dispatches and will then sail for Malta.

The emperor will observe the strictest incognito throughout his return journey.

POSTOFFICES AND POSTMASTERS.

Annual Report of Fourt Assistant Postmaster-General.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The report of Mr. Bristow, Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General, for the year ending June 30, 1898, is a succinct but comprehensive review of the operations of that branch of the postal service which comes within his jurisdiction, and contains much information of general interest concernng postal matters.

The report shows that at the close of the fiscal year there were 73,570 postoffices in the United States—3,816 Presidental and 69,754 fourth-class. The net increase for the fiscal year was 2,548. The state having the largest number of Presidental postoffices is New York, with 330, followed by Pennsylvania, with 284; Illinois, 257, Iowa, 212, and Ohio, 208. The States having the greatest number of fourth-class offices are Pennsylvania, 4,871; New York, 3,394; Virginia, 3,297; Ohio, 3,175; and North Carolina, 2,898. In compensation Massachusetts heads the list, showing an average compensation for her fourth class postmasters of $336 a year, followed by Rhode Island, $319, and Connecicut, $283.

PEACE REIGNS IN WILMINGTON.

No Further Clash Between Whites and Blacks.

Wilmington, N. C., Nov. 14.—Wilmington is rapidly settling down to its normal quietude. There has been no further clash between the races. The new city government is exerting every effort to reassure the negroes so that they will resume their labors at the cotton compresses and the shipping wharves

The mayor has sent negro messengers through the woods adjacent to the city to urge hundreds of their race, who are in hiding, to return to the city and assure them that they may come back to the city with perfect safety. Many of them, men, women and children, are reported in a starving condition.

The coroner's jury held an inquest Saturday morning over one of the negroes killed in the riot. The verdict was that the negro came to his death at the hands of parties unknown to the jury. This verdict will apply to all of those killed.

The board of aldermen has elected a new police force of one hundred men. They will serve for thirty days or longer, at the discretion of the mayor and chief of police.

Manley, Negro Editor, Here.

Asbury Park, Nov. 14.—Al Manley, the colored editor, who fled from Wilmington, N. C., where his newspaper office was wrecked by a mob has reached this place. It is believed that the fugitive came here with another colored man named Butler, and that the two travelled together as far as New York. Manley is living with his sister, who is the wife of the Rev. I. N. Gibbs, pastor of the Colored Methodist church in West Asbury Park. He is a slender young fellow of pleasing appearance, and is intelligent.

Manley left Wilmington two days before the race riot, and said that he knew nothing about the events following his departure, excepting what he had read in the newspapers.

He was reticent, and left the impression that he was reserving a complete story of the exciting events for publication later on.

Yale vs. Princeton.

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 12.—Fifteen thousand persons witnessed the football game between Yale and Princeton on Brokaw field this afetrnoon, which resulted in a score of 6 to 0 in favor of Yale. The play was like this: After the first five minutes Yale forced the play and got to Princeton's 12-yard line. There she fumbled the ball, and little Poe, quick as a flash picked it up, eluded two Yale backs and ran the length of the field for a touchdown. That was the play that spelled victory for Princeton. Yale kept her foe on the defensive all the rest of the half. In the next half Yale started in to get a touchdown right off, but lost the ball. The fight waged in midfield till toward the end, when Princeton forced the pace close to Yale's goal line, but could not score again.

Roosevelt Selects Youngs.

New York, Nov. 14.—William J. Youngs, district attorney of Queens county, has been selected by Governor-elect Roosevelt to be his private secretary, and Mr. Youngs will accept the place.

Mr. Youngs has been a personal friend of Colonel Roosevelt for many years. He lives near him in Oyster Bay.

Mr. Youngs accompanied Colonel Roosevelt on all his speaking tours through the state in the campaign having entire charge of the train and the itinerary.

The salary of the governor's private secretary, in total, is $5,000 a year—$3,500 as secretary and $1,500 as bill clerk in the executive chamber.

A New Cunard Liner.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 14.—The new Cunard steamship Ultonia, arrived at this port Saturday morning on her maiden trip across the Atlantic.

She was launched at Newcastle, England, June 6, and was fitted out at that port for the trade between Liverpool and Boston. She is a large twin screw cattle and cargo vessel.

Weather Station at San Juan.

San Juan, Porto Rico, Nov. 14.—A branch of the West Indian and South American service of the United States weatherb ureau is being established in San Juan. Dr. M. W. Harrington is in charge of this office, his assistant in the work is Clyde Lomon, and F. R. Randolph is aiding in the establishment of the bureau.

Li Hung Chang Shelved.

Pekin, Nov. 14.—Li Hung Chang has been ordered to proceed to Tsi-Nan, capital of the province of Shan-Tung, to adopt measures with the viceroy of Shan-Tung to prevent future inundations of the Lellow river (Hoang-Ho).

This appointment is regarded as virtually shelving Prince Li.

HOLLAND BOAT TESTED

RESULT IS SATISFACTORY

The Strange Vessel Ran Swiftly on the Surface or Under the Water and Her Diving Apparatus Worked Admirably. The Boat is Certainly a Wonder in Naval Construction.

New York, Nov. 14.—With United States naval officers on board directing and controlling its movements, the submarine torpedo boat Holland was put to an official test in the lower bay yesterday before the naval board of inspectors and survey from Washington, with a view to the purchase of the boat by the government.

For the first time the boat was directed by government officers, and the inspection was the first made by all the members of the board, among whom was Captain Robley Evans commander of the Iowa.

Fighting Bob examined the strange manoeuvres of the wonderful little vessel with a critical eye, and seemed pleased when the inspection was ended, for the test was the most successful that has yet been made with the Holland.

She first discharged an eleven-foot torpedo in the harbor, then put to sea and went through a remarkable programme, diving, plunging under and out of the water like a porpoise, running at full speed under the surface, and reversing swiftly while submerged.

Lieutenant W. J. Sears, inspector of ordnance in the navy, who arranged the torpedo test, said the official trial of the boat had been very successful.

Two large parties accompanied the Holland. The members of the board of inspection and survey, with other naval officers, and the owners of the Holland, were in one tug; a second was reserved for the newspaper men and artists.

Composing the naval board were Captain Frederick Rogers, the chairman; Commander William H. Emory, Lieutenant Nathan Sargent, recorder, and Captain Evans.

Several changes had been made in the torpedo boat since its former trials. It lay in the water with but little more than the conning tower showing above the surface. It still bore a steel upright, or mast, fore and aft, one flying the Union Jack and the other the Stars and Stripes.

Its crew was composed of H. C. D. Nindermann, who was with Lieutenant De Long on his Arctic exploration in the Jeannette; Matthew Addison, F. C. Cable and Henry Myers.

When the signal was given to cast off, at noon, Lieutenant Sargent, who inspected the boat last spring, and Chief Engineer Lowe descended through the conning tower to superintend the manoeuvres, and work the boat themselves.

In response to signals from the tug, the Holland then turned seaward and ran at cruising position—that is, barely on the surface—out through the Narrows and to a point two miles south of the Orchard Shoal light.

The sea was almost as calm as a mill pond. There were no craft cruising about to make diving dangerous.

In response to signals from the tug, the Holland first ran for ten minutes to the northwest, completely submerged, only her two little flags showing above the water.

At the order to submerge, he quickly pulled down the cover of the tower and the boat sank out of sight. After running swiftly to the northwest, she came to the surface, and turning about ran submerged in the opposite direction.

Her air and water compartments, by which she sinks or rises, worked without a hitch and she sank like lead. This began a series of dives. She ran swiftly forward and a moment later her nose dipped into the waves, her stern tilted into the air, and she dived like a duck, her flags disappearing beneath the surface.

For three or four minutes nothing could be seen of her. Three hundred yards away to the right she suddenly rose out of the water and glided over the surface. There were murmurs of admiration and approval among the members of the board.

Next the Holland made a series of four dives in quick succession, rising above and sinking beneath the waves like a porpoise, and followed this feat with a dive in which she completely reversed her position

Priest Attacked With Dynamite.

Scranton, Nov. 14.—Because the Rev. John Orloroskie, pastor of the Duryea Polish Catholic Church, refused to accede to the demands of a gang of desperadoes and pay them $100, a dastardly attempt was made on his life Saturday night. As it was the entire front of his home was wrecked with dynamite. The stoop was shattered, windows broken and the church, about sixty feet distant, also damaged.

The priest received an anonymous letter written in Polish about one month ago which when translated read as follows:

"You must pay us $100 in money or we will murder you and blow up your house. The money you can place in a bottle and leave it buried in the ground right under the cornerstone of the church. Do not expect a second demand."

Dr. Orloroskie paid no attention to the demand, and this fearful work followed.

Guns from Spanish Warships

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 14.—The German steamship Senior, from Santiago, with guns taken from the Spanish cruisers Maria Teresa, Viscaya and Oquendo, and the Colon's safe, arrived here Saturday

A PECULIAR REMEDY.

The Rev. F. I. Bell, a highly esteemed minister residing in Weedsport, Cayuga Co., N. Y., in a recent letter writes as follows: "There has never been anything that I have taken that has relieved the Dyspepsia from which I have suffered for ten years except the new remedy called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Since taking them I have had no distress at all after eating and again after long years CAN SLEEP WELL. Rev. F.I. Bell, Weedsport, N. Y., formerly, Idalia, Colo."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a remarkable remedy, not only because it is a certain cure for all forms of indigestion, but because it seems to act as thoroughly in old chronic cases of dyspepsia as well as in mild attacks of indigestion or biliousness. A person has dyspepsia simply because the stomach is overworked, all it wants is a harmless, vegetable remedy to digest the food and thus give it the much needed rest.

This is the secret of the success of this peculiar remedy. No matter how weak or how much disordered the digestion may be, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. New life and energy is given not only to the stomach but to every organ and nerve in the body. A trial of this splendid medicine will convince the most skeptical that Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles can be cured. The tablets are prepared by the F. A. Stuart Co., of Marshall, Mich., but so popular has the remedy become that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can now be obtained at any drug store at 50 cent per package. Send for book on stomach diseases free.

HAVANA QUIET AGAIN.

Havana, November 14.—The Orden Publico force, cavalry and infantry regiments, has been disbanded after a part payment of arrears has been made. The trouble leading to the disbandment of the force began with the protest of the Third Company on Thursday morning before the Palace. At that time General Solono, chief of the staff of General Blanco, addressed the men and led them back to their quarters on Compestela street, where the men gave cheers for Spain and General Blanco. General Arolas, Military Governor of Havana, ordered more than 4,000 troops quartered in the outskirts of Havana to march into the city, where they arrived at nightfall. At the head of a portion of these troops General Arolas marched toward the Orden Publico quarters, where the protesting Third Company was drawn up in the street under arms. The regulars refused to charge or fire upon their brother soldiers, who were finally persuaded to retire to their quarters.

Baring these slight incidents, the military authorities have maintained thorough control of the city. The sum total of the casualities Thursday night was three: A lieutenant on General Arolas' staff, wounded in the right hand; one Orden Publico wounded slightly, and another wounded seriously. The city has again resumed its normal tranquillity, although regulars are still quartered in the principal streets and parks of the city as a precautionary measure. It was expected by the leaders of the demonstration that the Guardia Civile and part of the artillery brigade would lend their support, but they did not.

FINDING THE MARIA TERESA.

An Official Report to The Navy Department from Commander Craven.

Washington, Nov. 14.—An official report to the navy department of the finding of the Maria Teresa was contained in the following cable dispatch received from Commander Craven of the wrecking tug Potomac, which had been ordered to Cat island from Santiago:

Nassau, Nov. 12.

Secretary of the Navy, Washington:

Potomac arrived. Maria Teresa near Bird Point, Cat island, one mile off shore in two fathoms of water. Tide rising and falling inside. Temporary deck broken up, movable articles removed by natives. Vulcan not seen. Natives at work since Saturday.

The Potomac was ordered at once back to Cat island with instructions to Commander Craven to take possession of the Teresa and drive off the wreckers who are looting the ship.

He replied by cable that he would start immediately and would arrive at the wreck in the morning. The fact that the Teresa, a vessel drawing in trim twenty-three feet of water, and waterlogged as she was when abandoned, probably drawing nearly thirty feet, should have been driven into 13 feet of water is regarded by naval officials as evidence of the great strength of the storm which caused her crew to abandon her.

A Subsistence Depot at Manila.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—By direction of the secretary of war, under the provisions of an act of Congress approved July 17, 1898, for increasing the efficiency of the subsistence department, Manila, Philippine islands, is designated as one of the important depots to which officers of that department are assignable for the purpose of purchasing and shipping subsistence supplies, to take effect from this date. Lieutenant Colonel David L. Brainard, chief commissary of subsistence, is assigned to the duty of purchasing and shipping subsistence supplies at that depot, and while on such duty will have the rank of colonel.

The Hist Compelled to Return.

Santiago de Cuba, Nov. 14.—The auxiliary gunboat Hist, with General Wood, has been compelled to return on account of bad weather.

General Wood will leave on the Hist some time next week for Gibara and other north coast points.

Mr. Brooks, a planter of Guantanamo, is in the city. He says that he is working half a force, but will not invest capital until America announces her intention as to giving Cuba a stable government.

Mr. Brooks and family have lived in Cuba forty years.

Banking Records Broken.

New York, Nov. 14.—The weekly bank statement issued Saturday by the Clearing House was of unusual interest, as it showed that two banking records had been broken, the average daily deposits of the associatd banks, $777,000,000, being larger than in any previous week, and the average daily loans, $687,867,400, also surpassing in size those for any week in the past, despite the fact that the week had only five business days.

Jerry Simpson to Give Up Politics.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 14.—Congressman Jerry Simpson, who was defeated in the Seventh district by Chester I. Long, concludes a statement in explanation of his defeat, as follows:

"As for myself, I shall seek office no more. I shall, at the expiration of my term in Congress, retire to my cattle ranch at Medicine Lodge and participate in politics only to help out the Populist party whenever my services are in demand."

Mrs. Guilford on the Lucania.

London, Nov. 14.—On the Cunard line steamer Lucania, which sailed Saturday for New York, was Mrs. Nancy Guilford, the Bridgeport, Conn., midwife, who has been extradited to stand trial for the murder of Emma Gill of Southington, Conn.

M'MILLAN TO ENGLAND

The Senator From Michigan to Be Hay's Successor.

ALGER TO TAKE HIS SEAT

Inference Is that Governor Pingree Will Appoint Secretary of War for Unexpired Term. Will Relieve the Administration and at the Same Time Protect Alger's Feelings.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—United States Senator James McMillan of Michigan is to succeed Secretary of State John Hay as ambassador to Great Britain, unless Secretary Alger and a few of his personal friends have been misinformed.

The statement came so directly from a gentleman who is in a position to be advised on the subject that it may be considered absolutely accurate.

The suggestion of Senator McMillan for the English mission is not new, as the subject has been frequently mentioned in Michigan politics, and also at the National Capital since the first report was circulated that Secretary Alger would retire from the McKinley cabinet.

The statement that Senator McMillan was willing to relinquish the remainder of his term in the Senate to go to the court of St. James has never been directly denied by the president, Secretary Hay or Senator McMillan.

All efforts to obtain an authorized confirmation of the report have been equally futile, but at the same time those who are closely associated with Senator McMillan and Secretary Alger in unguardedmome nts during the last few weeks have stated without qualification that the incident is as good as closed, so far as Senator McMillan's appointment by the president is concerned.

Of course the inference is that when McMillan resigns his seat in the Senate Governor Pingree of Michigan will appoint Secretary Alger to fill out the unexpired term, which lasts until March 3, 1901.

This is the plan said to have been agreed upon between the president, Secretary Alger, Senator McMillan and Governor Pingree some time previous to the recent elections.

The subject has been kept in the background pending the campaign, but the Michigan men are now looking forward to an early culmination of the project, which will relieve the administration of the services of Secretary Alger without inflicting serious wounds upon his personal pride. A seat in the United States Senate is balm enough to heal almost any political wound.

Senator McMillan is now rounding out his second term in the Senate, and he has no further aspirations in that direction.

The novelty of being one of the richest members of that distinguished body and in addition being regarded as one of the ablest and most astute councillors in the Republican party, has passed, and he is said to be willing to go to the court of St. James during the remainder of the McKinley administration.

Secretary Alger has evidently grown weary of being made the scapegoat for all the mistakes of the war, and he would not hesitate to resign his seat at the cabinet table, with all its multifarious responsibilities and accept a governor-given senatorial toga at the hands of his personal friend, the executive of the state of Michigan.

1st New York Ordered Home.

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—The First regiment of New York volunteer infantry, now doing duty at Honolulu, has been ordered home by the War Department. Major General Merriam, commander of the department, has received a despatch from the department instructing him to recall the regiment immediately.

This sudden and most unexpected recall of the New York regiment from Honolulu is the result of the recommendation made to the War Department by General Merriam on Friday.

The last report received here by the department commander from Brigadier General King showing that the regiment was badly off from a sanitary viewpoint, as many of the men were ill with fever, and the disease seemed to be on the increase.

Troops Ordered to Savannah.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—With a view to their transfer to duty in Cuba, the following troops, now on their way from Porto Rico, have been ordered to go into camp at Savannah, Ga.: Batteries C and F of the Third artillery, B of the Fourth artillery and D of the Fifth artillery; Troop B of the Second cavalry and Troop H of the Sixth cavalry.

The Second artillery, with the exception of two light batteries now at Huntsville, has been ordered to Savannah, and attached to General Lee's corps.

Merrimac Hero Honored.

Stuart, Ia., Nov. 14.—Osborne Deignan, one of the men of the Merrimac, arrived here yesterday and was met by five hundred people, who escorted him home. Eighteen or twenty girls surrounded him at the depot and attempted to kiss him, but he pushed all back, saying that there were handsomer men in the crowd tahn he.

The municipal authorities presented Deignan with a sword and Governor Shaw and other prominent Iowans made speeches.

Diegnan ran away from his home here years ago.

Tin Company Assigns.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 14.—Raible Smith & Co., manufacturers of tin plate ware at Preston and Lampton streets, filed a deed of assignment on Saturday in the county clerk's office. Christopher Wright was named as assignee. The liabilities and assets are estimated at $70,000 each. The plant employs about one hundred people.

WORK OF WAR BOARD.

Washington, D. C., November 14.—All the members of the War Investigating Commission except ex-Governor Woodbury, were present at Saturday's session, which was devoted to a discussion of the work of the sub-committee, which went to the Western cities and to prepare for the New York and Boston trip. There are eight or ten important witnesses to be examined here before leaving for New York, but the commission hopes to go next Thursday night. A large number of complaints have been received from that city and the opinion was expressed that two weeks' might be put in there. Among the witnesses who will be heard before leaving for New York are Generals Young, Humphrey and Breckerridge, Colonels Knox and Forward and Dr. Huidekoper, each of whom was identified with the conduct of the Spanish war in some important capacity. General Young and Colonel Knox participated in the Santiago campaign, the latter being wounded in the fight at El Caney. Dr. Huidekoper has been much criticised as an army surgeon, and he has sought an opportunity to go before the board for his vindication.

General Doyle, Colonel Sexton and Dr. Conner gave the other members of the board a great deal of information concerning their Western trip, which they consider was productive of important developments. General Dodge expressed the opinion that the commission would be able to conclude its duties by the 1st of January next. It is not yet decided whether the commission or any of its members will visit Cuba and Porto Rico.

SCHLEY PRESENTS HIS REPORT.

Washington Nov. 14.—Admiral Schley has presented to the president, the secretary of state and the secretary of war copies of the report of the Porto Rico evacuation comission. This report contains a record of the proceedings of the commission from day to day, all the interesting features of which have been published. In the main it is nothing more than a transcript of the daily record of proceedings of the commission, noting each proposal made to the Spanish commissioners and their counter proposals, and closing with an account of the ceremonies attending the end of Spanish sovereignty and the assumption of control by the United States forces.

The admiral is looking thin and worn as the result of his labors afloat and ashore. He desires to take a rest in the mountains for a few weeks before undertaking any active duty.

Troops to Withdrawn.

Carlinville, Ill., Nov. 14.—Adjutant General Reese of Springfield has notified Sheriff Davenport that the remaining troops guarding the Chicago-Virden Coal Company's shaft at Virden should be removed.

Since the differences between the coal company and the miners have been settled the troops are no longer needed.

The grand jury adjourned Saturday until Monday. Great pressure is being brought to bear by influential persons that nothing shall result from its investigations.

A prominent member of the jury admitted that such was the case. He indignantly declared that it was the intention of the grand jury not to be affected by any outside pressure.

Camp Black's Flagstaff Brought $125.

Hempstead, Nov. 14.—After a public auction which was held Saturday, at Camp Black, the post passed into a memory. Lieutenant William Weigel, the commissary of the camp, held a public auction in which all the government buildings were sold to the highest bidder. The bidding for the flag pole at headquarters was spirited. Several of the members of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club and some of the other residents of the neighborhood were present, and all were anxious to obtain the first flagpole that was raised by government troops at the beginning of the war with Spain. The pole brought $125, and was purchased by Timothy Tredwell of East Williston.

Schley To Get Fine Command.

Washington, Nov. 14.—Admiral Schley, having asked again for sea service, has been promised the command of the European Squadron.

This squadron will be re-established in a short time with some of the finest cruisers in the navy to exhibit the American Flag credtably to the European nations.

Colored Colony to Go to Cuba.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 14.—Kansas will furnish the first colony of immigrants to settle in Cuba from the United States. John T. Veny, a colored Baptist preacher, well known in Topeka, has made arrangements to establish a settlement of colored people near Santiago, and expects to start from Topeka with about thirty families in twenty or thirty days.

Gen. Greely Favors Hawaiian Cable

San Francisco, Nov. 14.—General Greely, chief signal officer of the United States army, is in this city.

He will inspect the electrical work in the harbor. He strongly favors the establishment of a cable line between San Francisco and Honolulu.

The Siamese Minister Received.

Washington, Nov. 14.—The newly arrived Siamese minister, Phya Visddha, was presented Saturday by Secretary Hay to the president. He was received in the Blue parlor and the customary addresses were exchanged.

The Oregon and the Iowa at Rio.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 14.—The battleships Oregon and Iowa have arrived at Rio to take part in celebrating the anniversary of the creation of the Brazilian republic. The supply ship Celtic was with the battleships.

Tree Planting In Cities.

In not a few of our cities, large and small, associations have been formed for the purpose of encouraging the planting of trees. The householder is urged to set them out in front of his residence, and every inducement is pressed to persuade those associated with public institutions to follow the example on a larger scale. In many of the New England towns and cities, as also in the west and south, beautifully umbrageous streets frequently add greatly to the charm of the ensemble and the comfort of the inhabitants, but it is more frequently the case that the tree, such a splendid fact in the perspective, is altogether wanting in the city street.

Many of the most lauded streets of great foreign cities, which excite the admiration of travelers, are not so superior in splendor of buildings or in that bigness of impression derived from width of thoroughfare, or in any advantage of mere location and thoroughness of care. It is the noble avenues of trees, framing with their splendid greenery the handiwork of man in architecture and blending their softening and harmonizing effects with the stiff lines of structure. On the side of health and comfort certainly nothing more need be said to enforce the value of an abundance of tree growth in cities, at least away from the purely commercial sections. A generally awakened sense of this element of street decoration and comfort would revolutionize the appearance of most American cities in the next quarter of a century and immensely add to the satisfaction of the urban dweller. Every public and private encouragement should be given to these tree planting associations. On this kind of initiative depends the success of not a few needed reforms, as hundreds are too busy to think out and act on them by themselves.

Figures From Union.

The Union County Election Board Saturday afternoon completed the official canvass of the vote of the county at the recent election, except that cast for Coroner, as, owing to the vote of Cranford Township for that office being missing, the total vote could not be computed.

The vote for Governor was: Voorhees, 9,272; Crane, 7,032. Voorhees' plurality, 2,240. For Congress: Fowler (Rep.) 9,242; Snyder (Dem.) 6,801. Fowler's plurality, 2,441. For Senator: Cross (Rep.) 9,054; Ford (Dem.) 7,074. Cross's plurality, 1 980. For Assembly: Houston (Rep.) 9.292; Squire (Rep.) 9,059; Murray (Rep,) 9,049; Collins, (Dem.) 6 857; Scudder (Dem.) 6,981; Higgins (Dem.) 6,826.

There is a general feeling among the local Republicans that it will be a good thing if the Democrats place a regular ticket in the field. The Republicans are very much opposed to a Citizens' ticket, as they claim that there is no unity in it, and the city officials elected on it are responsible to no one. The Republicans are really more confident of defeating a Democratic ticket than the Citizens' ticket, believing that there are many Republcans who, although somewhat dissatisfied with the present administration, would hardly bring themselves to vote the Democratic ticket.

Governor-elect Voorhees and Former President Cleveland were both present at the Princeton-Yale game Saturday, but they were as pigmies in the eyes of the cranks who were there with them to see the fun. What a kaleidoscope nation we are.

A HOSPITAL SHIP'S RETURN.
The hospital ship Missouri arrived in New York, from Porto Rico, October 29th. She had on board 276 soldier and civilian patients. Ambulances were on hand to convey the sick to the hospitals. There were 44 seriously ill. Two died en route from Ponce. All spoke in high terms of their treatment on the Missouri.

It is reported that Lottie Collins, of Ta-ra-ra boom-de-ay fame, tried to commit suicide owning to domestic troubles. If this is really so, Lottie is a fit candidate for a museum to exhibit as the only music hall artist who has taken domestic troubles so seriously.

"Sockless Jerry" Simpson in his hour of defeat says that there are other Congressional elections to be held. Evidently Jerry hopes to see his star in the ascendancy again.

The name of Senator Reed is mentioned as a possible selection for President of the State Senate at the approaching session of the Legislature.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Of the Councilmen who hold over for the next Council there are three regular Republicans and four Councilmen elected last year on a Citizens' ticket. The result of the coming election will therefore decide the political complexion of the new Council. The Democrats of the city have reorganized and are preparing to put a regular Democratic ticket in the field. Last year they supported the Citizens' ticket. The disgruntled Republicans object to uniting with the Democrats and are thinking of putting up an Independent or Citizens' ticket, as last year. This may result in there being three tickets in the field, which would increase the chances of the Republican ticket—Plainfield Correspondent in Tribune.

PASSING COMMENT

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The great importance of having Pearl street macadamized from Somerset street to Watchung avenue has impressed itself on Mayor Wilson, of the borough. He recognizes that if the street was macadamized it would afford a pleasant and substantial outlet for people living in Washington Park and all parts of the borough to Watchung avenue and the railroad station without passing through the crowded business part of the town. In view of these facts His Honor made a canvass through the street and learned that only one per cent of the people living thereon are willing to contribute to the improvement. The Mayor says, however, that he hopes to see the street macadamized in the early spring.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

That good old comedy drama, "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," will be seen here in Music Hall tomorrow night. A review of the play says: Henry Chanfrau, in "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," played to a crowded house last evening at the Academy of Music The play and the player were not simply applauded, but cheered long and loud. The gallery fairly screamed at times, and Mr Chanfrau was called before the curtain several times. Mr. Chaufrau, in the title role, held the audience well. His acting was simple and effective, and characterized by great earnestness. Edward Maynard was a typical villian, and succeeded in gaining the ill will of the audience at the start. W. D. Stone and Lawrence Barbonr as the "Judge" and the "Major" were excellent, and kept the audience in roars of laughter. Miss Sara MacDonald, as "Alice Redding," proved herself a capable and pleasing actress. The other roles were well played, too. The levee scene in the second act gave a chance for some good singing and banjo playing, which received loud applause. The company is under the management of Jesse D. Burns.

The bill that is offered at Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, New York, for this week, is as strong as usual in names, and in entertaining qualities. It is headed by sprightly Nellie McHenry, who only made her first appearance in vaudeville a week ago, but who already bids fair to become one of the most popular of vaudeville stars, judging by the enthusiastic welcome she is receiving nightly at Mr. Proctor's uptown house. The merry little farce, "Patchwork," in which she appears is an excellent vehicle for the display of her lively talents, and she is, besides, most excellently supported by John G. Webster and others. Marie Wilma, the latest European sensation, will give her unique sand painting exhibition; Manus and Mazett appear in their screamingly funny acrobatic comedy, "The Tramp and the Brakeman;" Miss Minnie Methot, a vocalist of great personal beauty and the companion of Remenyi and of Urso in their concert tours, will make her first appearance in vaudeville; Hanley and Jarvis will talk amusingly, and twenty other clever people will put forth their best efforts to entertain.

New Haven.

The day was all that could have been desired. There was a little wind at the start that caused the occupants of the east stand to draw their coats more closely but after that it died away and the afternoon was a very delightful one for players and audience.

The score was 6 to 0 in favor of Princeton, but there were times when it appeared that both sides would score. It was a great game and well worth seeing.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, October 14.—Yesterday was a big day for the trolley, and the cars running from here to Bound Brook and back did a good business. Two cars were kept busy yesterday, carrying the crowds, and these were filled at each trip except just at noon and 6 o'clock. The cars pass each other at Lincoln, where there is a turnout, but when the company get to running more than two cars an hour, it will necessitate building another turnout or two.

Rev. E. S. Jamison, of the Methodist church, preached a political sermon to his hearers yesterday taking for his subject, "Some Thoughts Suggested by the Candidates for Political Office in the Recent Election." He had a good house, and made some strong hits on the way politics are being run now days.

The Epworth League of the Methodist church are hurrying their preparations for the fair and bazaar which is to be held in Apgar's Hall next week. The programme committee have decided to have musical features, vocal and instrument, and other attractions. The proceeds go to the financial aid of the society.

A subscription is being taken up to pay for having the spire on the Presbyterian church steeple straightened. A pierce of the wood which supports the spire has rotted away so that the strong wind has blown the spire and vane to one side, and to look at it reminds one of the leaning tower of Pisa.

The Whittier School building, which underwent a thorough disenfection last week, was opened again today. The Board of Eduction say that now there can be no danger of disease germs lurking inside its walls.

A new electric light is to be placed on North avenue, near Adam Dealaman's store, which will make the dark corner near Alvah Gray's coal yard much brighter at night.

Miss Ethel Smith, of Bloomsbury, who has been visiting Miss Edna Coriell, has returned to her home.

Mrs. Manning, of Junction, who has been spending a few days with Mrs. Laring, has returned home.

Thomas Dixson, of Perth Amboy, who has been visiting Alfred Palmer, has returned home.

Miss Sophie Maltby has been visiting relatives in New York State.

The condition of Captain William Long remains the same.

Mrs. Boyle, of Somerville, has been visiting Mrs. J. Smith.

Henry Kirchner is painting his house.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Nov. 14—A change in the Lehigh Valley time-table went into effect yesterday. There is no change in the time of running the local trains.

Mrs. William Bartlet, who has been visiting friends in town, has returned to her home in Boston.

Nelson Dunn has gone to Newark to accept a lucrative position.

Miss Mazie Wendell has returned from a visit in Trenton.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 14—The stormy weather last evening no doubt kept many away from the Y. M. C. A. meeting held in the Baptist church, but as it was quite a large audience braved the weather and listened to an address by W. D. Murray, of Plainfield, who is a member of the international committee on Y. M. C. A. work. A. D. Beekon, president of the new association, made a short address explaining that the association was nonsectarian, that the object of the association would be to help the young men in the village, to furnish a counter attraction to the many pitfalls which lie in their pathway through life, and to furnish a place where they could spend their evenings in a pleasant way. Mr. Beekon said all churches in the town were supporting the movement, and they hoped in a short time to have the moral support of every one in the village. Mr. Beekon then, in a few words introduced Mr. Murray, the speaker of the evening. Mr. Murray kept his audience interested from start to finish.

Miss Mary Bornmann, who recently had an operation performed at Muhlenberg Hospital for a cancer on her foot, expects to come home this week. The operation is said to have been a successful one.

Jacob V. Coles, of Front street, is dangerously ill at his home, and on account of his advanced age small hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Miss Iva Mundy, who has been visiting her friend, Miss Sadie Reger, returned Saturday to her home in Roseville, this State.

C. Frank Sykes, of Front street, went to New York Saturday to have an operation performed for appendicitis.

Mrs. Stites M. Parse returned Saturday afternoon from a visit with relatives in Newark.

Miss Ada Miller, of Fanwood, visited friends in Plainfield Saturday afternoon.

Fred Smith, after a three days' illness, is around again.

HOW GENERAL HOWARD YIELDED.

His Unselfishness Toward Another Officer and What Came of It.

Speaking on the law of self-sacrifice work in America, Dr. Henry Mable of Boston relates an incident of the civil war. In Sherman's campaign it became necessary in the opinion of the leader to change commanders. O. O. Howard was promoted to lead a division which had been under the command of another general. Howard went through the campaign at the head of the division, and on to Washington to take part in the review. The night before the veterans were to march down Pennsylvania avenue, General Sherman sent for General Howard and said to him:

"Howard, the politicians and the friends of the man whom you succeeded are bound that he shall ride at the head of his old corps, and I want you to help me out."

"But it is my command," said Howard, "and I am entitled to ride at its head."

"Of course you are," said Sherman. "You led them through Georgia and the Carolinas, but, Howard, you are a Christian."

"What do you mean?" replied Howard. "If you put it on that ground it changes the whole business. What do you mean, General Sherman?"

"I mean that you can stand the disappointment. You are a Christian."

"Putting it on that ground, there is but one answer. Let him ride at the head of the corps."

"Yes; let him have the honor," added Sherman, "but, Howard, you will report to me at 9 o'clock, and ride by my side at the head of the whole army." In vain Howard protested, but Sherman said gently but authoritatively: "You are under my orders."

When the bugle sounded the next morning Howard was found trembling like a leaf, and it required another order from General Sherman before he was willing to take the place assigned to him. He had, as a Christian, yielded the place to another which rightly belonged to him, and in the grand review found himself not at the head of the corps, but at the head of the army. Even worldly men know where Christians should be who laid down their lives in self-sacrifice for others.

GOVERNOR THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

WHY THEY LIKE ROOSEVELT.

THE ROUGH RIDER COLONEL AS TROOPERS SEE HIM.

A Gallant Fighter and a Good Provider, All Admit, but it Was the Little Things He Did in the Days Before Santiago That Made Him the Idol of His Men.

The rough riders who came out of the West last spring, headed for Cuba and glory, were telling stories about Col. Roosevelt. And finally a young woman, who was listening so hard that ears, eyes and mouth were all wide open, said in a rather awestruck tone:

"Do all the rough riders bow down and worship Roosevelt the way you do?"

Whereupon they wagged their heads with emphasis and Trooper Bell of Company K remarked:

"There arn't one of us that wouldn't lie down and let the Colonel walk over us if it would accommodate him. After he led us up San Juan hill, we'd have followed him anywhere, if it had been up against all the Spaniards on earth! We got to the point where, if we were on top of one of the high buildings in New York and the Colonel jumped off, every man of us would jump off, too. Yes, we would."

"There arn't a man in this whole country," continued Trooper Bell, "no, nor in any other country, that could have done what Col. Roosevelt did with that regiment. Regular army officers wouldn't have known their men and, by Jove, if they had tried to make parade soldiers out of us they'd have lost an eye or two. We three come from the West and, I tell you, all of our crowd were looking for fight and not for exact information about the way to hold our fingers when we saluted. You can't make a parade soldier out of a cowboy in three weeks. I don't know as you could ever make one out of him. But you can make a fighter out of him in three seconds, and all you need is the right kind of a leader to keep your cowboy from fighting at the wrong time.

"The colonel was the leader we needed, and the proof of it is that you didn't hear any kick coming from him about his men, and you can listen from now till Gabriel blows his trumpet and you won't hear any kick from his men about him. You mu-n't think he was careless about discipline. When he snapped his fingures things jumped. Everything he did went with a snap. He didn't spend time fooling. When he wanted a thing he didn't ask somebody to ask somebody else to send somebody around with it. He went and got what he wanted and then he stayed by it till he got it where he wanted it. The other troops used to say:

"'Oh, yes! the rough riders! they've got this and they've got that!'

"That's all right. We did have things that the rest didn't have. And why? Simply because Col. Roosevelt hustled around and got them for us."

"Yes," said one of them, "I remember the evening of July 2—I think it was that night—when we were in the San Juan trenches. We were rather shy on provisions about that time and after figuring awhile they made out to give us two pieces of hardtack each. We'd made the most we could of our supper and I was standing by when the Colonel came up. The first thing he asked was whether we had had our rations, such as they were. They told him we had.

"'All right,' he said, 'I'll have mine now.' And he ate his two pieces of hard tack like the rest of us."

"I'll tell you one thing he did that showed the kind of a heart he's got," said Trooper Pollock. "It was when we left the trenches and went back to our last camp before we left the island. Each of us had his equipment to carry, and we had pickaxes and shovels in addition. One young fellow was pretty nearly tuckered out, and he was struggling along with his pick besides his gun and the rest of his stuff. You remember that young fellow, don't you, Bell?'

"Yes, and I'll tell you who he was. He was a son of General Babcock."

"That's so. Well, the colonel came along, and when he saw the boy he just took the pick away from him and carried it back to camp himself. And not only that, but then he carried it down the company street and put it in the boy's tent."

FIGHTING INDIAN FASHION.

The Indian method of fighting, as shown at Leech Lake, is a unique type of warfare, and as such is a subject of great interest to foreign military men. The United States regular soldier is an expert at it and has learned to fight the Indian as the Indian fights him. Military attaches sent by foreign Governments to observe the Spanish-American war asked many questions from American officers on this topic, and considered the veteran Indian fighter, represented by such men as Generals Chaffee and Kent, as one of the best types of soldiers.

Individual fighting is the Indian style. It was so in the days before the Revolution, and a century has not changed it. The Indian has adopted many innovations taught him by the white man. He usually wears "store clothes" in these days and lives in a house, even if it is only a log hut. But he fights as his forefathers did, seeking to gain an advantage over his foe by ambush or some other form of strategy. The Indian who can hide behind a rock or tree and shoot down an unsuspecting foe who is passing is considered much more of a hero than one who will fight in the open and die bravely facing the enemy.

Indians on the warpath are commanded by chiefs, who are generally elected at a council fire. These chiefs are usually the heads of large families and command squads of from 20 to 100 men, composed of their brothers, sons, cousins and other relatives. One of the chiefs is known as "great chief," and is usually given this rank for prowess in war or hunting. He occupies something like the same relation to the forces under him that a General or a Colonel has in the United States Army, but his authority is much more restricted and is exercised only in rare cases.

The usual method in a fight such as that at Leech Lake is for the chief to advance and his men to follow him, keeping near enough to see his movements and acting in conformity with them. When the foe approaches within range general firing begins, one of the chiefs usually setting the example. When his men see him fire they fire too, and so the rattle of the guns becomes general.

It is seldom that an order is given to an Indian in battle. He follows his chief, picking out individual foes and fighting individually. His commissary and quartermaster's arrangements are attended to by squaws.

The United States regular when fighting Indians adopt their tactics only when the Indians are near. The skirmish formation is then used and the men dodge behind trees or rocks, but they listen for and quickly obey the orders of their officers. If hard pressed they usually assemble and throw up hasty intrenchments, where they can pour a collective fire into any foe that may attack them.

UMBRELLA SKIRTS IN STYLE.

One encouraging feature of the new fashions is the diversity of style and cut which makes them adaptable to every kind of figure. One of the prettiest skirts for the tall, slim well-rounded form is the one with the peplum overdress cut circular and shaped in deep points at the bottom. This fits the hips close without so much as one tiny plait or fullness of any sort at any point around the waist.

There are skirts and skirts, with every possible variation of trimming, but the general effect in cut is very much like an umbrella—very scant at the top, and spreading out so immensely wide at the foot that visions of crinoline begin to loom up in the distance. The most attractive skirt, perhaps, is the one with no attempt at any fulness around the hips and an especially pretty flare around the bottom. However, it must be shunned like the plague by all women who are not blessed with almost faultless figures. The average woman is either too slim or too stout, and the one is no better suited than the other to adorn this particular skirt, for a well-rounded figure is the first element of its success.

Bodices hardly excell the skirts in variety of styles, yet there are so many and so widely diversified modes that it is simply impossible to designate any particular one as the leading fashion. There are long coats and short coats and every kind of coat between a long cutaway and a jaunty bolero jacket, yet round waists seem to be quite as much the vogue. The long coats reach to the knees and are cut straight down in front or cut away after the manner of an elongated Louis XVI. coat.

Yoke, guimpe, and vest effects are the conspicuous features of the round waists, and pretty combinations of colors are noticeable in all the new gowns of whatever description. Lace of all kinds, silk tucked in various ways, embroidery with a mixture of soft colors, plain velvet and velvet with fine cords of satin in some contrasting color set in around at intervals of one inch, are all employed for yokes.

Speyer. Der pfälzische Hauptverein der deutschen Lutherstiftung hat für das abgelaufene Rechnungsjahr die Summe von 1980 Mark als Erziehungsbeiträge an drei Pfarrers- und 44 Lehrersfamilien vertheilt. Der Vermögensstand beträgt zur Zeit 10,930 Mark 4 Pfennige.

Württemberg.

Cannstatt. Hier wurde kürzlich ein römischer Friedhof aufgedeckt, auf dem in etwa 200 Skelett- und Brandgräbern die gewöhnlichen Todtenbeigaben gefunden wurden. In den letzten Tagen nun stieß man auf die Grundmauern eines 3.8 Meter langen und 3.4 Meter breiten römischen Hauses, in dessen Innern sich 12 unterirdischen Gottheiten geweihte Skulpturen vorfanden. Zwei der gut erhaltenen Steinbilder haben Inschriften an die Göttin Hercluna.

Friedrichshafen. Die Arbeiten an der Bodensee-Gartetbahn zwischen hier und Lindau sind so weit vorgeschritten, daß der Betrieb dieser Linie mit 1. Juli 1899 aufgenommen werden kann. Wagen und Fahrpersonal stellt die bayerische Verwaltung. Zur Zeit wird der Bahnhof in Friedrichshafen bedeutend vergrößert; die zwei württembergischen Bahnhöfe an der neuen Bahn, Langenargen und Hennighofen, die Haltestelle Eiskirch und neun Bahnwärterhäuschen sind im Rohbau fertig.

Nagold. Die hiesigen Methodisten haben mit einem Aufwand von circa 30,000 Mark ein Bethaus hierselbst errichtet. Dasselbe wurde nunmehr eingeweiht, wozu Prediger und Gesinnungsgenossen aus der Umgegend eintrafen.

Oberndorf. Von Rottweil kommend, wollte der in der hiesigen Waffenfabrik beschäftigte, etwa 30 Jahre alte Techniker P. Gebauer aus dem hier nicht haltenden Nachtschnellzug springen. Er gerieth beim Sprung zwischen die Rampe des Güterschuppens und den Zug und wurde überfahren. Dem Unglücklichen wurde der Kopf vollständig vom Körper getrennt.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Wegen fahrlässiger Tödtung verurtheilte die Strafkammer den Wundarzneidiener und „Zahntechniker" Weizenbauer in Bruchsal zu 14 Tagen Gefängniß. Nach den Zeugenaussagen und dem Sachverständigen-Gutachten hat der Angeklagte den Tod des Trompeters Hecht verschuldet, indem er ihm einen kranken Zahn ohne nähere Untersuchung mit einer Guttaperchafüllung versehen habe, durch die eine Blutvergiftung eintrat.

Gailingen. Das israelitische Landesasyl für alte und gebrechliche Leute ist feierlich eingeweiht worden. Es wurde zu Ehren des Großherzogs zu dessen 70. Geburtstag von den Israeliten Badens gestiftet; durch freiwillige Beiträge wurden etwa 90,000 Mark aufgebracht. Das Asyl trägt den Namen „Friedrichsheim."

Freiburg. Zum ersten Male werden in diesem Winter an der hiesigen Universität akademische Kurse für Kaufleute abgehalten. Jeder Kursus, der gegen mäßiges Honorar Jedermann zugänglich ist, besteht aus acht Vorlesungen. Mit dieser Einrichtung, die den Beifall weiter Kreise finden wird, ist hier der Anfang zur Volkshochschule gegeben. Es ist erfreulich, daß unsere Universität auch in dieser Weise den modernen Strömungen Rechnung trägt.

A WESTERN ROMANCE

The poet to the contrary, notwithstanding, there are occasions when "it might have been" are joyful words. Most men, upon meeting again in after years, realize this, and offer up prayers of thanksgiving.

It was so with Hurlburt.

In the early days of the Pacific coast Hurlburt was stationed at San Diego. It was a picturesque little town. Its streets were not much more than cow paths, and its houses were mostly of the good old pattern—adobes, one story high and built around a patio. In such a house as this lived Manuela Lopez, and in one of the cow path streets Hurlburt first met her. It was upon a Sunday.

She had read no books that could have told her that it was the acceptable thing to do; she had probably never given such subjects a moment's thought; but when the mind of a child becomes the mind of a woman, it is at one bound, not by slow degrees. Inspiration struck full upon Manuela's brain and she dropped her rosary. From which it may be inferred that the love of the fathers and the wisdom of ages has taught woman nothing new in affairs of the heart. The impulse of the intrigante and of the child of nature are the same.

Hurlburt, of course, was close to Manuela when the rosary dropped. He returned it to her. If she had not been with a servant he might have spoken. As it was, he observed more narrowly what he had been observing for some moments as he approached, that she was graceful and pretty. Then he raised his helmet and passed on.

The same day, after lunch, he said to his host, as they sat smoking under the ramada: "Who lives in the house on the next street, where the two mocking bird cages hang on the wall?"

"You must be more explicit," his host said; "there are a number of houses on the next street, and one and all have mocking birds."

"Yes," said Hurlburt, "but there is a hedge of red and white geraniums in front of it."

"I saw you meet her," the civilian told him. "Her name is Lopez—Manuela, I think."

Hurlburt became very red. When your phlegmatic man grows embarrassed, he is badly embarrassed. It was some time before he regained speech and came floundering out of the sea of silence. When he did, he changed the subject.

Not that he abandoned the cause. Far from it. It took him two weeks, but he got himself introduced to Senor Lopez, and had taken care to call upon him. The senor was a well educated man, and the most hospitable of his hospitable race. He made Hurlburt free of the house at once, and showed him everything it contained, save only Manuela.

"You must come again, often," he said, as they parted. Hurlburt replied that he would, and went again in three days. Neither did he see his lady of the rosary upon this occasion. He addressed himself to Senora Lopez, who was handsome and well preserved.

"You have a daughter, have you not, senora?"

Senora Lopez understood just so much English as she chose. She did not choose to understand this. She turned her soft eyes upon her husband and he answered for her.

"We have a daughter," he said, "but she is very young."

Hurlburt understood that he had offended a semi-oriental prejudice.

It having thus been made obvious to him that Manuela would not be produced by her parents, he went to an early mass at the church, met her, and introduced himself. It chanced that she was alone.

"May I walk home with you, senorita?" he said. "I have the pleasure of knowing your father."

"Yes, sir," said Manuela.

It was but a few hundred yards to her home, but he made the most of his time. Manuela answered in monosyllables and raised her eyes but twice. Hurlburt's infatuation was complete. Senor Lopez was angry. He was civil to the officer, but he sent the girl to her room at once.

"I met the senorita at mass," Hurlburt explained.

"Are you, then, a Catholic?" inquired the Mexican.

"No," said Hurlburt—and determined to pursue the policy that sages who know nothing of mankind tell us is invariably the best—"I went to church on purpose to meet your daughter. I saw her on the street the other day,"—he refrained in a moment of diplomacy from speaking of the dropped beads—"and I admired her very much. That is why I came to call upon you. I thought I would see her openly under her own roof. As I did not, I encountered her elsewhere. Now," said Hurlburt, leaning back in his chair in an easy pose that did not meet with the punctilious Mexican's approval, "I should like to ask you to be allowed to pay my court to your daughter."

Senor Lopez had no objection to the officer's suit, but he did object to his fashion of advancing it. He incased himself in perversity.

"My daughter, sir, is too young."

He rose to his feet by way of suggesting that Hurlburt would do well to take his leave. Hurlburt rose, too, but did not go.

"May I ask her age, senor?"

"She is 16 years old."

"You have told me that you married the senora when she was but 15."

"That was in the old times. We do not do so any more."

"But I will be willing to wait for a year, if Senorita Manuela will love me."

"Sir, we will talk no more concerning this. My daughter is too young to be married, and I do not wish to give her to an American"—which was not in the least true. Up to then it had been his plan to do so, but his obstinacy was roused.

The result was one that anyone, most of all a Mexican, should have foreseen. Hurlburt embarked upon an intrigue. He sent notes to Manuela, and got them from her in return. The notes led to meetings by night. The meetings led to infatuation.

The clandestine interviews continued for several months. Then Hurlburt made one last attempt at frankness. He went to Senor Lopez, and renewed his request to be permitted to pay his daughter court. The senor had conceived an unreasonable and great dislike for him, and refused.

Whereupon Hurlburt arranged another meeting with Manuela. He began to realize that they were both running terrible risks. Senor Lopez was quite equal to killing one of them if they should be discovered. But he did not suggest that to Manuela. Instead, he asked: "Do you love me, chiquita?"

"Yes, yes. Must I tell you so always?"

"Do you love me enough to leave your home for me?"

"I do not understand." The gentle eyes looked into his, perplexed.

"Will you marry me?"

"I would, but how can I?" she asked. "My father will not consent to it."

"Do you love me enough to run away from your father, to disobey him, and go over to Mexico, across the border, with me? We can be married there, and then come back."

Hurlburt was an impassive, unemotional man, but his nerves were upon a fearful tension as he waited for the answer of an irresponsible child. She appeared to consider, and ended by agreeing. Hurlburt was beside himself with happiness.

A week later they went across the line and were married. They returned immediately and had an interview with Senor Lopez. The Mexican was enraged. Hurlburt, having obtained what he wanted, was not inclined to be conciliatory, but Manuela and her mother patched up a peace. Manuela behaved beautifully, and Hurlburt was more enamored than ever. He took her back to his home, and for three days dreamed of a life of bliss. Then Manuela decided that she had had enough of living on honeycomb, and that she had tired of scented time. With no explanations and no reason save that she wanted to go she went. Her father, charmed at Hurlburt's discomfiture, refused to make her return to him, and guarded her closely. Hurlburt begged for one final interview, and it was granted. He was a sorry sight, pale and haggard and self-abasing. But Manuela was unmoved. She stood meekly before him, her folded hands holding a rose, her father and mother on either side of her. She was not in the least unhappy, and no grief had marred her prettiness.

"Manuela," said Hurlburt, "have you not changed your mind? Will you not come with me?"

She shook her head. "No," she said.

"Why not? Was I not kind to you? Did I not love you?"

"Yes, you were very kind. But I like better to be with my father."

It was useless to threaten, implore or reason. Manuela was gently stubborn. She would never go back to him; she did not like Americans.

When Hurlburt finally went away he decided that his heart was broken. He thought of suicide. He never could bear up under the disgrace, and it was not so great as his wretchedness. This frame of mind lasted for a year; then he became resentful; then he obtained a divorce; then he was ordered east, and it was ten years before he returned to the coast. He had with him his wife—a woman of his own people, very charming, very well suited to him in every way. She knew the story of his first marriage, and she knew that, whatever he might say to the contrary, he still regretted deep down in his heart the sweet, soft Mexican wife of his youth, of his season of dear belief and illusions. The knowledge was the one grief of her life. It threw a shadow of sadness over her eyes. But she kept it to herself, and for this unfeminine virtue the gods in due time rewarded her.

They went one day by ambulance from Wilmington, where Hurlburt was stationed, to Los Angeles. One of their mules got lame and they had to spend the night at a roadside ranch. A crowd of dirty Mexican children played around the adobe; several yet dirtier men lounged about the door; a fat, beshawled woman waddled across the yard; a yet more untidy one welcomed them.

Her greasy face was still rather pretty and young, but she was thick and heavy and stupid. When she looked full at Hurlburt she gave a little cry that was more of a grunt.

"Come in; I will tell my husband," she said, and shuffled away with her bare feet.

Hurlburt turned to his wife gravely. "I am sorry to have brought you here" he said, "but it is all we can do unless you prefer to sleep in the ambulance to-night. That—woman was my wife."

"So I supposed," she said. She laid her delicate hand on his arm. "Don't let it trouble you, dear. I do not mind. She smiled into his eyes, and the shadow was forever gone from her own.—Gwendolen Overton in the Argonaut.

A BAD INSTRUMENT.

By C. A. E. King, U. S. N.

Surveying a tropical ocean in June in a vessel of the old navy, always under steam, is not the lightest duty that naval men are called upon to perform, so it is little wonder that when the sloop of war Alert reached Yokohama after a long tour of this service, several of her officers were down with sickness. So their places were filled by others, drawn from the ships of the squadron, provisions laid in and preparations made to return south to the scene of her labors, the survey of Britomart Reef.

This reef, reported and placed upon the charts long ago, had been the terror of merchant skippers for years. It lay in the Pacific ocean, somewhere between the Bonin Islands and the Ladrones. Its exact location was in doubt.

There was great bustle of preparation on board the stanch little ship as stores and coal were taken on board.

The caterer of the junior officers' mess had told his messmates that a pleasant surprise awaited them when Guam should be reached, for that island, over which our flag now flies, was to be our furthest stopping place, and there under the "blood and gold" of Spain we were to learn the secret of all his smiles and pleasantries. So we cheerfully chipped in our hard earned silver dollars for mess stores, which Uncle Sam, with unappreciative acuteness, thinks his officers better able to buy than himself.

Shortly after we had sailed canned peaches came to be plentiful on the mess table, so that we had them stewed for breakfast, cold for tiffin and baked into pies for dinner. In fact, canned peaches soon came to be our principal diet, until we tore our hair and hurled abusive epithets at our smiling mate, the caterer. His appetite for peaches never palled, and for all the abuse he would only say:—"Wait until we get to Guam" and nod as if to say, "When Guam is reached how remorseful you will all be for this treatment of me."

All things come to an end at last, and one night the navigator told us we would see the shores of Guam at sunrise in the morning. What a joyful prospect it was to know that we would touch the green earth once more and learn the mate's tantalizing secret!

The ocean and sky grew ugly that night, and by ten o'clock we were pitching and tossing in a fearful sea that threatened to lay us on our beam ends. The heat was terrific, for it was a "black storm," and there was not a breath of wind, and one poor fireman, crazed with heat and work, rushed up from below and threw himself into the inky waters. Away went the lifeboat, and into it a fearless crew, but we never saw the man again, and it was with the greatest difficulty that we recovered the boat's crew after two hours of hard battling with the waves.

We were in the dead centre of a whirling storm, and the greatest intensity and danger seemed to lie toward our haven—Guam. The skipper, one of the best that ever trod a quarterdeck, was a wise man, and gave orders to work about slowly and steam easily—away from Guam! All night we labored to save the ship, and when at dawn the wind burst upon us we were ready to make a brave struggle for life. And so we pulled through at last, many, many miles to the north of Guam, and when the sea went down no order came to turn to the southward again.

We pushed along to the north hour after hour, and as the time went by the mate's smiling face grew dark and gloomy, melancholy and sad, and we pined for the secret we were to have known in Guam.

Still the canned peaches fed our hungry mouths at every meal; peaches morning, noon and night, until our patience was utterly exhausted, and we resolved to wreak vengeance on the mate and wring from him his secret.

We put our heads together one day at tiffin and refused to eat the peaches, and demanded to know, with one voice, why we had nothing but peaches, and what was the gladsome secret that we we would have had revealed had the skipper taken us to Guam.

The mate implored, we insisted, until at last, with tearful face and voice, he told us this tale of woe:—"You see," he said, in deep, funereal voice, "it was this way. I had heard that neither the Spaniards nor the natives of Guam had ever tasted the sweetness of canned peaches, and so I thought that if I bought a lot of it and took it with us we could sell the stuff for its weight in Spansh pesetas at the island and make ourselves a little fortune. So" (and here he shrunk from Dr. Jekyll to Mr. Hyde) "I put all the mess money in canned peaches—and we didn't go to Guam—and, oh, Lord! there is nothing left to eat but canned peaches."

Ominous mutterings and savage looks thereafter greeted each appearance of the ruined speculator who had staked his all (and ours) on peaches and had lost.

Yokohama and a real dinner were many miles away, but both were reached at last, and as we pledged each other in yellow wine at the Union Club the night of our arrival our hearts softened, and we had even a kind thought of the wretched mate and his most disastrous secret.

"I don't know whether to regard this young author as a marvel of courtesy or a phenomenal specimen of assurance," said the magazine editor's assistant.

"What has he done?"

FOOTBALL NOTES OF PARTICULAR LOCAL INTEREST.

Gossip and Points About Those Who Seek the Gridiron to Have Their Sport at This Time of the Year.

The return game between the Norwood Athletic Club eleven and the Westfield Juniors was played in this city Saturday morning and resulted in a victory for the Plainfield boys by a score of 18 to 0 The touchdowns were made by Peterson, 2, and Mason, 1. Gardner kicked the goals.

The Scotch Plains football eleven met the Alis second team Saturday afternoon on the new gridiron on John R. Marsh's property on Park avenue. Both teams made a number of costly errors, but the game proved to be an interesting one from start to finish. Both teams scored a touchdown in the first half, but in the second neither side were able to score, although the Scotch Plains team had a shade the best of it when time was called, the ball having been forced very near to their opponents' goal, and the chances were a touchdown would shortly have been made. The score was a tie, 5 to 5.

ROD AND GUN.

Henry Voehl, of the borough, was loaded down with rabbits on his return Saturday evening from a day's hunting, and several of his friends and neighbors were "remembered."

J. A. Smith, the grocer, returned Saturday from the south where he has been on a hunting trip. He presented his brother, F. E Smith, with two fine wild turkeys, captured while he was away

Conrad Bais, H. W. Dryer and Edward Chase, of Brooklyn, in company with M. W. Casterline, of this city, went out shooting last week and succeeded in bagging fifteen rabbits and five woodcocks.

GOLF.

Outside of the final play for the Chapman championship cup there were no special events on the course of the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club last Saturday. The attendance throughout the day was fair and altogether some excellent scores were made. In the contest for the Chapman cup C. W. Fisk beat R. M. Shepard 2 up and 1 to play. The next event in the schedule will be the mixed foursomes for the Gilbert cup and they will be played Thanksgiving morning at 10 o'clock. The last event on the schedule will be the play for the Fisk cup November 26th at 10 a. m., and mixed foursomes at 2:30 p. m.

NEW QUARTERS FOR HOPE CHAPEL.

Announcement Made Yesterday That a New Church Will Be Started Soon.

Plainfield is to have a new church. Not a new one exactly, only the outgrowth of a chapel. Hope chapel is soon to begin the erection of a permanent structure on West Fourth street in the lot next to its present site.

At the session of the Sunday-school of the chapel, yesterday afternoon, Superintendent H. C. Squires made the announcement that the erection of the new church would soon begin. The chapel has been steadily growing and has long ago filled its present quarters. The need of something larger and better was felt. The bequest recently received has placed the chapel in a better position to begin the work.

TIME

Does not wear out clothes half as much as the dirt they come in contact with makes them look worn out. Clothes can be cleaned, dyed and pressed to be almost as good as new as long as the fabric is there to work on. If you doubt this, convince yourself by trying us.

THE LORD'S PRAYER BY BOOTH.

How the Actor Entranced a Coterie of Diplomats in New York City.

"I think," said an old actor, in talking about the Booths, "the most thrilling experience I ever passed through was in New York city one time when quite by accident a number of foreign diplomats from Washington, a few American statesmen, some prominent New Yorkers and one or two of us professionals were gathered together in a smoking room in the Fifth Avenue Hotel, when somebody asked Booth, who by the merest chance happened to be there, if he would not repeat the Lord's Prayer for the assemblage. I was sitting not far from the tragedian when he fixed his eyes upon the man who made the request. I think it was Lord Sackville West, at that time British minister to the United States, and I shall never forget the peculiarly searching expression that Booth shot out of his dark eyes. They seemed to penetrate the very soul of the man at whom they were directed, and then, as if satisfied, resumed their wonted vacuous density.

"We were all breathless with anxiety, at least I was, for seldom would he ever recite off the stage, but at length he arose, walked to a little cleared space at one end of the room, and began a recital that even after all these years makes me thrill through and through. He said 'Our Father,' and never before had those two words been clothed with the majesty and reverence with which his look and tone enveloped them. And then he carried us into celestial regions, our spirits seeming to leave our bodies and follow his behest; he lowered us into depths too dark for Dante's genius to conceive or Dore's pen to portray; the power exerted over us was simply unnatural. His musically resonant tones sounded slowly through the room, and as he swayed his lithe body we unconsciously followed his motion. It was something horrible, beautiful, terrible fascinating—I cannot find words in the language to express it. There are none.

"I would not go through the scene again for a thousand worlds and yet if I had the opportunity I would brave any danger to hear it once more. Do you understand? Those few score words as delivered by Edwin Booth were the most powerful argument for Christianity that I ever heard, and could everyone on the face of the globe have heard them there would no longer be atheism. Booth stood out of the room when he had finished and a simultaneous sigh of relief arose, while without a word we stole away singly and on tiptoe, and I do not think any one of us think of that thrilling evening without a shudder. He was a great man, a great man."—Kansas City Times.

TOO UGLY TO DIE.

One of Bill Nye's Inimitable Stories Which Illustrates His Humor.

Two Bill Nyes or Artemus Wards or Mark Twains are never born, says the Philadelphia Times. The peculiar form of Nye's humor can be illustrated by this incident. One evening at the Union League here he objected in an apparently serious way to a certain story that had been told. He said that while it was not exactly irreligious in tone, it was irreverent. "Now," he continued, "I'll tell you a story which could be read with impunity to a mite society. There was a man who had to die. The doctor told him so, and urged him to die with neatness and dispatch. The man told the doctor to go out on the lawn and kick himself.

The doctor then advised the wife to go to him and explain the folly of keeping up his desire to live. "Tell him that it's only his nerves which are supporting him, and that if he will tell you what is preying on his mind he'll pass away like a bit of pie."

"So the agonized mother of the family went to the father of the same, and said: 'Hubby, you know I love you. Tell me what it is that worries you.'

"'Oh, go to bed!' said the invalid.

"Then the suffering mother appealed to her sorrowing children, but they, too, were unsuccessful.

"So as a last resort the priest was sent for. The situation was explained to him and he visited the invalid. 'My son,' said he, 'I am assured by the best medical advice that death is inevitable to you. There is a burden on your mind. Disclose it to me before I give you absolution.'

"The invalid sighed. 'Oh, well,' said he, 'if you put it that way, I'll tell you the facts of the business. I'm so horribly ugly I'm ashamed to be laid out.'"

A Background Which Put a Congressman In a False Position.

"I guess," said the congressman, as he entered the photograph studio, "that I'd better let you take these back and try it over again."

"Didn't your photographs please you?" asked the young woman behind the show case.

"Yes, they pleased me first rate."

"The likeness is remarkably good," she commented, as she held out one at arm's length.

"It is. If the resemblance weren't quite so strong I might have kept them for my family and myself to look at. We would tell the neighbors it was somebody else, and have made them believe it. But there would be no use in trying to deceive them with that picture."

"What is it you object to?"

"The surroundings."

"But this is one of the most popular backgrounds in our gallery. Everybody understands that such things are only painted on canvas."

"No," was the reply, "everybody doesn't understand it. I wouldn't have one of those pictures get into the hands of the opposition just before election for $10,000. You'll have to give me some pictures with another background, even if I pay for having it painted, to order. Look where you have me! Seated on a plush armchair, in halls of Byzantine architecture, with a garden of palms in the background. It won't do. What I'll have to have is a perspective showing a barn and a hay wagon, with a hired man in the middle distance, while I stand in the foreground, with an earnest expression on my face, as if I were telling him exactly what we must do if we expect to save the country."—Washington Star.

FLOWER-LOVING ROYALTY.

The members of the royal family confess to a great love for flowers of all kinds. The queen has a special weakness for lilies of the valley and violets and cares to have them about her rooms. Her intimate friends, knowing her favorite blossoms, send her these in profusion upon her birthday, at Christmas and the new year. Violets, the pet flowers of the late Emperor Frederick of Germany, have become quite sacred in the eyes of his widow, and she has often been deeply touched when, while paying her annual visits to England, mere strangers have offered violets "in remembrance of her beloved husband."

The Duchess of York is much interested in the cultivation of flowers. For her own personal adornment she prefers lilies of the valley and white roses—the roses of York. The Princess of Wales, however, is the most ardent enthusiast for flowers, and is never content unless her rooms are simply one mass of scented blossoms. In her own boudoir at Marlborough house, and at Sandringham, every available table or stand bears a burden of plants in pots, and vases frequently replenished with choice cut flowers; and in the hall at Sandringham the palms and greenery are a delight to behold. As for the Prince of Wales, he cannot endure to be without his "buttonhole."—Paris Daily Messenger.

A Lye-Eating Family.

"Strange, pliant subject is this human frame; adapts itself to most anything! Feed it on alcohol a while and it craves more; give it arsenic, strychnine, or any old poison, and a craving is at once set up." So began a popular railroad "talking man," as he drew back from his typewriter and wiped his glasses. "Upon my recent trip to West Texas I came upon a case in point. Out beyond Fort Davis there is a section of country which for unadulterated alkalinity beats anything on earth What water there is tastes somewhere between castor oil and vichy and soda, while every bit of plant and animal life has become so impregnated with caustic potash that leaves and skins, barks and furs glisten like the costume of a ballet dancer in a 'feerie,' and alkali has become as necessary to them as drink to a dipsomaniac.

"I saw one family which had imbibed and eaten such quantities of alkaline matter that the neutralizing effect of the slightest acid was torture to them, what they craved being more and more of the burning salts. In their composite kitchen and dining room I noticed a row of bright new tin cans upon a shelf. I first took them to be condensed milk, but picture my horror when the mistress of the house took down one of the cans, which I then saw was concentrated lye, opened it, and gave a heaping spoonful to each of the children all around. They licked it down with evident relish and went back to their games.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

An Early Woman Editor.

Jonas Green edited and published the Maryland Gazette at Annapolis, Md., for twenty-one years, and upon his death, in 1767, it was continued by his widow, Anne Catharine Green, during the most eventful period of Maryland history. During a hot newspaper controversy with Rev. Bennett Allen, "the fighting parson of Maryland," who subsequently killed Lord Dulany in a duel, the parson visited Mrs. Green's printing office and threatened to "knock up her press if she printed any more pieces" about him. His conduct only had the effect of making Mrs. Green a popular heroine and bringing about her election to the office of printer for the proprietary government, which she held until long after the Revolution.—Philadelphia Times.

Might Have Got Wet.

The patience of the average Arkansas farmer is abnormal. He is never in a hurry, and he thinks things are bound to come right if he only waits.

The writer, in passing through the hills of upper Arkansas, found his progress stopped by a swiftly flowing river. Toward the center of the river was a team, a wagon and a man. The team was stationary and the water eddied and foamed around it. The man was complacently smoking a pipe. Pushing his horse into the current the writer approached the team, and the man evinced a languid interest in his approach.

"Why don't you move on?" was asked.

"Can't."

"Why not?"

"Wagon's locked. Back part swung back with the current, and here we are. Can't move a locked wagon."

"What are you going to do about it?"

"I was thinking."

"How long have you been thinking?"

"Since early morning."

It was now afternoon.

The rider fastened one end of a rope to the tongue of the wagon and the other end to the pommel of his saddle. The vehicle was straightened out and the horses sprang forward under the lash. Soon the farmer and his team were safely landed.

"Didn't it occur to you to unhitch your horses and go for help?" was asked.

"Well, if I'd 'a done that, I'd 'a got wet," was the calm response.—Detroit Free Press.

ROCKFELLOW MAY BE REPUBLICAN'S MAYOR

He is a Prominent Candidate for Nomination.

OTHER MEN SUGGESTED.

REPUBLICANS WANT LOCAL BUSINESS MAN TO HEAD TICKET.

D. E. Titsworth and Capt. J. Frank Hubbard Have Been Mentioned For Nomination—A Strong Fight to Be Made This Year—Mr. Barrows Will Not Run—Candidates For Councilmen.

The Republican party of the city of Plainfield has met with opposition, it has had some of its caadidates defeated, but never in its history has it encountered such a situation as exists today. If the Republicans are victorious at the coming municipal election it will be because they put up a strong ticket and work hard in its favor.

The leaders of the G. O. P. in this city are perfectly aware of the state of affairs. They know that there is a large number of voters who are dissatisfied with the past administration. Whether that number is sufficient to overcome the regular Republican majority here, no one will know until after election. The most important office to be filled at the election will be that of Mayor. Much opposition has been made against the present administration on the ground that the commuters or "roosters" were running the city machinery while the local business men had little or nothing to do with it.

It is pretty well understood that it would be folly for the Republicans to nominate a commuter for Mayor this year. The feeling against such a move is too strong right in the party itself to permit such a step. There was considerable talk of Councilman E. T. Barrows as the mayorality candidate but the principal G. O. P. men said that it could not be. Mr. Barrows, they said, must give up all aspirations in that direction and be content with his present office for a time at least.

The name of David E. Titsworth was mentioned as a desirable man. Very popular as Mr. Titsworth undoubtedly is, combined with the fact that he is employed right in the city, it was thought that he would run well. Mr. Titsworth spoke very strongly, however, and declared that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances. Capt. J. Frank Hubbard was also spoken of as a good man for the office, but Capt. Hubbard soon ended the little boom by a firm refusal.

At present, the name of George W. Rockfellow stands well for the choice of the party. He served one term as Mayor, and is one of Plainfield's leading merchants. He has not taken any active part in politics of late, but is considered a good Republican. The leaders have made no definite selection as yet, but those who are well-informed on the subject say that, at present, Mr. Rockfellow seems to stand first in the race for the nomination.

The nomination of the ward Councilman is also attracting much interest. It is conceeded that strong candidates will have to be nominated to give victory to the Republican banner. In the Second ward, C. S. Foote, who has taken an active part of late in Republican affairs in the ward, is mentioned as a candidate. So, too, is Thomas A. Cuming who has the advantage of being a local business man and particularly popular with the wheelmen.

Great pressure is being brought to bear on Councilman John T. Baker, in the Third ward, to have him run for re-election to the Council this fall from the Third ward. The name of Leslie Daniel has been mentioned as a likely candidate should Mr. Baker positively decline to run.

Y. M. C. A. Work.

The importance of the Y. M. C. A. work has been recognized in the Seventh-Daptist church by the following meetings: On Friday night two excellent addresses were given by Dr. A. H. Lewis and Stephen Cahoone, president of the association; Sabbath morning the sermon was addressed particularly to men; at the men's meeting, Sunday night, a most interesting and suggestive address was given by Dr. Lewis, and next Friday night the meeting will be led by Supt. H. M. Maxson, a director of the association.

Changed Officers.

At a meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church, Friday night, the secretary, Henry Drake, resigned, and Miss Florence Marsh was elected to fill the vacancy.

MONEY FOR CITY NURSE.

CHRYSANTHEMUM TEA GIVEN BY THE KING'S DAUGHTERS.

The Affair Held in Parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church Under Auspices of Charity Circle of King's Daughters.

A pleasant affair of yesterday afternoon and evening was the chrysanthemum tea given in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church under the auspices of the Charity Circle of King's Daughters for the purpose of raising money for the support of the city nurse.

The rooms in the chapel presented an attractive appearance arranged with a number of large American flags and chrysanthemums, while about the rooms there was a pleasing arrangement of seats for those who desired a social chat. The decorations were the efforts of Mrs. George Clay, Miss VanBoskerck, Miss Hunter, Mrs. Ira Travell and Miss Negley.

There were placed on sale fancy articles, candy and aprons, while a room was reserved for the serving of tea. The fancy table was in charge of Mrs. G. A. Chapman, Mrs. Garrigues, Mrs. W. T. Kaufman, Mrs. Kinnie, Mrs. William Stillman, Miss Harriet Halloway. Those who presided at the apron table were Miss Green, Mrs. VanWyck, Miss Margaret Tracy, Miss Hayes, Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Wright. Those in charge of the candy table were Miss Florence Marsh, Miss Ida Yerkes, Mrs. Ware, Miss Gertrude Rushmore, Mrs Arthur Slauson, Mrs. Machado, Mrs. Pinto.

The tea room was very prettily decorated with chrysanthemums and greens, and the arrangement of the table was much admired. Those who poured tea were Mrs. F. G. Meade, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. E. H. Lodd, Jr., Miss Scribner. Those in charge of the tea room were Mrs. Jules Erickson and Miss Marjorie Coe, and the waitresses were Miss Rodman, Miss Margaret Tracy, Miss VanBoskerck, Miss Eastman and Miss Carrie Vail.

The officers of the Circle who directed the affair include Mrs. L. H. Biglow, Jr., president; Miss Emily Tracy, vice president; Mrs. George Clay, treasurer; Mrs. Margaret Tracy, secretary.

During the afternoon those present were favored with several vocal solos by Mrs. Wm. L Saunders, and they were much enjoyed. In the evening Mrs. Robert Lowry gave a number of recitations, and Miss Marion Dumont rendered several piano selections, all of which added much to the pleasure of the event. The attendance both afternoon and evening was gratifying and a goodly sum of money will be realized toward the object for which the tea was given.

ILLUSTRATED LECTURE.

H. K. Samuelian Deals in Historical Lore About Constantinople.

H. K. Samuelian gave an illustrated lecture in the Y. M. C. A. last night upon Constantinople and the surrounding country. The lecture was largely attended by interested persons who gave the lecturer their attention.

Mr. Samuelian is an Armenian, whose parents came from Constantinople He speaks English quite well, and is preparing himself at one of the eastern colleges to return to his native land and preach the Gospel to his countrymen. The lecture last night dealt with the great city of Constantinople, its famous buildings and surrounding scenery.

Mr. Samuelian went over the early history of the city from legendary times to recent periods, in a very entertaining manner, so that much dry history was woven into the story without the hearers being aware of it. Views of famous ruins, mosques, temples, palaces and natural scenery were thrown on the screen, and all were explained by Mr. Samuelian in his charming manner. The lecturer, being a native Armenian, the places he accompanied his hearers to were all old to him and he was able to speak intelligently upon them.

HOT SHOT ABOUT THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

Lawyer Angleman Scores the Present Administration.

A CITIZENS' MOVEMENT.

AN INFORMAL MEETING IN FOURTH WARD LAST NIGHT.

Fifty Citizens Gather to Discuss Plans Concerning the Approaching City Election—Lawyer Angleman Made a Speech in Which He Discussed in an Acrimonious Manner the Prevailing Way of G. O. P.

A number of citizens of the Fourth ward, assisted by a few from other wards, met last evening in a vacant house on West Front street, near Clinton avenue, owned by Mr. Pound. The meeting was an invitation affair and was called for the purpose of taking steps to present a ticket at the city election to be held Dec. 13th. There were about fifty men present. Jacob Kriney called the meeting to order and by a vote of all present he was chosen chairman.

The first business was the selection of two citizens from each district of the Fourth ward as vice-presidents. Those selected are as follows: First district—Elmore D. Moffett, W. S. Angleman; Second district—Herman Weber, Arthur T. Gallup; Third district—Charles Randolph, Harry Pound

The meeting was then opened with remarks relative to the condition of affair as they now exist in the city and to the coming city election Councilman Moffett spoke and told the citizens present that his term expired this year. He was in favor of a citizens' ticket this year, the same as last year, and he believed it would win if properly managed.

The next speaker was Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman. This gentleman's remarks were straight from the shoulder. He dwelt at length on the matter of assessments for this year, as to their inequality and unfairness. He stated that the assessor appointed for the Fourth ward had only lived in the ward a few months, and knows very little about the property in that ward. He cited one instance where a property owned by a woman had been assessed double its value plus the value of the house on the lot, but he had not heard of any addition on the Crescent Rink building. He also spoke concerning the manner in which the Council had forced the people to connect with the sewer, even when they hadn't city water in their homes, thus compelling them to put in the water. He dwelt at some length on the city sewage beds, and told how it was possible for Mr. Frost to leave town and thus escape the odium of the beds. He had saddled a large expense on the people and then left town. "What does he care for Plainfield?" remarked Mr. Angleman. Mr. Angleman stated that the city is now being run by club-car men, a "ring," who have enough wealth to raise a corruption fund about election time and thus secure votes to place them into power. It is not possible for all of us to spend our winters at the Waldorf Astoria, or to live in elegant homes, remarked the speaker, but what is wanted is a Mayor and Council who will rule for the majority of the people in this city.

Mr. Angleman cited an instance regarding the city primaries one year. He said that a large number of citizens voted in one ward and were then taken to another ward where they voted again. He also cited an instance where a number of Plainfielders were coming home on the "owl" train. Their actions compelled the conductor to telegraph ahead to have a policeman at the Plainfield station to make some arrests. When the train reached this city the officer was there to make arrests, but when he saw the Plainfielders, he decided not to arrest. He was told to go about his business, which he apparently did The Plainfielders belonged to the gang that helped to form the "ring."

Regarding improvements in the Fourth ward, Mr. Angleman stated that on Third street within a block or two there are three saloons that furnish to the city a yearly revenue of $2,100, yet Third street has never been macadamized, all of which shows, he said, how much attention the Council pays to the ward.

E. A Laing, of the Third ward, was present, and made a few remarks. He was of the opinion that the assessments this year had been unjustly distributed. He said that there would be an increase this year of about $76 000 in assessments, but yet there is more money spent in the Third ward on the streets than in the Fourth ward. He said that the Mayor is

HOESTER'S LIQUOR STORE ENTERED DURING THE NIGHT.

The wholesale liquor store of Mrs. Eugene Hoester on Somerset street was burglarized last evening. The intruders gained an entrance easily and ransacked the place without interruption.

Last evening when Mrs. Hoester closed up the store she took all the money out of the safe and carried it upstairs, leaving the door of the safe wide open. The burglars gained entrance through a cellar window. They went up the cellar stairs and found their way into the room where the safe was. Finding the money gone, they broke open the door to a little compartment in the safe and took from it some receipts and valuable papers belonging to Mrs. Hoester. They then departed by the front door leaving it open.

This morning, the open door and the broken cellar window told of the robbery. Mrs. Hoester carefully examined the room and found the papers missing. She is unable to tell whether the burglars helped themselves to the liquor and cigars until a complete accounting is made of the stock. If they did make themselves at home, they were careful not to disturbe anything that remained.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

MR. AND MRS. J. PARKER MASON MARRIED TWENTY-ONE YEARS.

In Celebration of the Event They Entertained the Monday Evening Euchre Club—Prizes Given for the Best Playing.

The twenty-first anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. J. Parker Mason, of Stelle and Field avenues, was marked yesterday evening in a delightful manner. The celebrants entertained the members of the Monday Evening Euchre Club, and all joined heartily in celebrating the happy event. A feature of the affair was the unique style of dress of the guests. The women wore gowns of a red color, while the men donned red golf coats.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason received the hearty congratulations of their friends, and the principal portion of the evening was devoted to playing euchre. There were seven tables, twenty-one players, and the contestants were very enthusiastic in their efforts to secure the prizes. At the conclusion of the play it was announced that the first and second prizes for the women were won by Mrs. George A. Chapman and Mrs. F. O. Herring, while for the men Charles F. Abbott and Mr. Warren, of Fanwood, were the winners of the first and second prizes.

A very delightful repast was served after play and a social time was enjoyed. All agreed that the hospitality of the host and hostess was the feature of the event.

An unlooked for pleasure was the very able and happy address made by Former Mayor Alex. Gilbert, who, in his customary easy manner, spoke words of congratulation to Mr. and Mrs. Mason, and wished for them on behalf of all many happy returns of the day.

Interesting Prayer Meeting.

A very interesting prayer service was held last evening at Warren chapel in connection with the week of prayer meetings. The meeting was in charge of Rev. H. W. Hathway, of Elizabeth, and he made a few remarks of great interest and help to all present. A great many of those present took part in the meeting, and altogether it was one of the best services held in sometime. This evening the meeting will be in charge of Rev. G. W. Gardner, pastor of Grace M. E. church.

Grand Lodge Meets

The grand lodge colored Knights of Pythias meets today in Trenton. The delegates from Goodwill Lodge, this city, are James Scott, grand marshall of the State; Lewis Coon, grand recorder; R Cruse, grand councellor and William Kline, grand lecturer.

A Church Fair.

Commencing this evening and continuing tomorrow afternoon and evening and Thursday afternoon and evening a fair will be held in the German Reformed church on Craig place. Many attractions will be presented.

Engagement Announced.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lillian M. Dundon, daughter of John M. Dundon, of Brooklyn, to Robert M. Clark, the well-known young lawyer, residing on Jackson avenue.

—There will be a meeting of the finance committee of the Borough Council next Thursday evening.

THE DEMOCRATS WILL NOMINATE A TICKET.

Members of the Party Tired of Being Made Catspaws.

TO BE A STRAIGHT TICKET.

WHAT ONE DEMOCRAT THINKS OF THE SITUATION.

Time for the Democrats to Become Something More Than a Nonentity—Only Hope for Success of the Reorganization Plans is to Put Up a Ticket That Democats Can Go In and Work For.

Notwithstanding the movement of disgruntled Republicans, aided by a few Democrats, to put a Citizens' ticket in the field for the city election an earnest effort will be made to put up a strong Democratic ticket by members of that party who have come to the conclusion that the Democrats have been a nonentity long enough in local affairs.

In discussing the condition that confronts the Democrats, as a party, a prominent Democrat said to a Press reporter today:

"It seems to me that the only thing that the Democrats can do, to be honest with themselves and consistent in their actions, is to put forward a straight Democratic ticket. For several years now we have been playing into the hands of our political adversaries simply by not maintaining any sort of an organization and taking only spasmodic action in public affairs. It has been a cause of regret long enough, and if we ever hope to get out of this slough of despond it will have to be done by a party movement, in which disgruntled Republicans do not figure as managers.

"Here and there I meet Democrats who say we can't win with a straight ticket. Democrats that talk that way are looking backward. Of course we can't win if we are going to put up a lot of men for the sake of seeing them knocked down on election day. Why don't these pessimistic Democrats look forward a little bit. Don't they know that there is an effort being made to reorganize the party machinery and that it is in a fair way to succeed, unless the Democrats abandon their chance of giving the party something tangible to work for in the shape of a party ticket.

"For one, I am tired of seeing the Democrats made catspaws of by Republicans who are urging the Citizens' ticket principally for the sake that they may land in some public office and 'let the devil take the hindmost.'

"There doesn't seem to be any reason why the Democrats can't go forth into the municipal campaign and make as good a fight, or better, than the Citizens' or Republicans. Some people keep telling you not to put up a ticket this year. Well, when when are we going to do it? If we follow their advice it will never be done and the Democrats may as well get out of the community as a political factor. If the time was ever opportune it is now The Republican city administration was never so unsatisfactory and if we can't win under these circumstances, and with their own party ranks divided, we never can hope for victoty.

"I believe that a Democratic ticket, strong and clean, and backed up by an organization that is effective in working details and will be able to bring out the vulnerable points of the Republican record, will win.

"Just now there are enough Democrats interested in the reorganization of the party to work like beavers to carry a party ticket to success and build up an effective party organization, but if no party ticket is put up the Democrats will revert back to the same worthless position they have been for some time as a party. The Democrats have everything to gain in such a contest, and it is the manifest duty of the party to put up a straight ticket."

A Bachelor Dinner.

Howard W. Beebe, who is to be wedded this evening to Miss Gertrude Baker, daughter of Councilman and Mrs. John T. Baker, of Stelle avenue, at the Crescent Avenue church, gave a farewell dinner to ten of his bachelor friends at New York Saturday night. The party was composed of the best man, ushers and several intimate friends.

Dinner to Bridal Party.

Miss Gertrude Baker gave a dinner last evening at her home on Stelle avenue to the bridal party which is to take part in her wedding at the Crescent Avenue church this evening. Covers were laid for eighteen. The table was handsomely decorated with mammoth white chrysanthemums and smylax, and pink and white ribbons.

INSPECTING G. A. R. POSTS.

Commander Smith Visited Lincoln Post in Newark.

William C. Smith, Department Commander of the G. A. R., made an inspection of Lincoln Post, Newark, last night. He was accompanied by I. H. McVoy, William Day, Edward C. Morse, V. W. Nash and William R. Mattox.

The post made a fine appearance, and were highly complimented by the commander.

An entertainment by professional minstrels was provided, and there were recitations and music. A banquet was served at 10 o'clock to which all did justice, and at 12 o'clock the Plainfield delegation reached home. Tonight Commander Smith and delegation, accompanied by their wives, will visit the post at Bayonne.

ENTERTAINED MINISTERS

Dr. Lewis Read a Paper of Interest to the Clergymen.

The Plainfield Ministers' Association were entertained last evening for the first time by Rev. Joseph O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel. There were about twelve members present, and Rev. Dr. Lewis prepared and presented a paper on the subject "The Logical and Historical Connection between Christianity and the Bible." The paper was an able one and induced an enthusiastic informal discussion on the part of all present This is the first time in two years that Dr. Lewis has presented a paper before the association on account of the many duties that has kept him busy, and his presence at the meeting was greatly enjoyed.

Half Yearly Meeting of Friends.

The half yearly meeting of the Friends will be held in the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue this week. On the fourth day, at 8 o'clock, there will be a youths' meeting led by Joel Barton, of Chester, Pa. Thursday (fifth day) a business meeting will be held at 11 o'clock, and at 2:30 o'clock a philanthropic meeting. At 8 o'clock an illustrated lecture upon the colored schools of the south will be given by Mr. Jackson, of New York. The meeting will close Friday with a prayer service at 11 o'clock. A cordial invitation is extended to every one to attend these services.

Approaching Marriage.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Mabel Coard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Coard, of East Ninth street, to Ernest Franke, of Germany, which will take place Monday, November 28th.

NEWARK INSTITUTE LOST TO PLAINFIELD.

A Rough Basket Ball Game Played Last Night.

A DISGUSTING EXHIBITION.

VISITORS WERE FINALLY OUTPLAYED AT THEIR OWN GAME.

It Did Not Look Like Basket Ball at All—Men Were Upset and Thrown About the Floor—George Proctor Smith Did All the Scoring for Home Team—Not at All Like Usual Games Played Here.

Such exhibitions of basket ball, like the one witnessed in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening, are not all conducive to the elevation of the sport. The team from the Newark Institute came over to play a return game. It wasn't basket ball—such a game as the visitors put up could not be dignified by such a name. To the audience it looked far more like football, and not very gentle football at that. But the visitors were beaten at their own game, and victory went to the home team by a score of 10 to 5.

Those Plainfielders who witnessed the game in the gymnasium of the Newark Institute say that it was rougher than the game last night. The game last night was enough, however, to disgust the lovers of real basket ball who witnessed it.

From the very start the Newark boys played a rough game. They threw their opponents, held them and batted them if they happened to be in the way.

It was, after all, a decidedly exciting game. In the first half neither side did much scoring. A goal from the field was thrown by each side and the Plainfield team secured a goal on a foul, making the score 3 to 2 in favor of Plainfield at the end of the first half. The half took considerable time as several men were injured and time had to be called to give them a chance to recover.

In the first part of the second half the score remained very close, then the local players braced up and ran the score up to 10 points while their opponents could only make half the number.

George Proctor Smith played the game of his life. He was everywhere at once, blocked his man well and did all the scoring for the Plainfield team. A large number of fouls were called on the visitors and had their official done his duty, the number would have been much greater. The local management says that the game will end any future matches with the Newark Institute.

The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD Y.M.C.A.		NEWARK INSTITUTE.
E. Moralier	right forward	Swertfaehrer
Carroll	left forward	McMannis
Egan	centre	Hill
M. Moralier	right guard	Pardue

PLEASURE AFTER BUSINESS.

An Interesting Meeting Held by the Royal Arcanum.

One of the most interesting meetings ever held by Plainfield Council, Royal Arcanum, took place last night. Two applications for membership were received, and an evening of pleasure was spent and the entertainment closed with refreshments and a smoker.

Members of Sattel's orchestra were there, and played several selections through the evening.

Councilman W. N. Runyon and F. J. Pope favored the members with vocal solos, and Stewart Pope played several piano solos.

At the meeting to be held December 12th the grand officers will be present, and the prizes will be awarded to the two brothers who have secured the largest number of new members this year. The prizes are a graphaphone and a Waterman fountain pen.

Resolutions Forwarded.

The framed set of resolutions passed by Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W, several weeks ago thanking the members of the lodge at Niagara Falls for the aid they rendered E. E. Marshall, a member of Columbia Lodge, when he was taken ill there last summer, were sent yesterday. The resolutions were handsomely framed, packed tightly in a box and sent away by express

IS THE TROUBLE OVER?

REFUGEES IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The president is much disturbed by the recent race conflicts in the Carolinas.

Delegations and committees from all parts of the country representing colored organizations, are asking for an opportunity to be heard, but the president's advisers are discouraging their coming.

The administration is hoping that the trouble is over, and all effort is made to give out that impression.

The attorney general said yesterday morning that he had received from Ernest F. Cockran, assistant United States attorney for South Carolina, a letter saying:

"I have just had a confidential interview with a responsible man, on whose statements I rely. He has been at and near Greenwood during the whole time of the disturbances. He reports that there was no violence on Friday and Saturday, and that no further trouble is anticipated. All bands have dispersed. I have concluded not to send a man to the scene."

Tolbert, the late Republican congressional candidate in the Third South Carolina district, is still in Washington, and is said to be desirous of appearing before a congressional committee of investigation.

The Democratic newspapers in this vicinity are doing their best to get the Republican party to take some action looking toward a federal election law, for they know that the serious threat of any such thing would send Maryland and West Virginia back to the Democrats.

Republican leaders will not be likely to fall into the trap.

Three of the Wilmington, N. C. refugees have arrived in Washington, and yesterday they called at the department of justice, and an appointment for a conference with the officials was made for the afternoon.

They are B. H. Dunning, United States commissioner and justice of the peace; John R. Melton, chief of police, and C. H. Gilbert, superintendent of city carts.

According to their statements all were seized without warrant and escorted to the railroad station by an armed and jeering mob, who shouted all sorts of insults after them as they marched along.

"White niggers" appeared to be the least of the insulting names with which the crowds greeted them at every step.

Once on the train they were told in forcible langunage that if ever again they set foot in Wilmington they would be shot on sight.

When their train arrived at Newberne it was boarded, they say, by ex-Mayor Ellis and a lawyer named Green, and they were informed that they would not be safe for them to remain there any length of time, and so they took the first boat for Norfolk.

Brown, a negro from Wilmington who did not leave at the same time with them, they had since heard, was set upon by a crowd and terribly beaten in the city postoffice. At other points they were warned not to stop.

The three men are at present stopping at a small hotel on Pennsylvania avenue, but what they will do or where they will go from here is a serious question with them.

They say that they dare not return to their homes in Wilmington, as they feel certain that the threats of the mob will be carried out, and they would be shot.

They plead not guilty to every charge made against them, and insist that they were run out of the state for the single reason that they were Republicans and refused, at the bidding of an irresponsible mob, to surrender their right of franchise.

Late Army Orders.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The retirement from active service of Brigadier General William S. Worth by the president, and upon his own application, after thirty years' service, is announced.

Major Herbert Lord, additional paymaster of volunteers, is relieved from further duty at Manila, and will return to the United States and report to the paymaster general of the army. Major Lord is the late clerk of the committee on ways and means in the present House, and will probably resume service under Mr. Dingley on returning to America.

Other army orders include these:

Corporal Jay Clark Bissell, Company F, Sixty-fifth New York volunteer infantry, now at Buffalo, is transferred as a private to the Two Hundred and Second New York volunteer infantry, and will be sent to Camp Meade.

Gen Roe to Command.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Major General Charles F. Roe is to command the National Guard of the state after January first next. His appointment has already been made under the law passed by the legislature last winter, and which takes the appointment of commander of the National Guard out of the governor's hands.

The adjutant general is the present commander, simply because Governor Black desired his friend, General Tillinghast, to remain in power until the close of his term.

Death Better Than Manila.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 15.—Lieutenant Herman G. Dressel of the United States navy committed suicide in the Carrollton Hotel, this city, yesterday morning, by shooting himself in the head.

From papers found on his body it is surmised that he killed himself because he had been ordered to Manila to join the United States ship Zafiro.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

Present Spanish Commission Will Not Agree to a Treaty.

TERMS MUST BE ALTERED

Will Probably Suggest That Negotiations Be Continued Between Madrid and Washington. No Joint Meeting Until Wednesday.

Paris, Nov. 15.—There was no joint session of the peace commissions yesterday. Secretary Moore of the United States commission, received from Secretary Ojeda of the Spanish commission, in the morning, a note saying that the Spanish commissioners had found it impossible to prepare their memorandum for presentation yesterday, and asking if the United States commissioners would be inconvenienced if, owing to the late arrival from Madrid of expected data, the Spaniards should request that the next meeting be deferred until Wednesday.

Secretary Moore replied that the American commissioners were quite ready to accommodate the Spanish commissioners in this matter, and the joint session was practically deferred until Wednesday next.

Importance is attached to this delay, it being regarded as indicating that the Spanish commissioners are preparing for a final stand in these negotiations. It may now be definitely stated that the Spaniards here will not sign a treaty of peace which yields to Spain no more from the Philippine islands than has thus far been offered or indicated by the Americans.

Should the latter announce that the United States is only willing to reimburse Spain for her pacific expenditures in the islands, the Spanish commissioners will reply that their mission is finished.

Should this occur it is possible that the Spaniards will also suggest a suspension of the negotiations through the commissions and the resumption of negotiations between Madrid and Washington.

Personal Reasons.

This attitude of the Spaniards is explained by the fact that the members of the Spanish commission have political alliances and personal responsibilities to constituencies and the national creditors of Spain which restrict them to certain lines, which are as far as the ministry of Madrid cares to go. It is pointed out that if the five Spanish commissioners here signed a treaty yielding the Philippines to the United States without lessening Spain's debt in an appreciable degree, they could not return home with the prospect of any political future before them, and possibly would be in danger of violence at the hands of mobs.

At the next meeting of the commissions the Americans will learn the definite attitude of Spain on any proposition thus far made.

The Spaniards, however, in this presentation, will not declare all negotiations closed. They will insist that the sovereignty of Spain over the Philippines is beyond question, but will announce Spain's readiness to yield that sovereignty for an adequate equivalent, and will then invite negotiations under the Spanish construction of the protocol.

The American commissioners may then communicate their final attitude to the Spaniards, but the Americans are expected, at a future meeting, to present a carefully prepared conclusion of their contention and conditions.

Should it be no different from those already presented, the time will then have arrived when Spain will declare herself helpless though steadfast, and will await the next step of the United States, whatever it may be.

Thus Spain will be able to say to her creditors that she has done her utmost and that the issue must rest between them and the United States.

Chamber of Commerce Banquet.

New York, Nov. 15.—The 130th annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce will be held at Delmonico's this evening.

At the conclusion of the dinner the toasts, six in number, and all on national questions, will be given, to which speakers of national reputation will respond.

The hall is profusely and tastefully decorated with the American and English colors, typifying Anglo-Saxon unity.

The tables will be artistically decorated with American Beauty roses, chrysanthemums and smilax.

Mr. Alexander E. Orr will be the presiding officer.

Mr. Peck Sees the President.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Commissioner Peck of the Paris Exposition arrived here from New York and called upon President McKinley yesterday morning to report progress.

The interview was a very pleasant one, and after receiving some instructions, Mr. Peck visited the state department for further advices. He returns to New York to-day and then goes to Chicago.

A Yukon Express Project.

Montreal, Nov. 15.—The incorporation of a company to be called the Yukin Overland Express and Transportation Company, is sought at Ottawa.

The company proposes to construct and operate a wagon and sleigh road from Lake Bennett to Dawson, and branch roads to other points.

It will do a general freighting and express business.

Big Shoe Strike.

Marlboro, Mass., Nov. 15.—The joint executive council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Unions at noon ordered out the 2,600 employes in seven factories.

The S. H. Howe Company, Rice & Hutchins and J. A. Frye and Co. are the firms affected.

Archbishop Gross Dead.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 15.—William Hickley Gross, archbishop if Oregon, Roman Catholic church, died at St. Joseph's Hospital, this city, yesterday morning of heart disease.

NAVAL ACTIVITY AT NORFOLK.

Large Shipment of Ammunition to Dewey's Fleet.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 15.—The largest shipment of ammunition made from the government magazine since the peace protocol was signed was made yesterday, when a train of the Southern Railroad left with 25,000 shells of the six-pound size for Mare Island navy yard, San Francisco.

Night and day work is now going on on the gunboat Princeton, in pursuance of an order of the navy department to have her ready for sea as quickly as possible.

The Princeton is to join Rear Admiral Schley's eastern squadron, now forming in Hampton Roads.

Work is also being pushed on the monitors Puritan and Terror so that they may be available for service at short notice.

The repairs to the San Francisco may keep her here a year if no emergency arises.

Dingley Says "No Revision."

Washington, Nov. 15.—The Washington Post says that the war tax will not be abolished at the coming short session of Congress and that there will be no revision of the tariff whatever. It bases this announcement upon the positive statement made by Chairman Dingley of the ways and means committee, who, in an interview, said:

"The government will need for some time all the revenue produced by the war taxes. During the month of October the war expenditures exceeded the war revenue by some $14,000,000, and this month they will be $10,000,000 in excess. This being the case, there will be no change this fiscal year. The war revenue act will continue in force and unchanged, except, perhaps, in a few minor administrative features, for at least a year longer.

"It is hardly necessary to add," continued Mr. Dingley, "that there will be no revision of the tariff, although I have seen some statement to the effect that such a revision is contemplated."

Croker's Western Visit.

Chicago, Nov. 15.—Richard Croker, the great Tammany leader, is here. In an interview last evening he said:

"My visit to Chicago has nothing to do with politics. I am going to the springs at West Baden, Indiana, for rest and to try another cure for dyspepsia. While I am in Chicago I shall call on some of the boys who came to New York to help elect Van Wyck mayor. There is a friendly feeling between Mayor Harrison and myself, you know, and I shall see him to-morrow. But there will be no politics in it. I want to say that any stories about my coming out here to form a political deal with your mayor are wrong, all wrong. I am seeking rest and health, nothing more."

Glass Factories Start Up.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 15.—Window glass factories, with a capacity of about 1,100 pots, have started work and nearly ten thousand men and boys are earning their first money in more than half a year.

Of the 1,900 pots controlled by the American Glass Company, only about 500 were operated before the agreement was reached Monday. The remaining idle pots will be in complete working order early this week.

Alexandria, Ind., Nov. 15.—After five months' idleness work was resumed at the United De Pauw and Alexandria Window Glass factories yesterday. One thousand men will get employment.

Fire at Dawson.

Skaguay, Alaska, Nov. 15.—Gold hunters returning from the Klondike have arrived here, bringing news that the city of Dawson has been visited by a $500,000 fire, in which forty buildings were burned, including the new postoffice and some of the best structures in the city.

The fire began on the morning of October 16. It started in the Green Tree saloon as the result of a row between two women of the town.

Belle Mitchell threw a lighted lamp at another woman. The lamp broke, the oil spread, and in a few seconds the building was on fire.

Miles Omitted an Important Order.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The Washington Post says that either by accident or design General Miles in his report omitted a dispatch which he had himself caused to be issued on May 9, contemplating the sending of all the available army to cuba.

This order, it is asserted, was vetoed by the president.

Put $5,000 in the Stove.

Kirkwood, Ill., Nov. 15.—J. H. Laird, a local merchant, yesterday had $5,000 in currency, wrapped up in a piece of newspaper, to take to St. Louis.

He laid the package down in his bedroom while he took a bath, and in his absence a young daughter picked it up with some other papers and burned it in the stove.

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

THE SUPPLIES AT SANTIAGO.

Report of Lieut.-Col. Charles P. Eagan.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The report of Lieutenant Colonel Charles P. Eagan, commissary of subsistence of the army, has been submitted to the secretary of war.

It shows an expenditure of $6,008,715, with a balance of $20,222,689 to the credit of the bureau.

After detailing the conditions of the commissary department and its organization for the war with Spain, General Eagan comes to the Santiago campaign, of which he says:

"A very serious freight blockade at and in the neighborhood of Tampa in May and June, 1898, was caused by the celerity with which the troops and their supplies were concentrated at that place in preparation for the invasion of the island of Cuba. This blockade was a matter of grave concern to the subsistence department and it was only after the most peremptory orders of the commissary general of subsistence to unload cars and to hire warehouses, if necessary, that the officers of the department on the spot were enabled with unflagging zeal and untiring energy so far to extricate the department as to permit the Fifth army corps, when it sailed on June 14, to take a supply of rations sufficient to last the command of sixteen thousand enlisted men for four months, and the sending on June 26, 27 and 28 of further supplies."

TROUBLE WITH MEXICO.

Denver, Nov. 15.—A special to the News, from Nogales, Ariz., says:

"Excitement exists here over an episode which threatens to result in international complications. On Sunday last James Temple, a conductor on the New Mexico and Arizona Railway, was attacked by Mexicans. In defending himself he shot John Arvalla fatally. It occurred about two thousand feet north of the international boundary line. Later he returned to his hotel, south of the line, and was arrested by Mexican officers on a charge of murder, the law of Sonora providing for the trial of a person charged with crime against a Mexican citizen, though the crime may have been committed in a foreign country. Friends of Temple engaged an attorney, but the Mexican authorities refused to allow the prisoner to be seen.

"United States Consul J. F. Darnell appealed to the state department at Washington and received the following telegram:

"Darnell, Consul, Nogales, Ariz.:

"Have wired Legation at Mexico to demand immediate release of Temple.

"HAY,
"Secretary of State."

Temple is in prison at Magdalena.

No Conspiracy on the Buffalo.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The first intimation that there has been anything like an organized conspiracy to prevent the sailing of the cruiser Buffalo reached the navy department by way of the newspaper reports.

The officials give little credence to this story. They say it is frequently the case when a vessel is hurried away from the navy yard, after hasty repairs, as was the Buffalo, things go wrong to such an extent as to excite suspicion in some minds that evil-minded persons are responsible.

The finding of small articles belonging to sailors inside of the condensers is not of itself a fact unexplainable, except upon the theory of conspiracy to damage the ship.

Such things have often been inclosed in boilers and cylinders by careless workmen. The bad condition of the valves referred to as an evidence of tampering, is explained by the fact that the machinery of the Buffalo suffered much, not only from neglect, but from bad handling, during the several years she lay at anchor in Brazilian waters.

Arrival of the Obdam.

New York, Nov. 15.—The United States transport Obdam arrived yesterday from San Juan and Ponce, Porto Rico, and Santiago, with seventy-two convalescents, discharged soldiers, and civilians.

There was but one death on board, that of Elmer Hathaway of the Hospital corps of the Santiago General Hospital, who died of consumption on November 1 and was buried at sea.

Hathaway's home was at Riley, Kan.

The Obdam brought the body of C. D. Jacob, private of Company G, First United States volunteer cavalry, who was killed at San Juan Hill, on July 1.

United States Supreme Court.

Washington, Nov. 15.—The United States supreme court has affirmed the judgment of the lower court and denied a writ of habeas corpus in the case of John Anderson, convicted and sentenced to be hanged after a trial at Norfolk, Va., for the murder of the mate of the Olive Pecker.

Chief Justice Fuller, in announcing the decision, held that Anderson had not been denied a constitutional right in not having counsel of his own choice at the trial.

The court adjourned for two weeks, and when it reassembles will announce the bankruptcy rule.

The Government of Spain.

Madrid, Nov. 15.—Aragon has now joined with the other provinces of Spain in demanding the decentralization of the government, on which subject a Catalonian deputation was received in audience by the queen regent yesterday.

The Aragonians, in presenting their demands, point out that the "Anglo-Saxons of America, aided by the Anglo-Saxons of Europe, have obliterated half of Spain from the maps."

The Illness at Santiago.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—The war department has received a dispatch from General Wood at Santiago giving the following sanitary report for November 12:

Total sick, 1,115; fever, all kinds, 571; one death from typhoid fever.

Van Wyck's Expenses.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 15.—Augustus Van Wyck, the Democratic candidate for governor in the recent election, has certified to the secretary of state that his election expenses were $449.50.

THE HOSPITAL SYSTEM

Testimony of Dr. Huidekoper Is Taken by War Board.

CERTAIN CAMPS CRITICISED

Washington, Nov. 15.—The war inquiry commission resumed the examination of witnesses yesterday, with Dr. R. S. Huidekoper, lieutenant colonel of volunteers on the stand.

He said that he had occupied the position of chief medical officer of the First army corps at Camp Thomas, at Chickamauga Park, until the 23d of July, when he went to Porto Rico with General Brooke.

Speaking of the supply depot, he said that there was a good supply of some articles and a superabundance of others at the beginning of the history of Camp Thomas; but that this condition of affairs did not long continue. He had immediately undertaken to regulate requisitions so as to equalize them in the various divisions of the command.

At one time he had to appeal to General Brooke to get the supplies necessary, the deputy surgeon general insisting upon being guided by the supplies on the table, which was not a fair test.

"Do you not know," asked Dr. Conner, "that there was a full supply of medical stores at the depot at Lytle?"

"I know many articles were lacking," the doctor replied, and added that it was not true, as had been stated, that there was a full supply.

He had made constant representations to the surgeon general of the shortage of supplies. He had never turned down any requisitions from the division hospitals, except on one occasion, except when he knew that the articles were not on hand.

He had refused his sanction to a requisition for flooring for hospital tents when General Brooke had expected to move.

He contended that there had been a sufficiency of tentage, saying that no patients had been compelled to lie out without covering for any length of time.

It was true, however, that there were occasions on which the sick men had been kept for several days at a time under the tent flies.

"The Second and Third division hospitals," he said, in reply to a question, "were always clean and well ordered." Both institutions were well built, but they had suffered throughout for lack of proper attendance. There was never a sufficient number of hospital corps men.

On the other hand, the First division hospital was not so well conducted, for lack of discipline, due to the prospect of removal. He had repeatedly called attention to the lack of nurses, and about the first of July there was an increase of hospital corps men in response to his representations. The supply was never equal to the demand.

Reverting to the question of tentage, Dr. Huidekoper said he knew, of his own knowledge, that the surplus tentage at the reserve hospital was turned over to the division hospitals, and that tents had been held there to the detriment of other hospitals.

Colonel Huidekoper said that he had succeeded in getting supplies only by being the first on hand, as the medical depot was run in a very parsimonious manner. There was not only a great scarcity of important drugs, such as quinine and opium, but a disposition on the part of the purveyor not to give out what there was.

Dr. Huidekoper said that, with a few unimportant exceptions, the medical supplies for the Porto Rican expedition had been ample.

At Newport News he had given orders that the sick men be eliminated from the command, but he found that the order had been evaded and sick men taken aboard. This was especially true of the Third Illinois regiment, whose surgeon, Dr. Huidekoper said, had persisted from the start in breaking the spirit, if not the letter, of the law. The regiment had left sick at every town that it had visited.

Responding to a request from ex-Governor Beaver, Dr. Huidekoper detailed the particulars of his education as a physician, giving also his experience in military service.

He said that he had graduated as a physician from the University of Pennsylvania in 1874 and afterwards had studied much in Paris, Berlin and other European capitals, and had had considerable experience in hospitals and in general practice. He went to Europe a second time on the recommendation of Dr. Hayes Agnew, who desired to establish a veterinary hospital. After returning to this country he went to New York and was engaged largely in the manufacture of toxines, only practising medicine in charity cases.

He had been a surgeon in the Pennsylvania National Guard from 1874 to 1893, being brigade surgeon most of the time, covering the Homestead strikes and the Johnstown flood.

The witness asserted that the sick in Porto Rico had had good attention contradicting the assertion of Colonel Hartsuff that there had been negligence. He said it was not true that Dr. Hartsuff had taken charge of a hospital, as the latter had stated, because of mismanagement.

Dr. Hartsuff had volunteered to take a hospital on one occasion, but the offer had been declined, so that it was all on paper.

"In fact," the witness added, "General Brooke would have stopped him if he had attempted to do so."

The Kaiser's Progress.

New York, Nov. 15.—Baron von Hengelmuller, the Austrian ambassador at Washington, will start for Europe today on the North German Lloyd steamer Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

HARRIS VIOLATED RULES.

Captain Had No Right to Take Command of Maria Teresa.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—Nothing but the influence of his personal friend, Commodore Crowninshield, chief of the bureau of navigation, can prevent Captain Ira Harris, who commanded the Vulcan when the Maria Teresa was abandoned, from being court martialed.

It has leaked out at the department that Captain Harris deliberately violated an important naval regulation when he assumed command of the Spanish cruiser, and while holding this assumed command, abandoned her to her fate.

Captain Harris was placed in command of the Vulcan. The Maria Teresa was in command of Captain Chittenden of the Merritt Wrecking Company, and the secretary of the navy alone had it in his power to change this condition of things and place Harris in command of the former Spanish vessel.

Harris, therefore, directly violated a naval regulation.

Such an action would have been impossible for an officer of the regular service, but Harris, who entered the volunteer service at the outbreak of the war, is is believed, was rusty in his knowledge of naval regulations. When his dispatch announcing that he had abandoned the Maria Teresa was received, all the officers of the department took it for granted that by the word abandoned he meant that the vessel had foundered at sea.

They never for a moment believed it possible that he deserted the Spanish vessel while she had a chance to float, which turned out to be the case.

All these facts are now being considered by the secretary of the navy and the result will probably be the court martial of Captain Harris.

Major Garcia's Views.

New York, Nov. 15.—Major Justo Garcia, son of General Calixto Garcia, who is now in New York visiting his mother and invalid sister, was at the junta at 56 New street yesterday.

Major Garcia has been staying with his mother at 165 Lenox avenue. He said yesterday that he expected his father here before long and this expectation was confirmed by a dispatch from Havana which announced that General Garcia had arrived there en route to Washington. This dispatch Major Garcia read in the morning papers. He said:

"The sanitary condition of Santiago was never better. General Wood cannot be too highly praised for what he has done to preserve the health of the inhabitants of that city. The climate of Cuba is naturally hard upon any person visiting it from a northern clime and the death rate there still continues high, but conditions are immeasurably improved.

"Politically every Cuban who has even a little head of his own trusts in the faith of the United States. No thinking Cuban believes this noble country intends permanent occupation of Cuba. To provide Cuba with a stable government is the aim of the United States and there is nothing Cuba needs more now."

A Costly Seat.

New York, Nov. 15.—A seat on the stock exchange was sold yesterday for $28,000—the highest price in fifteen years. The advance in price has been due to the increase in Wall street business and the generally prosperous condition of affairs in the financial district.

The record price for seats is $34,500, made in 1881, and as there is a decided demand for the seats and there have been few deaths, it was predicted in Wall street yesterday that this price may again be reached.

The seats that have been sold in late years have been largely bought by young men, many of them rich men's sons starting in business.

Ohio's Gold Field.

Columbus, O., Nov. 15.—A special from Canal Dover, says: "Another discovery of gold is announced in the Malvern district near here. The latest find is at Augusta, a few miles north of Malvern, where M. O. Leyda has discovered on his farm an ore which he claims to be richer than the Malvern product. Specimens will be assayed at once. The discovery has increased the gold fever and has also caused the price of land to take a fabulous jump, so that it can be neither bought nor leased. In case the assay shows sufficient gold Mr. Leyda will at once purchase machinery to work the mine."

Horse Show Opens.

New York, Nov. 15.—The fourteenth annual exhibition of horses of the National Horse Show Association of America began yesterday. The show will last all the week and during this time the center of American fashion will be Madison Square Garden, where blooded horses will prance around a tan bark ring and people with pedigrees will congregate to look on or take a more active part.

The show promises to be more than usually interesting, and many noted specimens of the equine race will be on exhibition.

Troy Man a Suicide.

Troy, Nov. 15.—Adam R. Smith, president of the Oakwood Cemetery Association, committed suicide yesterday morning at his home by shooting himself through the heart. He was 72 years of age.

He was an eccentric bachelor and lived alone in a cottage within the cemetery grounds. He became connected with the cemetery association in 1868 as director and treasurer. He was elected president in 1870 and had held the office ever since.

Soldiers for Cuba.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 15.—Major General Lee will command the vanguard of the army of occupation which is expected to sail for Cuba within a fortnight.

The port of Cienfuegos has been selected as the point of disembarkation of the troops.

The president has decided that he wants a regular army man for military governor, but as yet has made no appointment.

Proposals for Macadamizing.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Common Council at the Council Chamber, No 109 Park avenue, in the City of Plainfield, at eight o'clock p. m. on Monday the twenty-first day of November, 1898, (for use in case the city shall be required to do the work), for doing the work and furnishing the materials for the macadamizing contemplated in the following ordinances, entitled: "An Ordinance for macadamizing East Ninth street between Park avenue and Watchung avenue."; "An Ordinance for macadamizing East Sixth street between Watchung avenue and Richmond St., excepting where already macadamized"; and "An Ordinance for macadamizing Franklin place between LaGrand avenue and East Fifth street", adopted by the Common Council and approved by the Mayor Oct. 27, 1898, and as provided for in the specifications on file in the office of the Street Commissioner.

Upon receipt of the bids or proposals the Common Council will immediately proceed to unseal the same and publicly announce the contents thereof in the presence of the parties bidding or their agents, provided said parties or agents choose to be then and there present, and also make proper record of said prices and terms.

The right to reject any or all bids is expressly reserved by the Common Council.

Separate proposals must be submitted for each street, endorsed, "Proposals for Macadamizing".

Bismarck's Memoirs.

Up to a very recent date the notion that Prince Bismarck had left any authentic memoirs aside from fragmentary ones was only half believed. In spite of the stories, revived at the time of his death, of certain marvelous revelations in manuscript, there were but few in the real secret. As the fact is now authoritatively announced, the memoirs covering his career up to 1893, with reflections and memorabilia, set up in corrected proof, have been in the possession of the great Cotta Publishing House of Stuttgart for more than three years. The intimations of Herr Busch, Bismarck's obsequious and idolizing Boswell, then, that the world would have nothing more to look to for an inside view of the great man's life beyond his own exposition, were either a deception or a blunder. Yet from such clews as have been given, with the consent of the Cotta firm, of the quality of the Bismarck book, the world will still find in the indiscreet reports of the German Boswell side lights of great interest. However Herr Busch may have colored his stories of the recluse of Friedrichsruh, they are too intensely Bismarckian not to be essentially true. In the frankness of conversation, too, it seems quite natural that the prince should have expressed himself with an audacious frankness about men and things which he shrank from in his authorized memoirs, published over his own name and by direct dictation. It was the Bismarckian way, one may fancy, of getting even with his enemies without subjecting himself to the direct imputation of revengeful indiscretion. There is something of the mingling of fox and lion in such an attribution of policy quite consonant with the great chancellor's character.

The memoirs filling three and possibly four volumes are to be issued in the latter part of November in German, English and French, a special English edition in this country now being in process of preparation. Two volumes only will be issued, however, immediately, covering the prince's recollections down to the death of the Emperor Frederick in 1888. The rest of the material, it is intimated, being of such a character as would call down a deluge of imperial wrath, will be retained from public acquaintance for the present. As respects the first two volumes, it is asserted on good authority, they contain nothing particularly explosive. They consist of a mass of recollections, opinions, reflections and sentiments which, however flavored with Bismarckian salt, do not smack of too much irreverence. The title chosen is "Thoughts and Recollections." It was the original purpose to have had this work issued before Bismarck's death, but wiser reflection determined him on posthumous publication. It is said that the highest English bid for the memoirs was about £15,000.

The Vote of New Jersey.

Returns of the vote of New Jersey are now practically complete. They show that Voorhees' (Rep) plurality for Governor is 5,510. McKinley had 87,692 in 1896, and Griggs 26,990 in 1895. Voorhees received 57,537 less votes than McKinley, and Crane 14,645 more than Bryan.

In the congressional districts the Republican plurality was 10,424, and in the Assembly districts 9,317.

The Newark Call has the audacity to suggest that perhaps Mr. Kean might be induced to retire from the canvass for the Senatorship to make way for "a man who would meet the public desires." Mr. Kean, by common consent, was almost as much of an issue in the recent election as was Mr. Voorhees, and we hardly think that the Sage of Ursino will act favorably upon the Call's suggestion.

It would be very gratifying to see Senator Reed elected President of the Senate. But even though the "Tall Sycamore" of Somerset is not elevated to that position we imagine that he will be heard from in the next legislative session. The Senator has been in Trenton long enough to know how the legislative mill grinds.

In Rochester, N. Y., a city of 133,000 inhabitants, the votes were counted and tabulated thirty-seven minutes after the polls closed by the use of a voting machine. That knocks the Murray tally sheets galley west.

If the vote of the recent election was a fair criterion, New Jersey will soon be classed as an independent State. A few hundred votes either one way or the other will turn a victory.

Fred Bird is said to be an aspirant for the City Collectorship nomination on the Citizens' ticket. Mr. Bird has been very active in trying to get a Citizens' ticket in the field.

Dewey and Schley have both sent hearty greetings to Roosevelt over his election to the Governorship of New York. Politics is nothing between heroes.

The local political situation is slightly mixed just now owing to the movements both for straight Democratic ticket and a Citizens' ticket.

Besides a horse show this week, New York has a snake show. Who said that there wasn't anything new under the sun?

There is plenty of "horse sense" in New York society this week, but it takes dollars to learn it.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT ROOM.

Though not large in floor area the room of the Supreme Court, in the Capitol at Washington, has a high vaulted ceiling and was rich in decorations. The fire which occurred on Sunday, Nov. 6, destroyed the elaborate furnishings of the room, including the priceless busts of the chief justices and the valuable library of the Supreme Court.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The next Senate of New Jersey will be an exceptionally strong body. On the Republican side will be Pitney, of Morris; Stokes, of Cumberland; Johnson, of Bergen; Cross, of Union; Reed, of Somerset; Ketcham, of Essex; Smith, of Ocean, and Francis, of Monmouth, all men of long legislative experience, and several of acknowledged ability and skill in debate. Among the Democrats will be found McDermott, of Hudson; Van Cleef, of Middlesex, and Martin, of Sussex, all well qualified to look after the interests of the minority and able to hold their own in argument or parliamentary finesse. In the House neither party can make such a showing of proved and recognized ability. —Newark News.

A Tea-Cup Sociable.

This evening at the rooms of the Young Women's Club a regular business meeting will be held, at which time there will also be a tea cup sociable. The idea of this is to have each member bring a tea-cup and saucer, so that from time to time tea can be served. Every member is urged to attend the meeting and social.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"Kit, the Arkansas Traveler," will be presented in Music Hall tonight. The drama portrays the life of the backwoodsman, and big-hearted and kind old Kit showed just how happy a person can be when away from the snares and temptations of city life. Mary Beding is the one on whom the weight of the whole play rests. Manuel Bond, a bad man, seems to be bent on hunting her down and destroying her future happiness. He appears at the ranch and abducts her and her child, and when Kit returns from a hunting trip he finds that his wife and child are gone and he sets fire to the place and gives up the rest of his life to hunting down the villain and cause of all his misery. The entire play is a very interesting tale and there is just comedy enough in it to counteract the sadness of the tale. The judge and the major are the gayest old topers that a person would want to see, and, in fact, the whole company is strong in all the parts.

* * * * *

"The Girl from Frisco" will hold a reception at Music Hall Friday night. She is a fascinating young lady, breezy and beautiful, as all those Pacific Slope girls are. She has a lot of friends with her, including the Golden Gate Quartette, Myron Leffingwell, the well-known actor, and many others. There will be plenty of fun, as well as sweet singing and graceful dancing, but the play itself will be a rare treat.

A CITIZENS' MOVEMENT.

seldom in the city, and the home of the Council is in the club-car or at the Country Club.

Councilman Liefke, who was present, was called on and spoke briefly. He said that if he wanted to know what is going on the Council he has to go outside and learn. He spoke of the committees he is now on, but that he is never consulted as to any work of the Council.

Other remarks were made by Wm. Dodd, Herman Weber, Fred Bird, Jacob Kriney, Michael Higgins, V. L. Frazee, George O. Stevens and others.

Before the meeting adjourned Mr. Moffett moved that a committee of five Democrats and five Republicans be appointed to confer with similar committees from the other wards for the purpose of nominating a citizens' ticket. This motion prevailed and the following were appointed: Republicans—Jacob Kriney, Herman Weber, Henry Leifke, W. S. Angleman, Jos. Chapot; Democrats—E. D. Moffett, V. L. Frazee, Michael Higgins, George O. Stevens, Ira Hurlbut.

It was then stated that the next meeting would be held subject to the call of the chair, after which the meeting adjourned.

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, November 15.—Beginning with Thursday night of this week, the members of the Epworth League of the Methodist church will open one of the most elaborate fairs and entertainments ever held here. The fair will last until Saturday night when it will close with a grand clearing sale of everything that is left in the line of aprons, fancy goods and things to eat. The young people of the church are taking great interest in the bazar and are determined to make it a success in every way.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 15.—A young boy who gave his name as Charlie Ernest and said he was eight years old and lived at Union was found half clothed running around Westfield yesterday. To Overseer of the Poor Decker he told a woeful story of having been driven away from home by his parents who were both drunk. Mr. Decker provided suitable clothing for the boy and gave him something to eat and then sent him home. W. A. Chamberlain and R. M. Stickle undertook the job of driving the boy to his home, and at Springfield succeeded in finding where the uncle of the boy lived. They drove there but found that the boy lived in Newark. The uncle, Peter Ernest, who is an honest hard working milk farmer, said that the boy was roughly treated by his father and stepmother and that for the past week the boy had been with him. He promised to look after the little fellow.

At a meeting of the Township Committee of Cranford held last evening a bill for $257 was received from Miss M. E. Kimball, of the Plainfield Children's Home, for the board of three children by the name of Craner who had been sent to the home from Cranford. The bill was laid over until the next meeting, as there was not enough money in the treasury to pay it.

The members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. lodges of this vicinity will attend the services in the Methodist church next Sunday evening when Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson will deliver a special sermon.

POLITE NESS IN CHINA.

It Savors of Much Insincerity and Untruthfulness.

Europeans regard politeness as an expression of those qualities of the heart which render the person who desires to be polite agreeable to those with whom he is thrown. The Chinese look upon the matter from an entirely different standpoint. The same sentiment which accords importance to the preservation of dignity regulates his actions as regards politeness. Here is an example of their politeness:

A Chinese, arrayed in his most beautiful costume, who presented himself at a house, disturbed a rat which was enjoying himself in a jar of oil. The rat in his flight overturned the jar upon the visitor, whose dress was ruined. While the unfortunate visitor was still pale with rage, his host entered the apartment, and after the usual salutation the visitor explained his misadventure. "As I entered your honorable apartment I had the misfortune to alarm your honorable rat, which, in taking flight, overturned your honorable jar of oil upon my miserable and insignificant clothing, which explains the contemptible condition in which you find me in your honorable presence."

To determine your conduct when a Chinese offers you a present, is the most difficult thing in the world. Certain things are not offered to be accepted, and others may not be refused peremptorily. In a general manner, nevertheless, one may accept, understanding perfectly that the gift must be returned a hundred fold.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

RARE AND EXPENSIVE DRUGS.

Saffron would strike an ordinary observer as decidedly expensive at 56 shillings a pound until told that it is composed of the central small portions only of the flowers of a crocus, 70,000 of which it takes to yield the material for one pound. Otto of roses sells at 28 pounds odd per pound and it takes ten thousand pounds—or nearly five tons—of roses to obtain one pound of the oil. Aconitine, extracted from the root of monkshood, is said to be the very strongest poison extant, the dose being one six-hundredth of a grain. It is sold at the rate of 27 pounds per ounce.

Turning from the vegetable to the animal world in search of rare drugs, the writer refers to the musk of the Asiatic deer, which at six to seven pounds an ounce must be a prize to the wily hunter. In some of the tropical seas a floating, sweet smelling mass of ambergris is met with, worth at present five pounds ten shillings per ounce, or eighty-eight pounds per pound in the market. This ambergris is said to be the "diseased biliary product" of the whale. Another peculiar animal product in use as a drug is a solution of the pure venom of the rattlesnake, given occasionally in malignant scarlet fever; while less strong, if perhaps hardly less repulsive, is powdered cockroach, which in six-grain doses has been prescribed, with good effects, it is said, for dropsy.—Chambers Journal.

The Boy and His Cap.

"I can't find my cap anywhere," is a sentence more or less familiar in the household, that being what the boy says, looking for his cap, when he wants to go out to play. Early in the search he enlists his mother, and that may make a serious business of it. She has to drop her dusting or whatever household work she may be engaged in, and the search may take a long time.

"Where did you put it when you came in?" is a question sure to be asked, sooner or later, but all the boy can answer is:

"I don't know."

And then the search goes on. Everywhere, over and under, in all sorts of places, all at a great loss of time, if not of temper. It is found at last, as most things are, in time, and in some simple easy place, which makes the finding of it all the more exasperating.

The boy takes it and goes out to play, and straightway forgets all about it, but it may take quite a little time to restore the normal calm in the house.

It is a mystery how the boy manages to lose his cap as often as he does, but it appears to be a boy's way, and common to almost all.

WIT AND HUMOR.

"Always do right and your friends will stand by you."

"Yes, but the time a man needs friends to stand by him is when he does wrong."—Chicago Record.

"I guess I'm willin' to go," said the farmer, when they told him that his hours would be but few. "It is just a change from havin' my nose to the grindstone to havin' it to the tombstone."—Indianapolis Journal.

He—You will some day regret refusing me.

She—Really?

He—Really. If you live to be an old maid you will regret this chance, and if you marry some fellow you will feel sure that I would have been a better husband.—Indianapolis Journal.

Little Clarence (who reads and ponders)—"Pa, I have just been reading a paragraph, which says there are various reasons why a man who talks in his sleep should not marry; what are some of those reasons, pa?"

Mr. Callipers—"The best reason, my son is because he talks in his sleep."—Puck.

A MASTER PASSION.

We were sisters, and I was ten years Norah's senior. She was naive, petite, winsome, and tender-hearted; I was a woman of strong impulses, with passions that smouldered and literary ambitions that rusted for the want of an incentive to call them into use. My character was more impressive than my beauty; but Norah had one of the sweetest faces that ever the sun shone on.

Having lost our parents early in life, we lived alone. Norah clung to me for guidance, I cherished her with the solicitude of an elder sister, and mutual devotion lent happiness to our somewhat uneventful lives.

But soon the monotony of our days was strangely disturbed.

* * * * * * * *

He was introduced to us by the vicar's wife, and my first impression of Abel Ventome was an impression of the ugliest man I had ever cast my eyes on. He was gaunt and ungainly, his pale face was seamed with lines of thought, and his attenuated features gave him an uncanny appearance, in spite of his high forehead and the lustre of his searching grey eyes. After a time, when I knew and understood him, he strangely attracted me.

He and his mother had taken a cottage in the village of D——, where we lived, for the purpose of editing for a well-known publisher a series of books called "The Commonplace Thinkers of the Nineteenth Century."

We soon exchanged visits. And by some chance or other I often found myself in the society of Ventome, whose conversation opened out a new world of thought and suggestion to me.

At last it seemed to me my chance had come. I had now met the strong intelligence to awaken the ambitions which had grown sluggish in the surroundings of a sleepy village.

"I have such happy news for you," said Norah one afternoon to me, in animated tones. "I'm engaged to be married."

At once I instinctively guessed the truth. Nora had robbed me of his love. I looked at her with a stony glare. I could not move. I could not speak. It seemed as if I was paralysed.

"Gracie, darling, don't look like that; why don't you congratulate me? Did you not want me to be engaged?" and she twined her arms around me and sobbed.

I callously freed myself from her embrace. "You had no right to engage yourself without consulting me first," was my frozen reply.

"It was all so sudden," she faltered; "he told me he loved me—and——"

I harshly interrupted her: "Never mind particulars, I will see him myself," and I left her.

I went to my own room, maddened with jealousy and utterly miserable.

Later in the day he gave me his confidences.

"Everything has turned out so well," he concluded. "She will make me so happy, and your intellectual sympathy will complete my happiness."

With the hypocrisy which many women can assume I smilingly congratulated him, and actually kissed Norah and wished her happiness.

The thought, however, of another woman ministering to his happiness was gall and wormwood to me. The idea of the sister on whom I had expended a life's devotion winning his love was terrible. Their bliss should no longer mock me. Their love should no longer gloat over me. I resolved to kill them.

* * * * * * * *

I had a loaded toy revolver in my pocket, waiting for my time and opportunity. He had just arrived, and she had flown to meet him. Stealthily I was about to follow them to carry out my terrible purpose, when my glance fell on an unfinished letter on the table, and curiosity urged me to read it.

"My Own Darling Gracie.

"I know I am not half as clever as you are, but I have been clever enough to have found out your secret. You tried to hide it, dear, but you could not, and I am so glad my knowledge did not come too late. Do you think, darling, that I would ever supplant you, and be happy at the expense of your unhappiness? Never, never. I mean to tell him I have changed my mind and——"

I could read no more. I felt as if the walls of the room were folding around me to overwhelm and stifle me. The strength and beauty of my sister's unselfishness caused me to loathe myself. My darling's self-sacrifice reproached me and stung me, till I reviled myself as one unworthy to live. And in the agony of my shame and despair I drew the revolver out of my pocket and pointed it at myself, when I knew it was suddenly dashed from me and I saw and heard no more.

* * * * * * * *

When I had recovered from my ensuing long and painful nervous illness I resolved to travel. A distant relative in Canada who was a superior of a convent gladly welcomed me, and in spite of my sister's earnest entreaties to rejoin her, I had no heart to return; and thus the convent will be my home to the end of my days.

* * * * * * * *

"What is the matter?" asked Norah. "You have been groaning in your sleep for at least ten minutes, and I have been shaking you to awaken you."

"I have had such a terrible, vivid dream. Oh, darling! We will never be jealous of one another, and no one will ever part us."

"What a silly you are," replied my sister; "you've been over-tasking your brain, and had a nightmare in consequence."—Golden Penny.

SPEEDY THREE-YEAR-OLDS.

There is an unusual amount of enthusiasm in the racing field this year, and those who believe that the $50,000 youngster, Hamburg, is not in condition, will probably find themselves mistaken. The season will, in fact, bring out the greatest lot of three year olds known in years. Plaudit, Madden's fine animal, will be heard from very early in the season and Handball and Previous promise much, for they have wintered well and are in prime condition.

As far as consistency goes Handball deserves to be classed as one of the greatest of last season's 2-year-olds, the best, perhaps, except Hamburg. He made his first appearance in the Juvenile Stakes on the opening day at Morris Park in the spring, and he was a member of the field which struggled for the Westchester Handicap prize on the last day. He ran in all kinds of weather and over every kind of a track with admirable consistency, and was always there or thereabouts at the finish. Previous was not so consistent. He ran splendid races occasionally, but was not to be depended upon at all times. He is a splendidly gaited horse, however, and, like Handball, appears to be able to go over any distance. The Huguenot, who loomed up most prominently during the Saratoga meeting, but who went back again after he was brought back to New York, has done some splendid work at the old Monmouth Park track this spring, and Jimmie Rowe predicts that he will make a great 3-year-old. He is a colt of splendid size and fine proportions, and as a 2-year-old was much more forward than his full brother, Henry of Navarre. The Huguenot will race in Mr. Rowe's colors.

Another colt which went wrong in midsummer, but which has improved vastly recently, is J. G. Follansbee's Murillo. Of the Morello colts Mr. Follansbee was so confident that Murillo could win the Futurity that he came all the way from Europe to see him do it. It was a bitter disappointment to him to learn, when he arrived, that Murillo had been stricken with catarrhal fever and could not start. It required the most careful nursing to bring Murillo through that siege unscathed, but Dr. Sheppard succeeded in doing it, and Murillo is to-day in as good shape as he was when he first appeared in the East early last spring. He has grown a lot since his recovery and is a big, strapping youngster now.

August Belmont has two Rayon d'Or youngsters in his stable in Firearm and Lady Marian, who will undoubtedly be fast as 3-year-olds and do some wonderful things at times, just as they did some wonderful things as 2-year-olds.

Tennis Courts Will be Lively.

The outdoor tennis season will begin with the University interscholastic championships on April 30, followed on May 17 by the Southern championships, at Washington and May 24 by the New England championships, at New Haven. Ever since last season ended there has been a determined effort under way to have the rules regarding "foot faults" amended so that the duties of the baseline umpires would be less difficult and the players would make fewer foot faults. At the recent annual meeting of the association, the matter was referred to the Executive Committee for action, but the delegates were unable to agree on a new rule and the matter went over. Another meeting will have to be held before the season opens, or a mail vote will be taken. It is noticeable that the Tuxedo events are once more omitted from the official list, while there are several other tournaments revived. The New York State championships will be held at

R. D. WRENN.

MISS JULIATTE ATKINSON.

Syracuse this year, although it has not been held at all for the last four seasons. The West Newton Club, that held the big international event four seasons ago, when Pim and Mahony played in America, are scheduled for another invitation tournament this spring, and it is rumored that they have some plans for getting two or three of the English cracks to come over for it.

Local-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Straßburg. Der hiesigen Wohnungskommission gab kürzlich Bürgermeister Back bekannt, die Stadt beabsichtige, an Stelle der alten Synagoge 48 Volkswohnungen zu erbauen und dazu 500,000 Mark zu verwenden. Dabei sei auch der Bau eines Hauses geplant, wo besonders kinderreiche Familien, die nirgends Unterkunft finden, untergebracht werden können.

Hagenau. Beim Futtertragen steckte ein Gefreiter vom hiesigen Dragoner-Regiment das Messer, mit dem er einen Heusack von der Bandleine geschnitten hatte, geöffnet in die Brusttasche. Als er sich später beim Sackausleeren bückte, drang ihm die Klinge tief in die Brust, so daß er lebensgefährlich verletzt wurde.

Kötzingen. Der 19jährige Bauernbursche A. Heine rief, als er betrunken war, auf der Dorfstraße: „Vive la France!" Er erhielt wegen Ausstoßens aufrührerischer Rufe zwei Monate Gefängniß.

Metz. Die Bergwerksindustriellen Lothringens beschlossen, drei Vorschulen für Bergleute in Deutsch-Oth, Algringen und Groß-Moyeuvre zu gründen und zu unterhalten; die Regierung will ein Drittel der Kosten tragen. Die Gründung einer technischen Schule in Metz ist unbedingtes Bedürfniß.

Oesterreich.

Wien. Die außerordentlich strengen Maßregeln, welche gegen die Pestgefahr getroffen worden sind, scheinen der Ausbreitung der Seuche wirksam entgegenzutreten und man hofft jetzt, daß die Zahl der Opfer sich nicht weiter vergrößern werde.—Unter dem Verdacht, eine Wohnung mittelst Nachschlüssels geöffnet und daraus Effekten im Werthe von 60 Gulden gestohlen zu haben, wurde kürzlich im Bezirksgericht Favoriten ein 13jähriges Mädchen eingeliefert.—Der junge Medizinier Petrovich, ein Sohn des früheren serbischen Finanzministers, ist hier durch Blutvergiftung bei den Sezirubungen gestorben.

Agram. Im hiesigen Nationaltheater verwundete ein Schauspieler seinen Partner schwer im Gesicht, da das Gewehr, womit er im am Schlusse des Stückes zu erschießen hatte, geladen war.

Oedenburg. Dieser Tage starb hier Frau Marie Wald im Alter von 74 Jahren. Die Verblichene hinterließ ein Vermögen von circa 200 000 Gulden, wovon sie etwa 140,000 Gulden dem städtischen Armenversorgungshause und dem Krankenhause vermachte; 60,000 Gulden bestimmte sie für Legate, darunter welche für humanitäre Institute der Stadt Baden bei Wien.

Schweiz.

Bern. Laut den Zusammenstellungen des Bernischen statistischen Bureaus repräsentirt die letztjährige Ernte des Kantons Bern einen Geldwerth von 119,893,799 Francs, den höchsten seit 1893. Die Getreideernte allein hatte einen Werth von über 19,500,000 Francs.—Bei Schießübungen in der Nähe von Thun wurden ein Knecht und ein Hirtenknabe durch Granatsplitter schwer verletzt, obwohl Beide sich nicht auf verbotenem Terrain befanden.

Zürich. Der Privatdozent für alttestamentliche Exegese und semitische Sprachen in der theologischen Fakultät der Züricher Hochschule, Dr. theol. Moritz Heidenheim, ist im Alter von 74 Jahren dahier gestorben. Heidenheim war lange Zeit Pfarrer an der hiesigen Kirche. In den letzten Jahren gab er die „Church Leaves" heraus.

Freiburg. In diesem Kanton soll heuer ein außerordentlicher Himbeerensegen geherrscht haben. Eine einzige Firma hat von dieser Frucht 10,000 Kilogramm aufgekauft, wovon die Gegend von Gibloux die größten Massen geliefert hat. In Lovens sollen die Glieder einer einzigen Familie zuweilen bis 100 Kilogramm per Tag gepflückt haben.

HERO OF THE SOUDAN.

GENERAL KITCHENER'S HARD SERVICE AS A SOLDIER IN EGYPT.

Popular With His Men.—Harsh Ways of Maintaining Discipline in the Army.—Cowards Bastinadoed and Drunkards Made to Carry Heavy Bags of Shot.

When Major General Sir Herbert Kitchener, the hero of the Soudan, then a brevet major, made his first expedition up the Nile, in 1884, to rescue General Gordon at Khartoum, one of his staff interpreters was Herbert G. V. Morrell.

"Kitchener," says Mr. Morrell, "was a great admirer of Gordon, and could not conceal his anger at Gladstone for his treatment of the hero in 1884, which he characterized as 'rude and unkind.' Kitchener was looked up to as the most capable man to lead the expedition to rescue Gordon, though there were many officers on the spot superior to him in rank.

"Kitchener was thoroughly acquainted with the customs of the Arabs, and had made personal friends of many powerful sheiks. The local governors were mostly rich Turks. They were nominated from Constantinople, and their subjects were held in absolute servitude. Slavery flourished, too, and knowing the English had forbidden this, the Turks were loath to allow a white man in their homes. With Kitchener it was different; he was welcome always, and it is the same to-day.

"Kitchener had charge practically of the Gordon relief expedition, and if he had had his own way Gordon might have been saved. We reached Khartoum just about seventy hours after the massacre, and Kitchener was so sorry and enraged over this that he almost shed tears. We got away from Cairo in April, 1884.

"The Tenth Hussars and the Egyptian Cavalry Kitchener picked out especially for the expedition, and camels were used to transport the commissariat. It was in providing unusually good rations for the men that Kitchener made his first hit, and his determination to have the men well fed in a hot, tropical climate is responsible in great part for his wonderful success. He is always as careful of his commissariat as though the camels were carrying precious stones.

"Every morning at ten o'clock he was out to see to the details of giving out the stores, and any sergeant who makes a complaint about feed always receives a hearing. Kitchener laid in a supply of things which we had never been treated to before. He got tinned beef put up in Chicago, cheese, condensed milk, curry and rice, and all along the route bought fresh vegetables. Every man received one pound and a half of bread and one pound of meat a day, coffee for dinner, and tea at night. If some big chap said he hadn't enough Kitchener would give orders to 'feed him more.'

"Kitchener was still a brevet major, but the soldiers looked upon him as a general, and he attracted more attention than any other officer.

"When the expedition got as far as Assouan a quarrel broke out among the natives in the commisariat department. This was made up of two distinct camel corps, one from Aden, consisting of Somalis, the Arabs who live in Aden; the other of Egyptians from Cairo and Alexandria. At the first encampment bad blood broke out. The contention as to who were the most proficient in camel driving was heightened by the alleged preference which was shown to the Adenites by the English. Finally the Somalis challenged the Egyptians to a fair fight, to see who were the more valiant. The Egyptians refused the contest. I was one of the interpreters who reported the matter to Captain Wilson, in charge of the commissary. The next morning Major Kitchener himself came into the camp and ordered the temedar (head groomsman) of the Adenites and the shek of the Egyptians to present themselves. He heard the two sides of the grievance, and then, turning quickly, commanded the sheik and 20 of the foremost Egyptians to be bastinadoed for cowardice. There was the greatest excitement in camp, but no one dared to revolt when those piercing eyes followed up the order. About twenty of those who refused to fight were tied on boards and rattan canes given to as many of the Adenites, and, to use the interpreter's exact language, 'they jolly well bastinadoed the Egyptians' feet off.' Some of them were so belabored that they could not walk for weeks, their feet being cut and swollen, but it stamped out all cowardice in the army.

"Kitchener is a martinet in the observance of rules, and is severe in punishments. He comes down rather heavily on drunkenness, and for this reason has made himself to a certain extent unpopular with some of his soldiers. Rogers, his body servant, is a teetotaler, which is an exceedingly rare thing to find in the ranks of Tommy Atkins. 'Kitchener's cure for drunkenness' is a by-word among his men. Once taken it is never forgotten. The culprit is togged out in full marching equipment, which is a matter of sixty pounds, and is then compelled to carry in each hand a bag of shot weighing fifty pounds. A sergeant and a guard are put over the victim to see that he does not stop walking or drop the shot. A man is sometimes kept at this 'shot drill' for six hours.

"Another severity which called down unpleasant comments on Kitchener was his order 'Kill the wounded Dervishes.' England heard of this with horror, but the British soldiers were loud in their praises. Kitchener had seen how these Dervishes, after being wounded, would lie quiet on the battlefield concealing in their clothes a pistol or scimeter shaped knife. When the ambulance corps and surgeons came out on the field to give aid to the wounded enemy, these fellows would wriggle out through heaps of slain and give a last thrust or put a bullet through a nurse or doctor. At other times they would hamstring a horse, and in this way disabled nearly the whole 'black watch.'

"There were eight thousand men in that first expedition," continued Mr. Morrell, "and they moved along like clockwork. Our orders from London were to proceed at eight and ten miles a day. Kitchener was for pushing forward in spite of orders. 'My God!' he would exclaim, 'poor Gordon will be murdered just because of a lot of fogheads at home.' Every day or two a runner would reach camp after making his way through the Mahdi army in disguise, and tell us that Gordon's provisions were almost gone and that he could hold out but a few days. Kitchener had figured out almost to the hour when we would reach Khartoum at the rate we were travelling, and decided that he would get there too late. But he was only a junior officer and his counsels to push forward did not prevail. Finally we were getting near Khartoum, and hopes of saving Gordon began to rise. They were suddenly dashed to earth, though, by the arrival of a Greek, named Lycurgus, who was carried into camp almost dead. He brought a message from Gordon and Frank Power, correspondent of the London Times, to 'come quick for God's sake.' It was then too late, though, for the Greek had just got clear of the Mahdi's lines when the Dervishes broke into Khartoum and began the massacre. We reached there two days later only to find the city deluged in blood. Had Kitchener had his way we could have saved Gordon."

PROBLEMS OF THE WOODS.

What Becomes of Beasts That Die a Natural Death.

"What becomes of wild animals that die in the woods?" said the naturalist. "I mean wild animals that die a natural death. Age and disease must carry many of them regularly as human beings are carried off, but what becomes of their bodies? I have never heard of any one coming across a dead bear or fox or wildcat in the woods that had died from natural causes. I have never heard of any one finding even the skeleton of a wild animal in the woods that did not show evidence somewhere that the beast had met its death through violence. But an uninjured skeleton or body of a wild animal without a wound, I have never heard of.

"I found once in the woods of McKean county, Pa., the skeletons of two enormous bucks with their antlers locked together. It was plain that the two animals had been engaged in mortal combat, during which their horns had become entangled, and it being impossible to break the lock thus made, both bucks succumbed to exhaustation and starvation. Another time I found the body of a doe in the woods, and near by lay the mutilated remains of a big rattlesnake. The story of the two bodies was plain to me. The deer, true to its nature, had attacked the snake, but the snake had succeeded in striking the deer with its fangs before the sharp hoofs of the animal had killed it. I have come upon many other dead bodies and skeletons of wild animals at different times in the woods, but never one that did not show unquestionable evidence that the beast had died from violence of some kind. So the mystery as from natural causes remains.—New York Sun.

An Irishman's Chivalry.

William Smith O'Brien, the leader of the National party of Ireland, who was transported in 1849, had none of the gifts which attract the multitude. He was not an orator, his manners were not winning, and he made few intimacies.

But his character and his well-poised head put him at the head of the Nationalists, whose purpose was to secure the independence of Ireland. An anecdote related in Sir Charles Gavan Duffy's book of reminiscences, "My Life in Two Hemispheres," shows the chivalry of the man.

He had a duel in the day when that savage method of settling disputes was the custom, and the two men were placed opposite to each other.

Just as the signal, "One, two, three—fire!" was about to be given, O'Brien cried:

"Stop! No signal, I pray."

His opponent's second stepped forward and said with asperity, "This is very irregular, sir. What do you wish to say?"

"I wish," answered O'Brien, "to call your attention to the fact that the gentleman opposite me has let the cap fall off his pistol."

THE RING AND GLOVE

I felt like Cortez upon a memorable occasion when the jeweler's glass door swung behind me, and marching up to the counter, I asked for a ring.

"A ring, sir?" said the attendant, a Cockney to his finger tips. "What sort of ring?"

"An engagement ring," said I, valorously.

"What size, sir?" demanded the man, docketing me mentally.

"Five and a half," I replied, thinking of the glove.

I'm not sure that she wants it at all," I murmured, producing the little sandalwood-scented bit of silk; "but that is the size, I think."

"Oh—its the size of the lady's 'and," he observed with mild toleration, unrolling it. "Well, sir, ladies' fingers vary in girth, and it's more usual to fit them with a piece of cardboard; but we'll do our best."

"Could not the member be reconstituted?" I asked impressively.

That knocked the conceit out of him; he stared at me helplessly.

"Fill it with powder or something," I explained.

It took him five minutes of self discipline to grasp the startling novelty but he did, and, under my direction, filled the third finger sheath with plate powder, which I rammed home with my pencil case. Then, producing a miniture calliper, he took measurements, and began to search the scintillating stock, displaying a reverent familiarity most impressive to behold. Cleopatra, how they dazzled! Pearls, rubbles, emeralds, diamonds, each challenging the admiration, but checking the desire by the narrow parchment slip attached setting forth the price. Forty pounds, fifty pounds, one-hundred pounds; it was a charmed place, where money lost its everyday significance, for what man of spirit would be content to offer the girl of his heart a thing costing a miserable tenner when close beside it twinkled a rosy diamond worth a wilderness of monkeys?" I felt almost pauperized, recollecting that I had only seventy-five pounds available from the Derby hundred.

"Now, sir, what do you think of this?" asked the shopman patronizingly, as he displayed an opal changeful as the shifting sunlight on a misty sea. It's exactly the lady's size making allowances, of course, she won't want to wear it over 'er glove.

"Are not opals unlucky?" said I endeavoring to decipher the price.

"Oh, we don't hold with such superstition," replied the jeweller loftily, "but they do say one will keep you from being poisoned."

"Then I shall leave it for the next rich widow," I answered. "But what is the cost of this?"

I alluded to an emerald set amid pearls, which I already saw glittering on the loveliest hand in the world. He extracted it with a silent respect he borrowed from my eagerness, and made a measurement while I watched him, my heart beating madly. The size was exactly the size; he price—but this is a detail. I decided upon it. The shopman thanked me perfunctorily, and I leaned against the counter, feeling like one who was receiving a great favor. But when I fumbled in my pockets for the notes and heard their crisp crackle my confidence returned, and then as I watched the splendid thing flashing in its violet bed I believed I must after all be a rich man, unknown to myself, so great was the suggestion of unlimited wealth thus conveyed.

"I should like a piece of glass on the inside of the case lid," I observed carelessly. "Is it usual?"

"That's looking-glass?" queried the lapidary, glancing up from a surreptitious examination of the notes."

I nodded. I knew I must be getting red.

"Well," he remarked tolerantly, "it's not exactly usual, but it's a pretty idea—'lightens the attraction of the gem, makes the lady see the present from two points of view."

"Hardly an advantage sometimes," I observed; "but can you do it?"

"Well, yes, I should think," he replied condescendingly.

"Then get it done, and I shall stand the racket!" I answered magnificently.

He hurried away to effect the alteration, his place being taken by a bald-headed salesman who wore spectacles, and talkd to me over them soothingly, as one would to a person of weak intellect, while I formulated piratical schemes, and asked him puerile questions with a gravity equalling his own.

When I left the shop I headed straight for Bloomsbury Square, but remembering that she might be just then occupied with domestic duties, decided to call later in the day. Even the ring in my pocket gave me no additional courage, and presently I began to think it was not royal enough. Edging my way to Regent's Park, I hunted out a quiet spot and sat down to examine it at leisure. It was glorious still, but somehow not so glorious as I could have wished, and the everlasting flint would have worn well beneath it. Something more of the intellect than of sense, made me look up, and I saw her.

The sensation of being shot through the heart has not, I believe, received adequate literary expression, those who experienced it being preoccupied at the exact moment with other matters; but I think I know what it means. She stopped, and we gazed at each other. She was in deep black, but the pallor had gone from her oval cheeks. She made me a half-tentative bow. I sprang to my feet.

"I'm so glad to see you," I cried, "because—I want to restore something you forgot in the restaurant yesterday—a few weeks ago."

"How kind of you!" she said, coming near.

"Oh, not at all," I replied; "but I hope you were not inconvenienced. I should have sent it, but I—I didn't."

I put my hand in my breast pocket hurriedly, and extracted my handkerchief, which in turn brought to light a sheaf of letters and a memoranda I shook out at her feet like a skillful conjurer. Then I tried the other pocket, but vainly. "It's a glove," I said weakly, gathering up my belongings, "one of yours, don't you know."

"I recollect—I missed it," she said coldly.

"But the cab went so quickly," I pleaded; "ah, do sit down until I find it!"

She did so. I am in a gentle perspiration.

"Hurrah, I have it!" I cried, and I extracted the wisp of silk from my watch pocket, where I had thrust it on leaving the shop.

"So kind of you," she observed, taking it. Then the powder ran out over her dress.

"How stupid!" I gasped, completely demoralized now and taking the glove I shook it vigorously until I had created a miniature dust storm. She sneezed. I devoutly wished that the flying machine was an accomplished fact.

"It's ruined," I muttered woefully, for it certainly represented a piebald appearance.

She smiled. I sat down, saying desperately:

"Would you allow me to keep it—the thing is of no use now?"

"Why?" she answered quietly; but the voice was low.

"To remind me of that happy day," I replied, shying.

"Indeed? I am glad you think of it as a pleasant one," she said graciously. "Mr. Turnbull was declaiming all the way back in the cab. He seemed prejudiced against you."

"He may be described as a man who means well," I observed severely. "I hope he said something actionable."

"Oh, hardly that!" she answered, laughingly; "but he seems to have changed his opinion lately. Your name happened to come up in conversation to-day, and he said"—

She paused; a sudden flame leaped into her cheeks.

"What did he say?" I demanded, trying to look away.

"He said you were an honorable man," she replied, the point of her parasol tracing a lopsided isosceles triangle in the dust, "but"——

"Ah there is much virtue in that but," I observed bitterly.

"That you ought to settle down," she continued, tossing her head and rising.

"So I shall," I cried, "but it depends upon my lady. I have her portrait here in this case. She is the only girl I shall ever care for in that way," I added, because even a little qualification does no harm in even the most exalted moments. "By the way, she is an acquaintance of yours, too," and pressing the spring, I handed the casket to her as the lid flew back. She glanced at me curiously, very pale now. I, weak about the knees, watched a child trundle a hoop past us.

She uttered a little cry that sank into a sobbing laugh. Then she sat down beside me and put one of the hands I hope to hold when Death beckons me down the last dim turning of Life's road, into mine.

"I trust she will make you a good wife," she said gravely. And— Well surely man born of woman can guess the rest.

When Letters Were Scarce.

To write a letter in the middle ages was no joke—a task which none out a priest or a scribe by profession would willingly encounter.

Letter-writing in early times was resorted to only on occasions of moment; even letters of familiarity frequently took the form of legal instruments. Till a comparatively later period, too, vellum was the substance upon which they were written, and scribes were employed to indite them.

The earliest letter written in England now remaining is probably that of Wuldhan, Bishop of London, to Beretuald, Archbishop of Canterbury, preserved in the Cottonian Manuscripts, desiring his advice as to the mode of proceeding at a council, summoned at a place called Breyuntford (Brentford), for settling certain differences which had arisen between the king and the said council. Beretuald was Archbishop of Canterbury from A. D. 692 to A. D. 731.

The letter is greatly injured, and altogether too difficult to be perfectly made out; a solitary record of early epistolary intercourse in the Saxon times. No other letter is known of previous to the Norman Conquest.

After the Conquest, letters became more numerous, but all either in French, the tongue of the Norman masters, or in Latin, the then universal language of educated men throughout Europe.

Nearly all of those in the collection in these languages are by priests. The constant turmoil and insecurity in which the laity then lived, made it impossible for them to cultivate writing; but the want of a cheap and good material to write on was to the full, as great a drawback.

Our earliest use of paper in epistolary correspondence cannot be carried farther back than the reign of Edward I., during whose reign, or in the latter part of his father's time, it seems to have been brought from the east by way of Italy.

FOR MARGUERITE.

Then you won't marry me, sweetheart? The words were uttered low and pleading, the voice very tender and true, but the girl on whose dainty ears they fell threw the beautiful head a little further back, and laughed out her half-vexed, half-defiant answer.

"When you are on the road to success, Gerard, I'll marry you at once."

"Success with you is only another name for—"

"Money," the girl interrupted, with that lovely light laugh again. "I know it, Gerard, and despise me for it if you will, but if you had been brought up in poverty, then you, too, would spell Success with an M, a very big M, and call it Money!"

The man sighed heavily. Fate was indeed against him now, and his career, light and hopeful as it looked a short time ago, seemed sadly dull and somber now.

He would say one more thing before they parted, he determined suddenly; he would have at any rate a clear understanding with the woman he loved so madly. And after that, then the venture—to the right, or to the left!

He put out his hand to stay her as she would have risen. "I want to ask you one thing more," he said, so gently that her wandering attention was fixed on him once again.

"If I went into the business, my father's business, which as you know I hate—if I gave up my dreams of the Bar, and a life which I should love, a life which would be poor, perhaps, but full of promise—if I had the prospect of success in the business of which you speak so highly, what then?"

She turned to him with a new light sparkling in her beautiful eyes. Had she conquered at last—everything, every hope, every ambition at her feet?

"Then," she said, her voice tender with feeling, and her soft eyelids drooping above the brilliant eyes, "then I should say no more," and her tones trembled into silence, and her white hands played nervously with the violets at the bosom of her beautiful gown.

"But would you love me, and believe in me, my love?" he urged, his voice strained with passionate love, his hands clasping hers. "Will you love me, darling, will you let me hope again?—will you, darling—tell me, tell me now." And the soft waltz-music rose and fell again, and the air was laden with the scent of lilies and heliotrope, as Marguerite the beautiful bent towards her lover.

* * * * * * *

The snow fell outside very softly, wrapping the sordid city in tenderest white coverings, and transforming it into a kingdom of crystal and pearl. Inside one of the greatest of its many fair houses there was revelry, and the ripple of silvery voices, and the ring of tuneful laughter.

One of the land's richest men entertained his guests, and feasted them right royally, so that they spoke increasingly well of him and his entertainment, and of the beauty of his peerless wife!

She stood in the great drawingroom in purest white, with diamonds on her snowy neck, and beautiful stars in her golden hair, and around her a little company of the gayest and wittiest and cleverest kept her court, and pleased her with their sallies, until her clear laugh rang out above all the gentle badinage around.

The husband heard the silver ripple of laughter, and it awoke some of the old thoughts, the old memories that he had striven to lay by, as a child lays by its dear old toys when playing days are over and done with.

And all of a sudden he felt very weary and tired—tired of all the lights and the scent of the great banks of roses that his wife had ordered the skillful florist to arrange—tired of the music, and the faces, and the crowd, and he slipped away, unnoticed, to his quiet study, and sat there awhile to dream.

He had gone into the business that he had heartily disliked—for Marguerite—and it had proved a success in his hands.

How tenderly she had caressed him at the time of the sacrifice—how gently her pretty fingers had smoothed the way! She was so much accustomed to it all now, and he had "lived it down," as she once said playfully to him. She was always sweet, and always beautiful, and every one said he was the luckiest man in London! Perhaps it was true!

He got up and sauntered back to the drawingroom—his lovely wife was chatting with a young barrister as he passed.

"My husband would have been just like you to-day," he heard her say, in that exquisite voice of hers, "if he had not taken my advice. He took it, and you see the result."

The younger man looked around. He saw the beautiful rooms, the brilliant crowd, the flashing of countless gems, the peerless beauty of the woman who spoke, he heard the music rising and falling in the distance, and breathed the delicate scents of rarest blossoms.

Again he saw the word "Success" written everywhere—success that he, a beginner, a novice, could never hope to emulate. Suddenly the worn face of the master met his eyes. "I see the result," he said quietly.

Mr. Wm. Swalm, of 603 W. Front street, says:—"I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an elegant remedy for kidney troubles. I have used them and was greatly benefited. For several years I suffered from a severe pain across my back which annoyed me so much at night that I could not sleep. If I took cold it settled in my back and at such time I could scarcely get about at all. There was also a kidney weakness which was very distressing. I often had to get up at night thus breaking my rest. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and thought I would try them. My daughter got me a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store and after using them a short time I felt much better in every way. The pain in my back does not bother me now at all and the other difficulty has been relieved. Other members of the family have used them with equally good results. Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement and I will recommend them whenever an opportunity presents itself."

BATES'S WOUND MAY NOT BE FATAL.

Young Man Shot by Miss Masie Lee is Resting Comfortably.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New Brunswick, Nov. 15.—There is a chance that Joseph Bates, twenty-five years old, who was shot Saturday night by pretty Masie Lee, aged twenty, will survive. After a restless night, during which he suffered much pain, Bates dropped into a restful sleep, and the attending physician expressed the hope that he might recover from the effects of the wound.

The shooting occurred in a kitchen over the restaurant of James Callahan, of Burnet street, where both the young people boarded. As Bates walked into the room Miss Lee picked up a rifle and playfully told Bates that she would shoot him. To her surprise and horror, the weapon was discharged, and Bates fell to the floor, with a bullet wound just over his heart. The young woman was placed under arrest, and declared that the shooting was accidental. It was thought at first that Bates would died, and his ante-mortem statement was taken. In it he completely exonerates the young woman.

MASTER LION'S OPPORTUNITY.

When Mrs. Marie Nevins Blaine, divorced wife of young Jim Blaine, married Dr. William T. Bull, she was obliged to resign one of her most treasured possessions, a beautiful spaniel, named, if memory is not treacherous, Lion.

Her fondness for Lion was almost a craze, and she had taught the dog many tricks. The devotion was mutual, and if the comrades were separated even for a day Lion was inconsolable.

Upon her marriage to Dr. Bull she gave up her canine pet, as he detested dogs, and did not like them around the house. But Mrs. Bull was a diplomat. Lion was banished, but, she hoped, not forever, although it was some time before she put any pleas in in his favor.

One day, when she had been married about a year, she hinted that she was grieving to see Lion, and said if it would not annoy the Doctor she would like to have him come and visit her for a week. He could stay at the stable, and only visit the house when the Doctor was out. Well, Dr. Bull is very fond of his pretty wife, so Lion received his invitation, and in due time arrived in New York and was installed at the stable.

Every day while the Doctor was on his rounds Lion spent the time in his mistress' boudoir. His happiness at the reunion was that of a schoolboy at home for vacation, and he would go through all the pretty tricks his mistress had taught him to show her he had not forgotten them. Three days of Lion's visit had passed when as Dr. Bull was taking off his overcoat in his office, there came a rap at the inner door. It was so faint that he did not notice it. Then, when it was repeated, he said, "Come in!" No one came, but the rapping went on. He opened the door and there stood Lion. He had been knocking the door with a little wooden box he held in his mouth addressed to Dr. Bull. The Doctor took the box, and Lion, too polite to intrude, turned and walked in a dignified manner back up stairs. The Doctor opened the box, read the tiny note contained therein, smiled and threw it in the scrap basket.

The next day Lion knocked and left another note. The third time he came there was a reply for him. The Doctor said, "Lion, wait!" He took the box, abstracted the note, put one of his own in its place, and, handing the box back to the dog, gave him a pat and sent him up stairs. Here is a copy of Lion's notes and the reply they finally elicited:

"Dear Doctor—I am enjoying my visit to my mistress very much. It was very kind of you to invite me here, and I have tried to behave the best I know how. It will be hard to leave my mistress again. I wish you would like me a little bit. Lion.

The letter which Lion carried back to his mistress read: "Lion, you are such a respectable, well-bred fellow that your visit is extended indefinitely. "W. T. B."

That evening the Doctor and his wife had a hearty laugh over her little bit of scheming and Lion shared in it.

A DUTCH WEDDING AN ORDEAL.

Its Curious Features A Long and Tedious Ceremony.

A Dutch wedding is a portentious business. Smart Holland does its devotions in barnlike French Protestant churches. The wedding service is mournful to a degree, and lasts two hours. The bridegroom, in full evening dress, and the bride, in orthodox white satin, sit upon chairs in front of the black-robed minister. He delivers an extempore address fairly bristling with personalities. Meanwhile relatives sob in pews, until finally every one who can prove the remotest connection with the bride kisses her.

Next follows a tremendous breakfast in French style. It is "de rigueur" for all the friends of the bride to send her in the morning a bouquet or basket of white flowers plentifully ribboned. With numbers of these a very gay effect is produced, though the Dutch are lamentably behind the times in table decoration and posey-making. With the advent of the "hors d'oeuvre" come speeches. The bride's brother or other delegate first rings a small handbell. Then, amid a silence broken by the cheerful clicking of knives and forks, a health is proposed. Then comes a quaint postscript to this very ordinary ceremonial. Ladies and gentlemen must alike rise from their seats, and, solemnly filling up to the person toasted, touch his glass to their own. After a score [illegible] the thing gets monotonous. [illegible] carried out to the bitter [illegible] person omitted would feel [illegible] Holland it is the fami[illegible] thing. SOCIETY LEADERS WEDDED IN CHURCH.

MAGNIFICENT DECORATIONS

MISS GERTRUDE BAKER, DAUGHTER OF J. T. BAKER, THE BRIDE.

Howard Wade Beebe, Prominent in Local Society and Clubs, the Groom—The Ceremony Was Very Elaborate—Many Beautiful Gowns—Church and House Thronged With Guests—The Bridal Party

Magnificent, indeed, was the appearance of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church last evening with the towering pyramid of palms in front, the mammoth pink and white chrysanthemums on every side, and a host of finely-gowned women and well-appearing men, the very elite of Plainfield society, all to do honor to the marriage of two of Plainfield's society leaders, Miss Gertrude Baker, daughter of Councilman and Mrs. John Thomas Baker, of Stelle avenue, and Howard Wade Beebe, of Madison avenue.

It was the greatest and most elaborate wedding of the year and, with the reception that followed at the spacious home of Councilman Baker, on Stelle avenue, formed one of the principal events of the season in local society circles. The ceremony was one of the prettiest ever witnessed in the city while the decorations at both church and house were arranged with a beauty and grandeur seldom seen.

Both of the couple have hosts of friends in the city where they have resided for many years. Both were prominent in society where they were general favorites. Mr. Beebe has long been an energetic worker in the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club as well as in the Union County Country Club. Then there were many acquaintances in New York and other cities. Over three thousand invitations were sent out.

A more representative gathering of the families of Plainfield's prominent and influential citizens than the one that filled every bit of available space in the Crescent Avenue church last evening, could hardly be imagined. Society was out in force. The display of beautiful gowns was in itself an event.

Among the men in the vast assemblage were those who have shaped and controlled the city's affairs for many years. As the father of the bride is president of the Common Council, next in rank to the Mayor of the city, the present directors of the city's prosperity were there. All the members of the Common Council were present. Then, too, among the guests were prominent men from New York and other cities, together with their families.

It was a chrysanthemum wedding and monster specimens of the national flower of Japan were used in countless profusion in the decoration of the sanctuary. Pink and white were the prevailing colors. Across the entire front of the church and reaching above the gallery was a great pyramid of palms that hid the platform from view. Huge masses of pink and white chrysanthemums, artistically grouped, were placed at either end while other chrysanthemums of the same colors were ranged along the base of the pyramid of green. The railing to the gallery was hidden beneath a profusion of southern smilax on which were hung beautiful garlands of pink and white chrysanthemums. Large palms were placed at intervals along the railing. At the ends of the pews gigantic chrysanthemums nodded their plumed heads.

Long before 8 o'clock, the hour set for the ceremony, the guests began to arrive and rapidly filled the many pews on the main floor and in the gallery. Even before the appointed time every seat was filled and many were standing. During the interval that preceded the arrival of the bridal party, Frank J. Smith, the regular organist of the church, rendered a programme of pleasing selections.

When the hour had come and all was ready, the harmony changed and the strains of the Lohengrin wedding march pealed forth in stately measure. Then the doors to the left centre aisle swung open and the bridal party entered. The ushers, who were William C. Baker, a brother of the bride, Dr. Benjamin Van D. Hedges, Dr. F. C. Ard and J. H P. Wharton, of this city, Willis D. Wood, of Brooklyn, and Henry W. Evans, a cousin of the groom, of Westfield, entered first. They wore the formal evening dress with white vests. Each wore a boutenniere of white carnations.

After the ushers came one of the maids-of honor, Miss Louise Anderson, of St. Louis, a cousin of the bride. She wore a beautiful gown of white silk mull over yellow taffeta. She carried a bouquet of violets tied with purple ribbon. The six bridemaids followed two by two. They were Miss Florence Abbott, Miss Mary Bushnell, Miss Katheryn Reinhart and Miss Mary Whiton, of Plainfield, Miss Frances Baker, of New York, a cousin of the bride, and Miss Nancy Lawson, of Salem, Mass. Their gowns were of white silk mull over pink, with bowknots of pink ribbon applique on the mull. The pink gowns of the second couple were a shade lighter than that of the first couple, and those of the third couple lighter still. Immediately following was the other maid-of-honor, Miss Anne Miller, of Plainfield, who was gowned like the bridemaids, only in a still lighter shade of pink, with white ribbon trimmings. The result was a gradual shading of color that gave a most charming effect. The maids-of honor wore short veils, caught up by knots of ribbon corresponding in color to their gowns. The bridemaids had bowknots of pink ribbon in their hair. The latter carried magnificent bouquets of American Beauty roses, in which the same graduation of color was observed as in the gowns.

The bride, who is at all times one of Plainfield's most beautiful young women, never looked fairer than when she entered after the bridal party, leaning on the arm of her father. She was attired in a princess gown of white satin, entrain, trimmed with point lace and orange blossoms. She wore a tulle veil, fastened with a white aigrette and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of lilies-of the valley and orchids.

While the procession was slowing advancing down the aisle, the groom, accompanied by the best man, R A Beebe, of Plainfield, his brother, entered from the side. The officiating clergymen, Rev. Dr. George D. Baker, of Philadelphia, uncle of the bride, and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, advanced from the other side.

They met and the ushers and bridemaids separated and passed on either side forming a semi-circle about the chief participants. The solemn words of the marriage ceremony were then spoken by Rev. Dr. Baker, while the prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Richards.

As the bridal party reached the front of the sanctuary the grand harmonies of the organ grew fainter until they could scarcely be heard. While the clergyman spoke and the responses were made, low sweet music floated out into the auditorium. Then, when the last words were said and the couple pronounced man and wife, the triumphal tones of the Mendelssohn wedding march resounded through the church and Mr. and Mrs. Beebe marched slowly down the aisle and out of the building with the rest of the bridal party following. Miss Miller was escorted by the best man after whom came the bridemaids two by two, the other maid of honor and finally the ushers.

After the ceremony a reception followed at the home of the bride. The house was fairly transformed with the floral decorations. All the rooms were profusely decorated with pink and white chrysanthemums and southern smilax, while in the reception room a floral bower was arranged, wherein Mr. and Mrs. Beebe and the others of the bridal party received the guests. A thousand invitations were issued for the reception and fully five hundred were present, including a large number from out of town. An elaborate supper was served by Maresi. The dining table was elaborately decorated in the prevailing colors.

The floral decorations in both church and house were by Mackintosh, of New York, who devoted his personal attention to the work.

Each of the ushers received a handsome pearl stickpin as the gift of the groom. The bridemaids' gifts from the bride were double hearts of pearl, crowned with a wreath of pearls. The gift of the groom to the bride was a diamond and sapphire ring.

There was a multitude of wedding gifts received by Mr. and Mrs. Beebe from their hosts of friends. Silver predominated, and many valuable and dainty articles of that metal were included in the list. Other gifts, while they made no showing in the large room that the presents more than filled, were valuable, indeed.

Mr. Beebe is a trusted employe in the banking house of Wood, Huestis & Company, of Pine street, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Beebe have not yet decided where they will reside on their return from the wedding journey on which they started after remaining at the reception for a time. After their departure from the reception, the remainder of the evening was spent by

KELLEY'S DEATH IS STILL A MYSTERY.

Froelich Yesterday Gave Police Important Evidence.

WENT OVER HIS TRACKS.

TOLD HOW HE AND KELLEY WANDERED INTO HARRISON.

Says Kelley Had a Roll of Money Then—Traces of Paris Green Found By Telegraph Pole—Patrolman Dolan Met Them—Froelich Says Kelley Was Ill—Left Him and Kelly Disappeared.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Newark, November 16—Mystery still surrounds the circumstances of the death of young James Kelley, the Plainfielder found dead in a freight car at the Waverly yards Friday morning. The police are still at work on the case and are gradually learning more of the facts. It is now evident that young Charles Froelich, who was the last person known to be in Kelley's company that night, is pretty well informed, although it has been rather difficult to draw out what he knows.

Death was caused by paris green, but just under what circumstances it was taken, the police are not yet able to say. It seems certain that Kelley had his roll of bills with him after he took the paris green, and that they were taken from him after that.

Yesterday Froelich was taken by the Newark police over the route he and Kelley traveled Thursday night and he was questioned very closely regarding the happenings on that occasion.

Froelich asserts that when he met Kelley the latter had a small pail in his hand, and that, as they walked down Market street, in Newark, a man accosted them and asked for money, and Kelley drew out a roll of bills and gave the man one.

Kelley appeared to be sick, Froelich said. They went over the Centre street bridge into Harrison. Froelich took Detective Donovan over the ground. In Harrison they met Patrolman Dolan, who, on seeing Froelich, recognized him as one of the two men he encountered Wednesday night. Froelich attempted to deny this, but admitted it later.

He then took the officers over the route as he had described it, and his story of the stay in Harrison agrees with Patrolman Dolan's. At a telegraph pole near the Harrison end of the Jackson street bridge, Dolan encountered Froelich and Kelley. Froelich took the officers to the pole yesterday, and about the base of it were found what are thought to be smudges of paris green. Dolan says when he encountered the men Kelley was lying down and Froelich standing beside him.

Dolan thought they were intoxicated, and on finding they belonged in Newark ordered them across the bridge. He had heard shooting in the vicinity just before encountering the men, and was looking for the shooters when he met the two. Froelich told him his companion was not drunk, but sick. He wanted a hack to take his companion away. Kelley appeared to revive, and accompanied Froelich across the bridge. Froelich says Kelley did not take the poison there.

Froelich, after recrossing to Newark, took Donovan to Ferry and Market streets, where he says he left Kelley for a few moments, and when he returned Kelley was gone.

There is one plausible way, the police say, of accounting for the disappearance of the money. If Kelley walked directly from where Froelich claims to have left him to where his body was found, he would not only have passed through the region infested by the Waverly gang, but through a section of the city where a sick or intoxicated man might easily becomes the prey of footpads.

TO FURNISH TELEGRAPH POLES.

E. E. Cooper, of Warrenville, Has Made Contract With W. U. T. Company.

Assemblyman-elect E. E. Cooper, of Warren township, has taken the contract to furnish the Western Union Telegraph Company a large number of poles. The contract is a windfall for the Mt. Bethel farmers, a large number of whom can be seen daily carting the poles to Orange, the place of delivery. The poles are cut on the Dan Cory property recently purchased by Cooper from the estate.

The Watchung School.

The name selected for the new borough school is "Watchung," and the work is progressing quite favorably. The second story has been reached and the building presents an attractive appearance.

THEY MET ON THE ROAD.

DECAMP AND FRIENDS WANTED IT ALL.

Lambertson Was Run Down and Chased Away—It Happened Election Night—DeCamp Was Called to Account in Court

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, November 16.—The last echo of the excitement of election time was heard in Justice Clark's court last evening, when Lambert DeCamp, a young man from Alton, was brought up to answer for troublous times near Scotch Plains election night.

It so happened that on election day, DeCamp and two friends named Mellick and Tyme, came to Scotch Plains to see what was going to turn up. After the polls were closed and the result announced, the three young men, it is said, went to a local bar room to drown their disappointment in the flowing bowl. Trouble arose and they left some say in a hurry.

Disgusted with town and election, the trio climbed into DeCamp's rig and started for his home. As they passed in front of Peter Frazee's residence, they met Hans Lambertson, overseer for Former Sheriff George Kyte, of Fanwood. The road was narrow and the DeCamp outfit did not feel the necessity of turning out. Lambertson says that they deliberately ran him down.

Somehow, and idea forced itself into the minds of the disgruntled trio that they were being outwitted. So they speedily started a lively campaign against the driver of the other vehicle. Seeing the array that was determined on his defeat, Lambertson made a masterly retreat. The methods of locomotion on the part of DeCamp and his friends were somewhat wavering and they failed to make a successful pursuit.

Lambertson went before Justice Clark and made a complaint against the three on the charge of assault and disorderly conduct.

Yesterday afternoon, DeCamp was arrested and taken before Justice Clark. Tyme had disappeared in the fastnesses of Middlesex county while Mellick was a prisoner at home with illness.

DeCamp pleaded guilty to the charge of disorderly conduct, while the charge of assault was withdrawn as Lambertson says that he was not the one who struck him. DeCamp paid a fine of $5. The two other offenders will be arraigned later.

CYCLISTS IN POLITICS.

WANT RECOGNITION BY REPUBLICAN PARTY IN THIS CITY.

Will Present Their Candidate For Council Nomination in Second Ward—Thomas A. Cuming is Their Choice.

A wheelmen's candidate on the Republican ticket seems a probability in the Second ward at the coming municipal election. In the Second ward there has been comparatively little talk as to who was to be the choice of the Republicans of the ward to run for the Common Council as successor to Wm. N. Runyon. A gathering of wheelmen, mostly L. A. W. members, and several prominent property owners of the ward, was held last evening at the office of Thomas A. Cuming, local consul of the L. A. W.

The wheelmen decided that, while the large body of cyclists of the city had no particular kick to make, they deserved representation in the Council. It was decided to ask the Republican party for recognition, with the promise of staunch support. Mr. Cuming accepted the invitation to run for the nomination and his name will be presented at the Second ward primary Monday evening.

A WORTHY CAUSE.

Harvest Home Reception For Muhlenberg Hospital Tomorrow Afternoon.

Tomorrow from 2 until 7 o'clock a harvest home reception will be held at the Nurses' Home for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital.

Everybody will be welcome, admission free, and those attending are requested to bring something of benefit for the hospital, such as canned goods, dry groceries, dried fruits, cereals, etc. The smallest gift will be cheerfully accepted and the residents of this city should feel their responsibility in aiding the hospital on this occasion.

Successful Surprise Party.

A pleasant surprise party was given to Patrick Gerety at the home of Daniel McDevitt, of West Seventh street, last evening. The affair was complete in every respect, and the time was passed in singing and dancing. Music was furnished by Samuel Frazee.

PORTO RICO WANTS AMERICAN CONTROL

Dr. H. K. Carroll Tells of His Visit There.

WAS WELL RECEIVED.

PORTO RICANS GAVE HIM EVERY FACILITY POSSIBLE IN HIS WORK.

Dr. Carroll Went as United States Commissioner to the Island—Met Plainfielder on Outward Voyage—Witnessed Evacuation Ceremonies at San Juan—Supplied With Facts by Prominent Citizens.

Yesterday morning at 4 o'clock there appeared at Sandy Hook the steamer Caracas, of the Red D Line, and on board among the other passengers was Rev. Dr. H. K. Carroll, of Westervelt avenue, who holds the position of commissioner to Porto Rico by appointment of President McKinley. A little later Dr. Carroll arrived in New York, and in the afternoon he reached his home in this city. He was not accompanied by his secretary, Charles E. Buell, of Craig place, and Alfred Solomon, of New York, the interpreter. They will remain in Porto Rico until the work of the commission is completed.

A reporter of The Daily Press called at Dr. Carroll's home soon after his arrival and was greeted cordially by the commissioner. The Doctor stated that since his return he had been troubled with dizziness, due to the fact that on the return from Porto Rico their steamer struck the tail-end of a hurricane, and the effect was anything but pleasant. He had enjoyed his trip, and aside from the little unpleasantness of the return voyage, everything passed off without a hitch of any kind. The doctor was glad to tell something of his experiences, but there were many questions put to him which, on account of his position, he could not answer. They will be published later.

The doctor and his party sailed from Newport, R. I., on the steamer Manitoba, Captain Quick, on October 10th, and Saturday, October 15th, arrived at Ponce. Captain Quick was a Plainfield boy, although he was born in England. He lived in this city and attended school here. He and Dr. Carroll enjoyed many pleasant chats on the trip, and told many amusing incidents that happened while he went to school here. He is one of the leading captains of the Morgan Line running steamers between New York and New Orleans, and is considered to be one of the most trustworthy men in the business.

The Manitoba is a very large and thorough sea-going vessel. On board of her was the Forty-Seventh New York Volunteers from Brooklyn, together with a number of prominent people including the commission. The steamer reached Ponce, as stated, on Saturday evening, October 15th. The commission was informed that on the following Tuesday ceremonies would be held at San Juan in connection with the evacuation. Dr. Carroll and the rest of his party at once decided that they wanted to be present. Accordingly they got Mr. Solomon, the interpreter, to make arrangements for the trip, a distance of 78 miles over a military road. Mr. Solomon soon learned that all conveyances had been secured and that nothing was left.

Nothing daunted, Dr. Carroll at once met Gen. Henry, who has charge of the southern district of the island, and to him he stated his mission. Gen. Henry called on a well-known resident who conducts a large livery, and told him that he must provide transportation for Dr. Carroll and party to San Juan. The native replied that he had no horses, whereupon Gen. Henry told him he could borrow some. Again, the native replied that he had no driver. The General informed him that he could drive himself. This idea hit the native forcibly and he agreed.

The trip was made in safety, and Dr. Carroll says that at the end of the journey he did not feel at all tired. After a good night's rest the commission prepared to see the celebration on the following day. The doctor says that the ceremonies were very simple, but impressive. There was the arranging of the troops, the hoisting of the American flag on the principal public buildings, the firing of salutes by troops and from the forts, and a salute from one of the U. S. battleships in the harbor.

While the commission was at San Juan a congress of representative men was in session, discussing the future of the island and its needs. They turned over their reports to Dr. Carroll, as did also an association of bankers and merchants in session in Ponce. They sent a valuable document that will greatly aid in making up the report of the commission. An agricultural association held a session about the same time, and they, too, decided unanimously to assist the commission.

Regarding the result thus far of the commission's work the doctor could say but little. He did state that they were very cordially received by all classes of people, including the heads of the Government, the Secretaries of State, Treasury and Interior. They all called on the doctor and assisted him in every possible way to secure the disired information. The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court also called and gave his views on all important matters. Representative men from all professions and trades, recognizing the importance of the commission, gladly gave information.

The commission informed the officials of the island that no change could be expected until Congress had taken action. The people on the island do not like the present form of government, the doctor says. They have strongly felt the oppression of Spain, and though they have not been loud in their demonstration, they feel deeply their grievances. They are glad to know that they are to become Americans, and are anxiously awaiting for a change of government of their island.

While the doctor was in PortoRico he employed the services of Mr. Williams, who was stenographer for the Evacuation Commission at San Juan. Mr. Buell's work has been along the line of ascertaining the needs of the island as regards telephones, telegraph, etc., while Mr. Solomon, the interpreter, was kept constantly busy. The latter is a highly accomplished gentleman, and thoroughly cosmopolitan.

The members of the commission have enjoyed the climate of Porto Rico thoroughly, and Dr. Carroll says that it is a delightful place to live. The temperature in the daytime averages about 82-84 degrees, and at night about 74-76 degrees. Once in ten years has the temperature reached 100 degrees, and there is always a good breeze from the ocean. When the doctor left Mr. Buell and Mr. Solomon were in good health and, in fact, neither of them have been ill while away.

The doctor left San Juan last Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock and reached New York yesterday morning. On the return trip he met a Mr. Randolph, a Jerseyman, employed in the weather department of this Government. He has been assisting Prof. Harrington in establishing a signal service in Porto Rico.

Another pleasant feature on the outward trip was the fact that the pilot that took the Manitoba out for ten miles was Captain Bunker, a resident of Westfield, who inquired with interest after people in this vicinity.

Dr. Carroll will go to Washington today or tomorrow to confer with President McKinley, and if nothing interferes he will again sail for Porto Rico in one month's time. He will then visit all parts of the island and examine into every need of it. He will then return and present his report to the President.

TOLD STORY OF THE WAR.

Successful Illustrated Lecture at Hope Chapel Last Evening.

Last evening Hope chapel was well filled with an appreciative audience that thoroughly enjoyed the illustrated lecture on the recent Spanish-American war. The lecture was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the chapel and the views as shown under the direction of E. O. MacFarland, of Newark, were very fine. The lecturer started with the beginning of the hostilities between this country and Spain and followed every incident closely to the finish. Every picture was good and Mr. MacFarland in an entertaining manner told the story of the war. The money received from the lecture will be devoted to the interest of the chapel The receipts were gratifying to those in charge.

Case Put Over the Term.

The case of J. A. Blatz against George Rilling, for balance due on rent, which was to have come up in the Somerset County Court yesterday, has gone over for the term. The case is for $56 due on rent, and was first tried before Justice Mattison. The jury disagreed, so it was retried and a verdict rendered for the defendant Mr. Blatz appealed the case, and it was tried before Judge Bartine, when the jury again failed to agree, and another date set for the trial. Murphy & Blatz are for the plaintiff, and Pope & Runyon for the defense.

THE EARLY WRITERS OF OUR COUNTRY.

The Colonial and Revolutionary Periods Are Discussed.

RAPID GROWTH NOTED.

PROF A. H. SMYTH CONTINUES LECTURES IN EXTENSION COURSE.

Virginia and Boston Were Early Literary Centres of the Colonies—Philadelphia Became Prominent—Benjamin Franklin One of Its Greatest Writers—Revolution Produced Prose Writers and Poets.

Prof. Albert H. Smyth, teacher of English and literature in the Central High School, of Philadelphia, continued his lecture on "American Literature" last night at the Y. M. C. A., and introduced his hearers to some of the writers and their works of the Colonial and the Revolutionary periods.

Prof. Smyth believes that American literature is but a continuation of English literature, not a sudden, spontaneous growth upon Colonial soil. The first attempts at literature in this country were noticed about 1607, a fortunate time for its beginning, for the language crossed the ocean just when it was richest and most flexible. Virginia and Massachusetts were the two great centres of the English people in America, and each had a literature particularly to itself. While in Virginia it was of a lighter and more joyous strain, in New England the literary men were mostly preachers who stamped whatever they wrote with a taint of religion. A good example of this kind of literature is shown by Jonathan Edwards' writings.

Another centre of literary culture was Philadelphia, half way between Virginia and New England. Here were two elements, the Pennsylvania Dutch and the Scotch-Irish. Both elements were somewhat sterile in their literary productions, although there was a poet or two and one or two prose writers who attained prominence.

Philadelphia was called the Athens of America in those days, although since then the tide has changed, and Boston now claims that distinction. Benjamin Franklin, the most prominent figure in colonial literature, a Bostonian by birth but a Philadelphian by adoption, contributed largely to the literature of the Quaker City.

Franklin's career as a statesman and a writer is remarkable in that he had no education. He acquired a lucid style of prose writing by studying and re-writing "The Spectator."

About the middle of the eighteenth century occurred a change in the thoughts of the American people; their attention was directed from polemics to politics. This is called the Revolutionary period. It begins with the persuasive orators and ends with the arguments for the Constitution. Tom Paine's "crises" cut a remarkable figure in this period, and so did "The Federalist," a collection of paper printed at the time in one of the current magazines, a series of arguments for the support of the Union and the establishment of a stable Government. The poets, too, of the Revolution, Trumbull, Barlow, Freneau and Hopkinson, deserve mention.

The next four lectures will be more interesting than the two preceding ones, as they will deal altogether with writers whose names are well-known to every one who pretends to read at all. There are several of the Extension Course tickets still remaining which can be obtained now.

FRIENDS' HALF YEAR MEETING.

Sessions Will Begin Today and Continue Until Friday Morning.

The sessions of the half year meeting of the Society of Friends begin today. A youth's meeting will be held this evening at 8 o'clock, under the care of Joel Borton, of Woodstown, this State. Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock occurs a meeting for worship followed by the transaction of the business of the half year meeting. A dinner will be served to Friends in attendance, and at 3 o'clock a session of the Philanthropic commiitee will be held in which reports will be given of the recent Friends' conference at Richmond, Ind., by those who attended.

The evening session will be devoted to the colored schools in South Carolina in which Friends and many other Plainfielders are interested. This will be in charge of Anna M. Jackson, of New York, who will illustrate her talk by lantern slides.

The meeting for worship Friday morning at 11 o'clock closes the session. Any who feel interested to attend any of these meetings will be welcome.

SPAIN IS WEAKENING

Bad News from Captain-General of the Philippines.

MADRID EAGER FOR PEACE

The Rebels Seem to be Getting the Upper Hand of Gen. Rios in the Island of Visayas. Spain's Ministry Are Now Desirous that the Negotiations Should End Quickly.

Madrid, Nov. 16, via Biarritz, France.—General Rios, governor of the Visayas islands and acting captain general of the Philippines, has telegraphed to the government that the insurrection is rapidly spreading in the Visayas, its increase being so great that he considers it prudent to maintain a purely defensive attitude instead of shedding more Spanish blood.

General Rios gives a still graver aspect to the situation, the circumstances of which are not made public by the government.

The opinion of the ministers is divided, although a majority of the members of the cabinet are really anxious that the affairs with which the Paris peace commissioners are conserned shall end quickly.

In the meantime the government has telegraphed to General Rios instructing him to endeavor by all possible means to quell the rebellion.

The queen regent is dismayed at seeing the turn events have taken, and public opinion is manifestly in favor of a speedy termination of the Paris negotiations.

Madrid, Nov. 16.—The queen regent yesterday granted an audience to General Augustin, formerly captain general of the Philippines, and Admiral Montojo, who commanded the Spanish squadron destroyed by Admiral Dewey's ships in Manila bay.

The French ambassador also had a conference with Duke Almodovar del Rio.

Absolutely no news has been received from the Spanish commission at Paris.

Berlin, Nov. 16.—A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette from Madrid says that according to trustworthy information received there from London, Lord Salisbury is disposed to act in concert with the United States, and that the reinforcements which are being sent to Gibraltar make the British policy seem suspicious.

It is quite generally the opinion that for this reason the government ought to make peace with the Americans forthwith, before England has an opportunity to put her finger in the pie.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—It is learned that an informal discussion of the Philippines question took place before the adjournment of the cabinet meeting yesterday. The administration has reason to believe that something definite will be learned to-day as to the intentions of the Spanish commissioners with regard to the American demands. The United States will not wait much longer and Spain must therefore act at once or the American commission will promptly be sent an ultimatum.

Official information has reached the department of state and the president that a committee representing the French creditors of Spain is largely responsible for the delay of the Spanish commission in making reply to United States through its efforts have provision made for the assumption of the Philippine bonded debt. We are able to state on official authority that the United States government has flatly refused to assume any portion of any debt, and that this determination will be adhered to. The payment of a cash price for the islands may be arranged, but no debt will be assumed by the United States. That decision is final.

Sold His Wife.

Newark, N. J., Nov. 16.—The sale of a wife by her husband for a five dollar note has become known in Newark. Mrs. Nellie Van Hise is the woman and her husband, Harry, was the beneficiary of the sale.

The purchaser was William A. Devey, a member of the First New Jersey volunteers. He is nineteen years old and the woman is eighteen.

She was formerly Nellie McLaughlin, and was married to Van Hise on April 22 last by Justice Marantette. On November 10 Van Hise sold her to Devey, an agreement in writing being drawn up. Devey paid $5 on account and is to pay the $5 balance later.

To Study Latitude Variation.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Mr. E. D. Preston, who represented the United States at the International Geodetic Association at its Stuttgart conference last month, has just returned to Washington and is about to report on the subject. The prime object of the conference was the measurement of the earth. Action was taken for the measurement of an arc at the equator, in conjunction with the measurement of an arc near the pole, now under way by the Swedes and Russians, which, together, will throw new light on the flattening of the earth.

Lieut.-Col. Williams Death.

Havana, Nov. 16.—The remains of the late Lieutenant Colonel Williams, the chief quartermaster, who died of fever on November 11, were conveyed yesterday morning from the Colon cemetery to La Machina wharf, where they were taken aboard the steamer Saratoga for shipment north. Rear Admiral Sampson, General Wade, General Butler, Colonel Clous, the British consul, a number of friends of the deceased officer, and the American newspaper correspondents accompanied the body from the cemetery to the wharf.

Smallpox in Cleveland.

Cleveland, Nov. 16.—Three cases of smallpox have been reported here. Two of the patients have been taken to the detention hospital and the third is convalescent. The health authorities have taken the utmost precaution to prevent a spread of the disease.

HEADING OFF A MAIL COMBINE.

A Scheme to Evade the Tax on Bids for Contracts.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—The postoffice department has discovered the existence of a combine of speculative mail contract bidders looking to control of the bids and evasion of the fifty cent war tax imposed on their contract bonds.

Some weks ago the department was approached with a view to ascertaining its attitude on such organization and prompt notice was given that it would bere garded as illegitimate. Notwithstanding this, the department authorities have found that a considerable number of these bidders or agents have got together, formed an arrangement for opening their own bids and selecting ostensibly the lowest for filing with the department, suppressing the others and thus also saving the revenue accruing to the government from the large number of competitive bids submitted.

Some idea of the interests involved may be gained by the fact that under contracts to be let under the general advertisement of September 15 last, to which the organization of these bidders immediately looks, more than two hundred thousand bids ordinarily would be submitted for contracts for carrying mails on routes in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri. The contracts are to be for four years from July 1, 1899.

An official warning to bidders generally has been issued.

Commissioner Porter's Report.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Robert P. Porter, special commissioner for the United States to Cuba, has presented his report to the president and secretary of the treasury.

Mr. Porter examined five hundred witnesses. A complete revision of the tariff was submitted in the form of a new bill, which will be examined by the experts, and if approved will be promulgated by the president and take effect at the port of Cienfuegos on December 1.

Commissioner Porter says that the Spanish tariff was made by Spaniards for Spain in the interests of the Spaniards. That seems to be the only principle in it. The value of the imports for 1896 was $61,443,334, with an average of 63.7 per cent. The largest item was alimentary substances, $31,179,289, cotton goods following with $5,908,202.

It has not been thought advisable to make radical changes in the administrative branches nor to change weights and measures into United States equivalents, because the people of Cuba are accustomed to the metric system. United States currency, however, will be substituted for Spanish pesos. The tariff imposed reduces all duties about 60 per cent. on the old Spanish rates, and will average fully two-thirds less than the rates now enacted.

More Powerful Than McKinley.

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 16.—Whites around reenwood think they are more powerful than President McKinley. Instead of taking a common sense view of the situation, they think President McKinley, in deciding to abolishh the postoffice at McCormick, has yielded to them and confessed that the Tolberts were to blame, and the whites are in the right.

This may lead to theg ravest consequences.

The press of South Carolina is aroused, and the Columbia State and Charleston News and Courier denounce the reckless murderers. Both advocate disfranchising those who resort to mob rule.

Match Company Has German Concession.

Akron, Ohio, Nov. 16.—Mr. O. C. Barber, president of the Diamond Match Company, who recently returned from Europe, makes the statement that arrangements have been concluded with the erman imperial government by which a mammoth new match factory will be erected by the Diamond company in the Fatherland.

The plant will be located at Dresden. This will be the fourth factory which the Diamond company has established in Europe in the past few years.

Maria Teresa Cannot be Saved.

Washington, Nov. 16.—It would appear from the report just received by the navy department that all hope of saving the Maria Teresa is gone. Captain McCalla, now at the scene of the wreck, says that, in his opinion, it will be impossible to save the vessel, and his opinion is indorsed by Lieutenant Hobson Lieutenant Craven and Captain Chittender of the wrecking company.

Bits of News.

The war department is informed that the transport Michigan, with the Fifth cavalry on board, has arrived at Ponce, Porto Rico, and that as soon as ready the vessel will transport the batteries now at Ponce, destined for service in Cuba.

The report of General G. N. Lieber judge advocate general, for the year ending August 31, shows that there have been a total of 1,180 courts martial during the year.

Judge Showalter of the United States circuit court at Chicago has denied the motion of Meyer Bernhard to appoint a receiver for the National Linseed Oil Company.

Congressman Hager of Iowa announces that he will introduce a bill to admit Osborne Diegnan, one of the Merrimac crew, to the Naval Academy at Annapolis

President McKinley has promised, if possible, to take part in the Masonic ceremonies to mark hte centennial of the death of George Washington.

PROBLEMS OF THE WAR

No Extra Session of Congress to Deal With Them.

THE PRESIDENT WATCHFUL

The President Desirous of Feeling His Way in the New Territory with Military Authority Uppermost. No Currency Reform Legislation in His Programme.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—Persons in the president's confidence who have discussed the subject with him within a few hours, say that his mind is now pretty well settled against the idea of an extra session of congress in March, 1889.

At the coming short session he expects to get all the legislation out of the way which is immediately necessary, including the appropriation for carrying the government through the next fiscal year, and the only thing of importance which now seems to him likely to be thrown over is the treaty of peace with Spain, which will have to be ratified by the Senate before becoming operative.

In case that is ready by March next, an extra session of the Senate alone may be called to give it the finishing touches, but the presence of the House as far as can be foreseen to-day, will not be required.

The reasons which impel the president to this view may be summed up in the single statement that he does not care to have Congress on his hands at the juncture which will then have been reached. The only thing in connection with our new colonial dependencies which would call for general legislation, would be the establishment of systems of civil government there, and the president feels that this is a matter in which there is danger from too great haste. He would rather feel his way first by keeping the military authorities uppermost, but under it building up a modified civil system, little by little, so that, by the time he turns the matter over to Congress he will be able to recommend the legislation most desired, and to draw upon actually existing conditions for illustrations with which to enforce his arguments.

In other words, if Congress finds a fairly satisfactory system of government already in operation in the newly acquired territory, it will be less likely to rush into foolish experiments.

Moreover, the agricultural interests of this country are beginning to wake up to the idea that their welfare is menaced by the addition of all these agricultural islands, and to put the latter on a footing of even competition with our domestic industries might be attended with serious results politically to the party of the administration.

Of course, as incidental to this programme, we must face the fact that there will be no currency reform legislation during the present presidential term.

It was with the view of bringing this subject to the front that the president at first considered favorably the idea of an extra session next spring.

If the currency question is postponed to the regular long session, nothing will be done, for the administration has no desire to spring the currency question upon the country on the eve of a presidential election.

The theory of the president on this head is that by the time the first regular session of the fifty-sixth Congress meets, the country will be in full tide of prosperity, and that the agitation of the money question, in view of the use the Democrats might make of it, would be unwise, as liable to unsettle business conditions again.

The outlook is not especially encouraging to the sound money Democrats who united with the Republicans in 186; but the point has been made plain to the president that since a great multitude of these men have gone back to their full party allegiance, and must not be counted upon for any further assistance, he must steer his own cours according to his best judgment.

Transatlantic Routes.

London, November 16.—At a conference between representatives of the Cunard Line, American Line, French Transatlantic Company, North German Lloyds Line, Hamburg-American Steamship Company, the Netherlands Line, the Wilson Line, the Atlantic Transportation Company, and the Elder-Dempster, Furness, and White Star Lines, presided over by Mr. Ismay, it has been decided that two outward and two homeward ocean tracks will be used from January 15 to August 18, and from August 18 to January 15. The regulations adopted will be circulated and hopes are expressed that all transatlantic vessels and Newfoundland fishermen will recognize them.

The Fever at the Niantic Camp.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 16.—State Chemist H. E. Smith has made a report on the wells at the Niantic camp, stating that the water contained a considerable number of bacteria, but they were of a comparatively inocuous character.

As the case now stands one expert has attributed the serious outbreak at the camp of typhoid fever to the wells, while the state expert rejects that theory.

Emperor William's Journey.

Valetta, Island of Malta, November 16.—The imperial yacht Hohenzollern, with the Emperor and Empress of Germany on board, arrived here yesterday, escorted by the German warship Hela and the British torpedo boat destroyers Ardent and Banshee.

The forts and ships exchanged salutes with the Hohenzollern.

The Industrial Commission.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The government industrial commission has resumed its sessions, occupying for the first time as a commission its new headquarters in the Bliss building, facing the capitol.

The session was mainly devoted to the rules of procedure.

A PECULIAR REMEDY.

The Rev. F. I. Bell, a highly esteemed minister residing in Weedsport, Cayuga Co., N. Y., in a recent letter writes as follows: "There has never been anything that I have taken that has relieved the Dyspepsia from which I have suffered for ten years except the new remedy called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Since taking them I have had no distress at all after eating and again after long years CAN SLEEP WELL. Rev. F.I. Bell, Weedsport, N. Y., formerly, Idalia, Colo."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a remarkable remedy, not only because it is a certain cure for all forms of indigestion, but because it seems to act as thoroughly in old chronic cases of dyspepsia as well as in mild attacks of indigestion or biliousness. A person has dyspepsia simply because the stomach is overworked, all it wants is a harmless, vegetable remedy to digest the food and thus give it the much needed rest.

This is the secret of the success of this peculiar remedy. No matter how weak or how much disordered the digestion may be, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. New life and energy is given not only to the stomach but to every organ and nerve in the body. A trial of this splendid medicine will convince the most skeptical that Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles can be cured. The tablets are prepared by the F. A. Stuart Co., of Marshall, Mich., but so popular has the remedy become that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can now be obtained at any drug store at 50 cent per package. CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it isn't always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

VOLUNTEERS AT MANILA.

The President to Recommend an Increase of Regulars to Take Their Place.

Washington, D. C., 9 Nov. 16.—Great pressure is being brought upon the war department to have the volunteer troops now in the Philippines returned to this country. Nearly every state that has troops stationed at Manila has asked through its governor or representatives in Congress that these troops be sent home.

This pressure comes through the relatives and friends of the volunteers, and is started by the troops, who have been writing home.

Some of these letters published in the state papers at the homes of the enlisted men have created a wave of sympathy for the volunteers.

While they do not recount very great hardships, except among those who are ill, they do show that the life is very obnoxious and that the duty of policing the city of Manila and remaining inactive is very disagreeable.

It is said at the war department that there is no way of relieving these troops from duty in the Philippines at the present time.

The uncertain conditions that exist in the island of Luzon make it utterly impossible to get along with a smaller number than are stationed there at present.

General Otis has been asked by cable if troops could be spared, and has replied in the negative.

THE DREYFUS CASE.

The Prisoner to Be Informed to Prepare His Defence.

Paris, Nov. 16.—The court of cassation has informed the Minister of the Colonies, M. Gullian, that it has decided that Dreyfus be informed by telegraph that the revision proceedings have begun, and that he be instructed to prepare his defence.

The decision of the court is very significant, as it has hitherto been generally admitted that no innovation should be introduced in the Dreyfus proceedings. Questions will now be drafted and posted to Dreyfus, who will formulate his replies.

The Ministry of the Colonies has received a cable despatch saying that Dreyfus is in good health.

Kansas Populists Quit.

Topeka, Nov. 16.—Since the result of the election in Kansas became known there has been talk among Populists of a special session of the legislature to pass more restrictive railroad legislation, to confirm the appointments to several state boards and to enact other legislation.

Governor Leedy summoned to his office last night all Populist state officials and Populists from every section of the state to discuss the proposition. The meeting was secret, but after the doors were opened it was announced that there would be no extra session and that the Populist administration would go out of business without attempting any extraordinary party legislation.

Crew of the Glenhuntly Saved.

London, Nov. 16.—The crew of the abandoned British bark Glenhuntly, which sailed from New York on March 31, 1898, for Freemantle, Australia, in command of Captain Shaw, have been landed at Simon's bay, near Cape Town, South Africa, by the British warship Thrush.

Captain McIntyre of the British bark Strathgryfe, on her arrival at Melbourne on November 7, from this city, reported that the Glenhuntly was abandoned on June 5, and that the crew were on the rocky island of Tristan d'Acunha, in the South Atlantic ocean.

Manila Health Report.

Manila, Nov. 16.—Following is the report of sickness among the troops for the week just ended: Typhoid fever 124, malarial fever 608, dysentery 95, diarrhoea 184, all other intestinal troubles 42, gastric fever 19, wounds and other injuries 79, heat 3, smallpox 39, including six Spaniards, all other sicknesses, 610; total, with Cavite not reported, 1,816 cases, as against 1,894 last week.

The deaths were: Typhoid fever 1, meningitis 2, dysentery 1, pupura haemorrhagica 1, smallpox 1.

To-day's Cabinet Meeting.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—Attorney General Griggs and Secretary Bliss were not present at the cabinet meeting yesterday, having left on the 11 o'clock train with Mr. Dawes, the comptroller of the currency, to attend the dinner given last night by the New York Chamber of Commerce.

The meeting occupied less time than usual and at its conclusion it was said that nothing of especial importance was under discussion.

Patti to Marry Again.

London, Nov. 16.—The Manchester Guardian says that Mme. Patti, during an interval in the concert at Albert Hall, London, last evening, informed some of her friends of her intention to marry again.

The man who will become the prima donna's third husband is Baron Cederstrom, a Swede, and the marriage will take place in February.

The Mohegan Disaster.

London, Nov. 16.—At the Mansion House police court yesterday a man named Robin Spurdy was committed for trial on the charge of circulating a libel, contained in a letter addressed to survivors and relatives of victims of the Mohegan disaster, intimating that her captain was bribed to wreck the vessel.

ARMY SYSTEM SCORED

Breckinridge Thinks Congress Is Responsible for Its Condition.

"IT WAS THE LORD'S WAR"

The Cuban Campaign Described from an Inspector-General's View. The Government Ought to Have Done Better by Its Soldiers.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 16.—The war investigating commission yesterday resumed the examination of Major General Joseph C. Breckinridge, General Beaver conducting the inquiry.

In his testimony yesterday General Breckinridge described the campaign in Cuba as he observed it.

He went to Cuba as an inspector general, having previously noticed the preparations for the expeditions. He had concluded that the arrangements for debarkation were inadequate. He made no report on this subject.

"Why not?" he was asked.

"Because General Miles was on the ground and could observe for himself," he replied.

No preparation was made for landing in the face of an enemy other than what the navy was to furnish. The great question was how to get the greatest number of men on the fighting line in the quickest possible time.

He said that he did not think that everything was sacrificed to this end, but everything was strained. The entire movement of the army toward Santiago was at the suggestion of the navy, and the landing was under its direction.

Referring to a probable plan of campaign, he said that he believed that General Miles had a plan and the situation would have been different if General Miles had been in active command at the firing line.

"In what respect?" was inquired.

"Well, General Miles has a fire and dash and spark about him," he responded.

"But a great victory was won, was it not?" questioned ex-Governor Woodbury.

"The victory was won when General Toral's nerve gave out."

"The victory was given by the Lord, was it not?" ex-Governor Beaver inquired.

"I always regarded it as absolutely the Lord's war," said General Breckinridge.

He added: "The result was marvelously commendable. I do not think the campaign was managed in the best way, but no matter how things were tangled, the army went to victory. It reminds me of a remark of Lord Beresford, who said: 'Men, I have led you into a devil of a fix, and it's your duty to get me out of it.' I think that the government ought to have done better for its soldiers. I do not know that other steamships might have been secured for transports, but I think so."

General Breckinridge condemned the American military system. It was all wrong, he said, and Congress was responsible for the conditions. Theer was too much regulation and not sufficient fighting to obscure the bad results.

"There have to be camp fevers," he said, "just the same as a child has to cut its teeth. It is the fault of the American nation and its bad military system, which makes bad military preparations. The ill effects always fall on the volunteer. The regular soldier adapts himself to a bad system, and is able to go through a campaign, but the volunteer is not hardened. Congress does not make any preparation. When the war broke out there were not 250,000 rifles of modern manufacture; there were not 250,000 suits of clothes and not double that amount of underwear. Yet men never suffered to such a limited extent under such conditions. The only way for a man to learn to live without his haversack is for him to go do it. Men elect men to Congress and then get in afighting ardor and have to suffer like hell through what they prepared for themselves."

"Considering the system, the government did all it could for the men?" ex-Governor Woodbury asked.

"The government did better than could be expected, but not one-quarter as well as should have been done. The condition was not as bad as in 1861."

General Breckinridge said that he was sent to Cuba as a member of General Miles's staff. He had no command, but attached himself to General Lawton.

General Beaver remarked that General Lawton had complimented him for gallantry.

General Breckinridge explained: "He and I had kindly relations here—we both felt that the inspector general's department had been emasculated in this war. General Lawton was the man General Shafter most relied on for the success of his campaign. I went with General Lawton and he was kind enough to solicit my advice."

Colonel Denby wanted an explanation of the charge that the inspector general's department was emasculated. General Breckinridge explained that he ment that it was reduced in efficiency.

"There was no system," he said, "by which a central authority could get information from the inspectors general—no way to inform the department what was wanted and what was not wanted. When I returned to Washington and asked for material from which to make up a report, I was informed that there was none."

"Is it true that General Shafter offered to turn over his command to you?" General McCook inquired.

"I would not like to answer that. You cannot tell how General Shafter was considering matters. I don't see the advantage to the commission in having the information."

"It has been published that he did make such an offer," said General McCook.

"Yes, I have seen such a report in the papers, but I didn't give it."

General Breckinridge suggested that either General Shafter or General Lawton be questioned on the subject.

The next witness was Captain Robert W. Dowdy, a retired army officer, who served in the Spanish war as a lieutenant in the Seventeenth infantry.

LAFAYETTE MONUMENT FUND.

Thought $100,000 Will Be Raised by School Children Outside of New York.

New York, Nov. 16.—Donations of school children of the United States toward erecting a monument over the grave of Lafayette in Paris, France, it is now thought will reach $100,000. In nearly every state of the Union October 19 last was observed as Lafayette day in the public schools, and contributions were received from pupils.

Charles G. Dawes, controller of the United States treasury, who is treasurer of the Lafayette monument fund, is now daily receiving contributions from schools throughout the country.

Reports to Robert J. Thompson, secretary of the Lafayette monument committee, show that Pennsylvania is ahead in donations and that Ohio will probably follow next.

The school children of Pennsylvania have given over $20,000, and more is coming in.

Ohio schools have contributed $20,000 and will add to that.

Illinois has donated over $10,000, and a large proportion of this is from the school children of Chicago.

Other states rolling in goodly sums are Wisconsin, Iowa, Indiana, Massachusetts and Minnesota. The District of Columbia has also contributed largely.

Children of the Empire state were eager to give, but the state superintendent of schools forbade any collections being made. It is stated that several prominent wealthy men of New York city, feeling that it would be a reflection upon the state not to participate in the Lafayette monument fund, will make handsome presents.

AT THE RECEIPT OF CUSTOMS.

The Senate Investigation Committee Seeking Light on Internal Revenue.

New York, Nov. 16.—Senators O. H. Platt of Connecticut and J. K. Jones of Arkansas, two of the three members of the sub-committee of the finance committee of the Senate, are now in this city to investigate the operations of the customs and internal revenue laws.

Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island is also a member of the sub-committee, but thus far has not attended any of the sessions in this city.

The committee will make an exhaustive investigation of the entire customs administrative act from the time of its enforcement in 1890 to the amended act of 1898.

In fact it is these amendments which will receive special consideration, as importers at this and other ports have recently declared that the Dingley act contains many obnoxious features. The system now in operation in the drawback division is declared by many to be decidedly faulty, and the matter of alleged undervaluations, which has caused so much ill feeling among lace and embroidery importers and the interchange of sharp communications between Collector Bidwell and Appraiser Wakeman will also be inquired into.

Railroad Wreck Near Toronto.

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 16.—The Grand Trunk Railway express from Montreal for Toronto collided with a freight train near Murray Hill yesterday morning. Eight persons were killed or fatally injured.

Twenty passengers, most of them being in the Pullman cars, were more or less seriously hurt.

Nine or ten of the wounded are in the Belleville hospital under treatment.

The accident occurred at a place called the Diamond Crossing, about two miles from Trenton. The express, which was due at Trenton at 3.35 a. m., ran into an open switch and dashed into thef reight train.

West Virginia Legislature.

Charleston, Nov. 16.—The political complexion of the West Virginia legislature on joint ballot depends upon contested seats, and will not be settled until the two houses are organized. The Republicans will organize the Senate and the Democrats the House. The two contested seats in the Senate will be decided by the courts, and the same decision will settle both, the question being whether a senator loses his seat by accepting a commission in the army.

The Berlin to Sail To-day.

New York, Nov. 16.—The army transport to sail this week is the Berlin, which will go to Santiago, San Juan and Ponce. She will start to-day and will carry a large number of passengers, including Mrs. Leonard Wood, the wife of General Wood governor of Santiago province. A number of Cubans also go on the Berlin, intending to return to their homes in Cuba, from which they were driven during the revolution.

The Chippewas and Congress.

Washington D. C., Nov. 16.—Two delegations of Chippewa Indians of Minnesota are expected here by the opening of Congress for hearings on the logging problem in their reservation. One will oppose the present system of timber disposition and ask to have timber estimation stopped, as so much waste of money. The other delegation favors present methods.

Against Imperialism.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 16.—United States Senators Bacon and Clay yesterday declared their strong opposition to the annexation of the Philippines and their determination to vote against any treaty that embodies that scheme. Senator Bacon believes that it will be very difficult to secure the necessary vote for a ratification of such a treaty.

Another Japanese Cruiser.

San Francisco, Nov. 16.—The Japanese cruiser Chitose will have steam up in her donkey boiler this week and her dynamo and small machinery will be tested.

Gen. Grenfell Governor of Malta.

London, Nov. 16.—Major General Sir Francis Grenfell, commanding the British army of occupation in Egypt, has been appointed governor of Malta.

LET US ARM YOU!
It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

What Competition Will Do.

Trenton now enjoys fifty cent gas, and the company that furnishes says that there is money in it for them at that rate of pay. That blessing for the consumers of gas was only arrived at, however, after a bitter contention. The old company has made every effort to drive the new comers from the field, but have labored in vain. When the ordinance permitting the new company to lay its pipes in the city was before the Common Council the old monopolists endeavored to frustrate the effort to give the people of the city cheaper gas by maintaining a stiff lobby and fighting the proposed improvement. The ordinance, after a somewhat checkered career, was finally adopted and the new company started to construct its system. The old company then reduced the price of gas from its exorbitant rate of $2 to $1.50 and then to $1 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Despite the vigorous efforts of the old company, the People's Gas Improvement Company has secured thousands of subscribers in the city and starts to furnish gas of a superior quality at 50 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Lady Martin, wife of Sir Theodore Martin, the poet and historiographer of Queen Victoria, who died recently, was the celebrated actress, Helen Faucit. She was almost the last of the great stage artists of the first half of the century who made the drama resplendent with their genius. She was supporting Macready when our own great tragedienne, Charlotte Cushman, arrived in England for the first time, unheralded and without friends. It was her kindness (so Miss Cushman once told the writer) which induced Macready to give the American actress a hearing. After that Miss Cushman's genius needed no further introduction. Miss Faucit excelled in the expression of romantic and tender passion. She was the original representative of many of the heroines in the plays produced by Macready, and in such characters as Juliet, Rosalind, Ophelia, Imogen, Beatrice and Miranda she was one of the greatest ornaments of the English stage. After her retirement from the profession she achieved reputation as a writer on the Shakespearian characters and displayed no little literary genius in criticism.

The latest fad of a certain class of fashionable ladies in Paris is to scent themselves by the means of hypodermic injections. This is of course the folly of women who have money and no occupation to keep their minds from eccentric doings. The custom of scenting the breath by drugs injected under the tongue is by no means new, and the later practice is a development of it. If American women, so many of whom also have money and nothing to interest the better part of the mind, insist on following the Paris example, let them be wise enough to see that the apparatus is kept thoroughly cleansed with carbolic acid and so made aseptic. One can fancy no surer way of disseminating disease even if the solutions injected are harmless except to the noses of those who don't like a woman reeking with perfumes.

Some interesting deductions may be drawn from the October imports of diamonds, cut and uncut, for the years 1897 and 1898. Last year the cut stones reached $684,878; in 1898, $945,593. The uncut stones were valued at $489,985 for 1897 and $837,810 for 1898. The great increase in importations would seem to indicate, firstly, a much greater surplus in the hands of purchasers to invest in one of the most useless of luxuries. In the second place, the enormous increase in the uncut stones imported would indicate a great development in the diamond cutting industry in America.

The commissioners appointed under the Martin Act for the collection of back taxes in this city, whose report in reference to the sums charged against innocent purchasers of property was not approved by the Supreme Court, will meet in the Common Council chamber December 19th, for the purpose of meeting the taxpayers concerned and revising the adjustment in accordance with the court decision.

Of course, law is law, but then what an unfortunate thing it is for suffering humanity that it has been decided that book agents are exempt from paying a revenue tax. Commissioner Scott says that a "person who receives goods into his possession and sells and delivers them on commission is not to be regarded as a commercial broker."

A French statistician has calculated that the human eye travels over 2,000 yards in reading an ordinary sized novel. The average human being is supposed to get through 2,500 miles of reading in a lifetime. According to this idea everyone must run as they read.

Those persons who have a doubt about their being able to carry out New Year's resolutions successfully had better commence giving them a trial during the holidays. Then they will know their capacity for such things.

The war investigation still drags on. The public has lost interest in the affair, but it is proper for it to continue till all the alleged misdoings of public officials have been probed into thoroughly.

Union county will figure conspicuously in the next Legislature, and Assemblyman Roger F. Murray will not be among the least of the legislators, either.

The regular Republicans are going ahead as though there were no dark clouds hovering around in the municipal campaign.

Winfield S. Angleman, one of the most active Citizens' ticket promoters, is a candidate for the City Judgeship nomination.

Mr. Croker is said to be tired out. We should say that he had been thrown out.

In another week it will be Thanksgiving Eve. How time does fly.

There ought not to be a lack of issues for the city election.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Butterick patterns are now ready for December at the agency of A. L. & M. D. Gorsline, 144 Park avenue.

—At White's tomorrow they will place on sale in the glove department a splendid assortment of fine castoe gloves.

—A Thanksgiving service will be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church next Sunday evening under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society.

—Dog Catcher Frisbie killed two dogs yesterday owned by Michael Weber, of East Third street. The dogs were acting strange and Mr. Weber wanted them killed.

—Monday, December 19th, the Martin Act Commissioners will meet in the Council rooms to meet all persons who are not satisfied with the work of the commissioners in their particular case.

—The employes of the local telephone company are now busily engaged in placing wires underground. The change may have a tendency to affect some of the telephones about the city.

MISS OLIVE FARRINGTON SAMPSON.

In January Miss Olive Farrington Sampson, daughter of Admiral Sampson, is to be married to Mr. Henry Harrison Scott. The ceremony was to have taken place in October, but owing to the absence of the Admiral and Mrs. Sampson, who are in Havana, it was postponed.

HOME.

Home's not merely four square walls,
Though with pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Filled with shrines the heart hath builded!
Home! go watch the faithful dove,
Sailing 'neath the heaven above us;
Home is where there's one to love!
Home is where there's one to love us!

Home's not merely roof, and room,
It needs something to endear it;
Home is where the heart can bloom,
Where there's some kind lip to cheer it!
What is home with none to meet,
None to welcome, none to greet us?
Home is sweet, and only sweet,
When there's one we love, to meet us.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"The Girl from 'Frisco," which will be at Stillman Music Hall next Friday, has made a triumphal tour of the country, and is on its way to New York for a run. It will be here only one night. The comedy has been pronounced one of the brightest and most interesting of all plays of the kind this season. It tells an interesting story, in which the girl from 'Frisco gets the best of her miserly old guardian who wants to marry her for her money. The old fellow has a number of unpleasant adventures, and he deserves all he gets. The Golden Gate Quartette sings all the popular songs of the day, and there is dancing and singing by other members of the company. All are clever artists, from the very pretty girl who fills the title role, Myron Leffingwell, the well-known actor who represents the old guardian, to the dainty little soubrette who helps the girl from 'Frisco, and plays tricks on everyone in the play.

* * * * *

Never before has such an array of clever people as the Burrell Comedy Company, which will appear at Music Hall next week. For the past ten years Manager Burrell has given the public all over the country the very best shows, and has not only made a reputation for his company but has won a fortune for himself. The leading actress is Miss Laura Hulbert, a lady with much magnetism, sweet voice and great ability, who has created many roles in Mr. Palmer's companies. The supporting cast is a very strong one and a lot of clever vaudeville artists will appear between the acts. The programme will be changed nightly. The opening production Monday night will be the powerful play, "Infatuation," in which Miss Hulbert appears to great advantage.

—The Reform Club will elect officers at its first meeting in December.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 16—The three nights' fair to be held by the Epworth League of the Dunellen M. E. church in Apgar's Hall, November 17th, 18th and 19th, will be a marked success judging from present appearances. The committees having the different booths in charge have spared no effort to make the fair the most attractive one ever held in this borough. One of the many attractions for the first night will be a Japanese tea, served by the young ladies, in Japanese costumes. A pretty Japanese souvenir will be given to all who are served with tea. A real live gypsy has been secured to tell the fortunes of all who may so desire, and will be in attendance all three nights of the fair. The Plainfield brass band will furnish the music the first night of the fair, and the Ladies' Orchestra will be in attendance Friday and Saturday nights. On Saturday night prizes will be awarded to the young lady making the best cake and to the young man who makes the best apron. The cakes and aprons will be sold at auction immediately after the judges have passed upon them. The trolley cars will run directly to the door to accommodate any who come from out of town.

The power which is furnished the Bound Brook trolley cars gave out Monday night about 10 o'clock, and prevented the car that leaves here every hour from making its last two trips, and the Plainfield cars could not run up as far as Taylor's, but stopped at Jefferson avenue just as they used to do before the track was extended. The power was not put on again until late yesterday morning, and the cars ran irregular all day after that. The moterman and conductor on the stabled car had to go home on the train, and what few passengers there were either returned to Plainfield or followed the conductor's and motorman's example.

The pupils of the public schools are enjoying another vacation, the schools being closed so that the teachers can attend the Institute at New Brunswick.

A lecture will be given in the Presbyterian church two weeks from last night the proceeds of which will go to the financial fund of the church.

There is quite a little building being done in the borough now, and workmen are kept busy.

The pay car was due yesterday, and that made the hearts of many Dunellenites glad.

Isaac Laing is very low with consumption, and it is feared that he will not recover.

William H. Terry spent yesterday in New York, where he went on business.

Mrs. William Carman is entertaining company from out of town.

Miss Minnie Vanderweg has recovered from a ten days' illness.

Miss May Abbott has returned from a visit to Princeton.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, November 16.—Rev. J. S. Braker and George E Hall are attending the State Sunday-school convention being held in Paterson. Mr. Hall is to make an address before the convention on "Better County Work." The convention ends Thursday evening.

Dr. Parks, D. D., had the pleasure of making two hearts beat as one Tuesday evening. The couple, who were from out of town, requested the doctor to withhold their names and the little affair would have remained a secret but for the fact that they made enquiry for a minister, and they were directed to the doctor's home.

Freeholders Hubbard, Tier and Robison enjoyed a ride over the mountains Tuesday afternoon making an inspection of the road, a request having been made to the Board by some of the property owners to have one of the roads through that section made into a county road and be macadamized.

Miss Mary Bornmann, who recently underwent an operation for the removal of a tumor on her foot, returned to her home yesterday.

The condition of James H Walker, who has been an inmate of Muhlenberg Hospital for some time, is said to be improving slowly.

Mr. and Mrs Andrews are spending a few days with their daughter, Mrs. Hess, in New York city.

The popular pastime in the village at present is to own or borrow a gun and go hunting.

Rapael Meister, enjoyed a holiday Monday and visited his family in Newark.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 16—The remains of the late Frederick Gale, brother of A. K Gale, of this town, who died at the Presbyterian Hospital in New York Sunday, were brought to Westfield today. The funeral was held at the Episcopal church with Rev. Charles Fiske officiating. Mr. Gale was connected with the Red Cross and had been attending the soldiers at Camp Montauk where he took sick with the typhoid fever and died at the hospital before his relatives even knew that he was ill.

The Congregational church was well filled last evening when Miss Adeline W. Sterling, the critic of the Harper Publishing Company, gave her lecture on 'Some Passing Thoughts on Current Literature." The lecture was very interesting and the large attendance enabled the church to realize a neat sum for the benefit of the building fund.

The firm of Tuttle Brothers has been dissolved by mutual consent and John T. Smith has left the firm and will start in business at Horsehead, N. Y. Messrs. W. E Tuttle and Arthur Tuttle will carry on the business here under the firm name of Tuttle Brothers as before.

The Garwood Christian Endeavor Society will hereafter hold their weekly meetings Thursday evenings instead of Sunday evenings as before.

At the Baptist church Sunday $159 was collected for the purpose of purchasing new seats for the church.

—Press want ads bring results.

—The dress goods department at White's will place on sale today a lot of brocaded velvets in all shades at one third their real value.

—Place your Thanksgiving order for oysters and half-shells early with Rogers, we are the only handlers of Blue Point stock in the city.

—There will be a meeting of the Queen Esther Band of Grace M. E. church this afternoon to arrange for a fair to be held at an early date.

—A load of hay was upset yesterday afternoon on East Front street on account of the collapse of a wheel. It was nearly night before the hay was removed.

—The class of 1895 of the Borough Public High School intend holding a reunion Saturday evening, November 26th, in the school building on Somerset street.

—Did you ever think that those headaches which have caused you such intense suffering may be produced by eye-strain? Leech, Stiles & Co., eye specialists, will examine your eyes at 107 East Front street Thursday from 10 to 4.

—It has been remarked that it would be a good idea it the Borough Council would macadamize Watchung avenue from Grandview avenue to Mountain avenue, and thus give the people living on the upper end something for their money.

—The fourth grand masquerade ball of the Twilight Social Club, of Plainfield, will be held in the Crescent Rink on Thanksgiving Eve. The members have made great preparations and an evening of great pleasure is assured all who attend.

PARTICULAR MENTION

PERSONAL GOSSIP OF INTEREST TO CITY AND BOROUGH.

In Brief are Told the Daily Doings of Many Residents and Visitors Who Go and Come in a Social and Business Way

Charles Dunlap, of Fifth street, is improving from his recent illness.

William D. Thickstun, of Central avenue, has gone to Long Branch.

Marshal Wise, of the borough, is doing duty while Chief Wilson is off duty.

Mrs. Brady, of East Third street, is very much improved from an attack of rheumatism.

Miss VanCampen, of Plainfield avenue, has returned from a visit with Rahway friends.

Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, seems to be holding his own very well. His condition is no worse.

Mrs. Randolph Dunham, of Madison avenue, has returned from a visit to her daughter at Carteret.

Mr. and Mrs. Powlison, of the borough, have returned from a visit with out-of-town friends and relatives.

Mrs. William Wilson, of Grove street, who is detained at home by illness, is reported as not being so well.

Mortimer Slater, of the borough, is in the local telephone office learning to be an operator. He will work nights.

Robert Radford, of West Front street, seems to gradullly fail in health. The physicians have given him up.

John Thatcher, of the West, who has been visiting his uncle, Bateman Thatcher, of this city, has gone to Philadelphia to visit.

Clifford Braider, of Manning avenue, attended a banquet given by the alumni of the New Jersey Business College at Newark last night.

THE INDUSTRIAL HOME.

A Report Concerning It Made by Charity Aid Workers.

A meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities' Aid Association of New Jersey was held November 8th in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church. Reports were made of the condition of the alms houses of Rahway and Elizabeth, the county jail and the Plainfield industrial farm.

In the report of the Union County Jail, attention was called to the great need of discarding the old wooden cells in the boys' corridor and substituting something more conductive to cleanliness and comformable to sanitary regulations. This matter was referred to the State Association.

The Plainfield industrial farm has much to commend it, though the proper equipment of the building for its special use is not yet complete. Its two houses for men and women are substantial and commodious and arranged in conformity to the requirements of the law. In consideration of the large amount of land surrounding the building, it would seem most desirable that the inmates should raise vegetables for their own consumption. It is earnestly hoped that the aim will be to make the industrial farm a model home for the city poor. Mr. and Mrs. TenEyck, the superintendent and matron, give the inmates kind and faithful care.

HIS ARM DISLOCATED.

Carbone Didn't Know It Until Two Weeks After Accident.

Jose Carbone, of North avenue, fell two weeks ago and hurt his left arm and hand. Carbone says the physicians whom he consulted told him that the hand was sprained, but although he continued to bathe it, the arm and hand still pained him. Yesterday Carbone went to New York and consulted another surgeon, who told him that the bone in his upper arm was out of place. The surgeon adjusted it, and today Carbone feels better.

MONTE CARLO SUICIDES.

Number Not Exaggerated. Witness Tells How One Was Dealt With.

"I had always believed," said a man who had just returned from his first trip abroad, "that the number of suicides credited to Monte Carlo every year was exaggerated for sensation's sake, but I have been there recently, and I am inclined to believe the worst. I am convinced from what I saw that because of the precautions of the authorities there, and the universal system of bribery which prevails only a small percentage of the suicides due to the gaming table is made known. Just let me tell you of one that I saw myself.

"I was in Monte Carlo one day when, in broad daylight, a well dressed man walked out of the Casino, sat down on the steps, and, with a revolver, blew his brains out. Such incidents are apparently too common to attract extraordinary attention, and the authorities of the place are always prepared for them. Almost before the smoke of the revolver had cleared away a lot of attendants rushed out, and after covering the body with sacking, which was kept on hand for the purpose, removed it. All trace of the tragedy was washed away, and in less than five minutes there was nothing but the steps to excite suspicion. I have no doubt that the authorities buried the body at their own expense, and that nothing further will be heard of the case.

"I met a few Americans there, but they were either sightseers or a very cheap class of gamblers and bunco men. You don't find your thoroughbred American gambler wasting his time at Monte Carlo. It is the hunting ground of the low-down bunco man, and he can make more by telling Americans hard-luck stories than by playing the tables. It was that suicide, however, which impressed me more than anything else. I couldn't help speculating as to who the poor chap was and how his friends or family would account for his disappearance. That led me to wonder how so many such unfortunates were swallowed every year by Monte Carlo, leaving behind no record of their end. I don't believe that anyone but the authorities of the place know the number of suicides there, and it would not be discreet for them to tell."—New York Sun.

SNAKES AS DECORATIONS.

Samoan Maidens Wreathe Themselves With Reptiles of Flaming Red.

For the most part the Pacific islands are destitute of snakes. That is absolutely the fact in Hawaii. New Zealand is equally free of these reptiles. All the eastern islands of Polynesia between these two outposts are snakeless. Westward from Hawaii, down among the Gilberts and the Marshalls and the Carolines, the square-bodied water snake begins to make its appearance in the lagoons and harbors. By the time the Philippines are reached the water snake becomes both common and deadly, and the jungles of those islands are abundantly supplied with snakes. From the Philippines as one follows down the chain of islands snakes are found both abundant and venomous. In the wild lands of the western Pacific the reptiles are frequently objects of worship, and in some legends are credited with the creation of the world.

Samoa seems to lie just on the boundary line of snakes in the Pacific. In the eastern islands of the archipelago no snakes are to be found; in Upolu a few are seen at rare intervals. In Savaii, only a few miles to the westward, they are common and attain great size, in the case of some kinds at least. None of them is venomous and the islanders neither fear them nor exhibit that repugnance to their presence which is commonly called instinctive.

This indifference to the reptiles is made most markedly manifest at the hamlet of Iva on the northeast coast of Savaii. Here are to be found small snakes of a most brilliant red color. They are so common that a basketful may be easily picked up in any banana patch. The dancing girls of this town are in the habit of employing these gaudy snakes for personal adornment in their dances. They tie them about their necks, their ankles and their wrists, festoon them in their headdresses, and tuck a few extra ones in the belt in readiness to replace such as escape in the dance. At their best these sivas danced by the Samoans are either dull, or revolting shows of savagery. It can easily be imagined that they are made no more attractive when the taupou or village maid and her crew of attendant girls go careering about with an assortment of writhing red snakes. Still, the Samoans, who have no stock of snake prejudices, look upon this as one of the most successful and artistic dances in their islands.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

FORTY YEARS SHE WAITED.

When She Recovers Her Husband's Body From the Alps.

A married couple were crossing one of the great glaciers of the Alpine regions, when a fatal accident occurred. The husband fell down one of the huge crevasses which abound on all glaciers—the rope broke, and the depth of the chasm was so great that no help could be rendered, nor could the body be recovered. Over the wife's anguish at her loss we must draw the veil of silence. Forty years afterward saw her, with the guide who had accompanied them at the time of the accident, staying at the nearest hotel at the foot of the glacier, waiting for the sea to give up its dead; for, by the well-known law of glacier-progression, the form of her long-lost husband might be expected to appear, expelled from the mouth of the torrent, about that date. Patiently, and with unfailing constancy, they watched and waited, and their hopes were at last rewarded.

One day the body was released from its prison in the ice, and the wife looked again on the features of him who had been so long parted from her! But the pathos of the story lay in the fact that she was then an old woman, while the newly-rescued body was that of quite a young and robust man, so faithfully had the crystal casket preserved the jewel which it held so long. The forty years had left no wrinkles on that marble brow. Time's wandering fingers could not touch him in that tomb, and so, for a few brief moments, the aged lady saw the husband of her youth, as he was in the days which were gone forever!—In C. H. Spurgeon's Autobiography.

Regarding the Burmese.

The Burmese will sacrifice any prospect of money making to go to a feast. These are called pives, and often the entertainment is elaborate. The writer remembers going to one in Upper Burmah. There was a good deal of dancing, but neither the host nor his guests danced, that would have been undignified. The dancers were paid, and they twirled lazily or jumped excitedly as occasion required. Most of the time, however, was spent in chatter and smoking. Smoking is the only thing at which the Burmese are industrious. They start smoking at the early age of three, and they smoke themselves into the next world. Girls smoke quite as arduously as the men, and as the cigars are very big, many a pretty mouth is strained to accommodate a giant cheroot.—Pall Mall Magazine.

The Reward of Generosity.

"General Archie Williams," says the Kansas City Journal, "was on a train going up Pike's Peak one day last summer. At the half way house he got off and purchased a big basket of violets at an expense of $10. Returning to the train he presented each woman with a beautiful bouquet, though all of the women were strangers. By and by the husband of one of the women came back from the smoking car and she said to him: 'I think this is the nicest railroad I ever rode on. That brakeman over there gave every one of us a lovely bouquet.'"

FAMOUS MILITARY POSTS.

Thousands Can be Massed Ready For Duty at a Moment's Notice.

Jefferson Barracks, near St. Louis, is again active after the long absence of the troops, and the new structures have their proper setting in the midst of the blue of Uncle Sam's uniforms. Jefferson Barracks has been occupied as a military post ever since the acquisition in 1803 of what was then called Louisiana. It is located on a splendid reservation, 1,400 acres in extent, and was used principally as a cavalry recruiting depot until 1894, when it was turned into a regularly garrisoned post. Since that date practically all the buildings have been remodeled and rebuilt.

Fort Meade is another typical army post where many of the regulars will rest. It is located in the Black Hills, a few miles north of Deadwood, N. D. The scenery surrounding it is beautiful, the hills towering above it like an army of giants preparing to make a descent upon a pigmy establishment.

At Fort Sherman, on Lake Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, litttle will be done, but many a trooper will find it a glorious spot for recuperation whenever the southern garrison duty is over with. It is in a delightful location, its foot being washed by the waters of the placid lake which lies like a great emerald in a setting of tall mountains. It was at Fort Sherman that ex-Secretary Lamar witnessed the famous barrel incident which he told of in his report at the time. On his inspection tour he reached Fort Sherman on the Fourth of July. In telling the story he says: "Americans are nothing if not patriotic, and so it is with the townspeople near Fort Sherman. They had their usual fireworks on the glorious Fourth, and in addition had gotten up a unique feature, which, however, resulted disastrously. It is doubtless true that the townspeople were influenced in their desire to impart novelty to their programme by the presence of the secretary of war, whom they desired to interest. The feature consisted in the descent of a mountain, over the timber slide, into the lake, by a man inside of a barrel. All the preparations were made, and the barrel with its human freight was let go. It rushed down the slide with dizzy velocity, but before it reached the bottom, to the horror of the spectators, it struck an obstruction, and dashed over a precipice for several thousand feet. The man was dead when picked up and the barrel was broken into pieces."

Fort Snelling is again filled with its quota of troops. It stands on a huge limestone bluff, over a hundred feet above the rivers, commanding a wide sweep of country. It was a formidable fortress in the earlier days of the century, and it would even now, did danger threaten, be a strong point of vantage. For over three-quarters of a century the grim old buildings, low roofed and strong of wall, have stood at the edge of the bluff, while, as the years have passed, new and more modern and more comfortable buildings have found their way along the bluff to the south—little similar, architecturally speaking, to the low squat quarters of stone where so many thousands of men were housed in the days when the fort was one of the outposts of civilization. It speaks much for the sentiment of the soldier that these picturesque old buildings have been allowed to stand.

In September, 1820, the fort was begun, and finished two years later. It was strongly built of stone, and was intended primarily as a defence from Indian attacks, a refuge for settlers, and a rendezvous for troops, who might have military duty of many kinds in the vast territory of which this was the only governmental fortification.

The fort was laid out on the bluff overlooking the two rivers, in an irregular diamond-shaped form, with stone bastions or towers at each of the four angles of the high stone wall which shut in the fort proper. The quarters of the men are standing yet, with the round tower, which was located at the extreme western angle of the fortifications. The hexagonal bastion which was erected on the Minnesota side still remains, a solid piece of masonry, looking out from its deep port holes down over the Minnesota valley.

The fort as it now stands is one of the most important in the United States. Certainly there is none more important in the Central West. It has command of a territory a thousand miles in diameter, of which it is the focal point, with such railroad facilities that a full regiment might be thrown into the field or into any one of the large cities in its radius within twelve hours from the time of receiving command to move. Thousands of men have been massed at this point when there were threatened Indian outbreaks, for distribution to northwestern points, and in case of serious difficulty with mobs in cities like Chicago or Milwaukee or Omaha, a thousand men could be on board the cars and on their way to the threatened point at any time of the day or night within three-quarters of an hour.

Rejected Benefits.

"White folks," remarked Mr. Erastus Pinkley, "is queer people. 'Long ask your Druggist for a generous ... CATARRH white folks 'bout slightin' chances."

"Whut's been happenin'?" inquired Miss Miami Brown.

"De people what I was wuckin' today done sent word ter one of de neighbors warnin' her ter kep her chickens fum comin' over in his yahd!"

Senior Partner: "I'm sure of it. I've noticed that when he hasn't anything to do he never pretends to be busy."

ROSE LORE.

The Story of the Sweetest Flower That Blooms.

In commerce the rose has not been without value. The most delightful commercial product of the rose is that known as the "Attar of Persia and India." Although the production of attar was discovered in Persia, the industry has nearly died out there to spring up in extensive rose farms in Turkey; and about Kazanlik, on the southern slope of the Balkans, close to the Shipka, or wild rose pass, famous in the history of the Russia-Turkish war.

The rose growing belt is situated at an average altitude of 1,000 feet above the sea and comprises seventy miles in length and ten miles in width. Since the emancipation of the Balkan provinces the manufacture of this exquisite perfume has become a great industry in Bulgaria and has been taken up in a large scale even in Germany. The ancestor of all, the rose of Damascus, furnishes the greater number of blossoms. The white musk rose is used, and a pink damask, but the dark red variety outnumbers them all. A fine attar is produced from roses grown in Cashmere. The attar is expensive, because it requires an enormous quantity of blossoms to distill even a few drops.

It is claimed that it was discovered by the favorite wife of Jehan Ghir, through whose garden ran a canal of rose-water. On the surface the Begum discovered a few drops of the precious attar or oil floating.

Even rose-water has its value and may be also included among the luxuries.

The hundred-leaved rose, a variety well known to the ancients and originally found in the Caucasus, is also used to make rose-water and a medicinal syrup. A mild astringent syrup is made from the petals of the French rose. The petals of the tea rose, a species of roisette, with a very fine fragrance, are used in China for flavoring teas.

A vinegar made from roses is used for headaches; a conserve of roses and sugar is given medicinally to children. The fruit or hip is also used that way, while on the Continent dried hips are used in the culinary concoctions such as soups.

The first cultivted rose is said to have been planted in Britain in A. D. 1522. The wild rose is a native of Britain, and grows abundantly. In the time of Edward III., 1334, a gold coin was made, called a rose-noble, because on one side of it the form of a rose was impressed.

In classical time there was a recondite significance connected with the rose. The statue of Diana of Ephesus was covered with roses and bees. It is connected by Dante with the ineffable "Light of the Shekinah," while he terminates the Paradise with the rose-cross.

The Rosicrucians, brothers of the rosy-cross, a secret order, used for their emblem the crucified rose. In ancient times, when secret meetings were held, men used to wear a chaplet of roses on their heads. Later on the forms of roses were painted and carved on the ceilings of rooms or halls where feasts were given, when everything connected with them was kept secret. From that custom came the expression "sub-rosa" or "under the rose," which means that nothing is to be revealed.

There is a fabled story that Cupid gave a rose to the god of silence as a bribe to prevent him from betraying the affairs of Venus, and that in this way the rose became the symbol of silence.

Among the ancients the rose became the symbol of modesty, of joy, of gladness and of grief. It crowned the reveler, it graced the garland of the lover and shed its beauty and its fragrance upon the dead after life's fitful fever closed.

In mythology we find that the rose was Venus' own flower. It is also associated with Bacchus, for we read of chaplets of roses crowning the heads of those who indulged in Bacchanalian orgies. Classic myths and mediaeval lore afford a wealth of beautiful legends connected with the rose, which assure us that it has been a favorite ever since it became known.

In Shakespeare we find seventy or more mentions of the rose in the plays, and in the fifty-fourth sonnet the rose is described as truth. In his time it was considered the queen of flowers. In Romeo and Juliet we read, "remnants of pack-thread and old cakes of roses were thinly scattered to make up a show." In Twelfth Night, "by the roses of the spring, by honor, truth and everything, I love thee so." There are few poets who have not given graceful and honorable mention of the rose.

The Latin poet, Horace, even though he often alludes to the myrtle bush, the vine-wreathed elm, the olive thickets, the thick-woven shade of the laurels, the violet bed, the tall, spreading pine, the white-leaved poplar, the coronal of rosemary, the rugged oak, does not omit the rose; "while the odors of Syrian nard and the rose breathe sweet from locks tipped, and just tipped with Time's snows."—Ode 11. "Then strew freely the roses." "With locks all dropping balm on roses laid," and many other poetical illusions. Although the rose is the emblem of silence its sphere touches all nations, its mission touches all hearts, all joys, all sorrows. Much there is of history and sentiment in the heart of the rose.

It is the flower of compliment and ever breathes its own sweet language in beauty and perfume.

"What is firmness, father?"

"Firmness, my boy, is obstinacy in ourselves."

"And what is obstinacy?"

"Obstinacy is firmnes in somebody else."—Chicago Evening News.

Provinz Pommern.

Greifenhagen. Der seit länger als einem Jahr angeblich wegen seines Verhaltens in dem Prozeß gegen den wegen Unterschlagung verurtheilten vormaligen Pastor Rau in Cladow auf Denunziation von seinem Amte suspendirte hiesige Superintendent Gerke ist endlich wieder in sein Amt als Geistlicher und Seelsorger eingesetzt worden. Die Untersuchung gegen ihn hat ein völlig negatives Resultat gehabt zum nicht geringen Schmerze seiner Widersacher. Seine vorgesetzte Behörde in Stettin hat sich veranlaßt sehen müssen, die ihm während der Suspension vorenthaltene Gehaltshälfte nachträglich auszahlen zu lassen.

Provinz Posen.

Posen. Die Strafkammer in Inowrazlaw hatte dahin erkannt, daß das öffentliche Ausstellen von Uhren und Schmucksachen mit dem polnischen Adler und der Inschrift: „Gott erlöse Posen," sowie das Inseriren derartiger Gegenstände in Zeitungen als grober Unfug nicht anzusehen sei. Auf die Revision der Staatsanwaltschaft hob das hiesige Oberlandesgericht das Urtheil auf und verwies die Sache zur nochmaligen Verhandlung an das Landgericht Bromberg.

Ladies desiring KNIFE-PLEATING or PINKING done, will please leave orders with Mrs Force, 201 Watchung avenue, and it will receive prompt attention. 10 2t

A Good Chance in Carpets

—a big invoice of Carpets, originally ordered by a too hopeful Western storekeeper was thrown back on the New York dealer. It was offered us. We took over half the lot at our own spot figure. Every roll is now on sale on our bright, 200-foot carpet floor—at prices but little over cost to us. More original, novel colorings and patterns than is usual nine cases out of ten. A selling you must not miss—you can't afford to!

35c. Ingrains for 29c. yd. Body Brussels at 90c., the $1.25 kind. 85c. Brussels for 60c. 75c. fine All-wool Ingrains at 59c. yd. Velvets at 85c., were $1.10 yd.

You've never looked on a prettier line of Lace Curtains, Portieers and other hangings than ours—and the prices are so low, too!

We're not "asleep" in our 4-acre stock of Furniture and Stoves—life and push there, too!

Newark's Best and Biggest Stove Store

—right here, at No. "73." Hundreds of styles, parlor stoves, heaters, ranges, oil heaters. Manufacturers' and our guarantee on every sale.
"The Portland Range" is our star—10,000 now sold, yet not one come back on us! Bakes perfectly, burns least coal, has ventilated oven door and dozens of other improvements. Other good ranges here, of course. Cylinder Stoves, $1.90, Self-feeding Parlor Stoves, $7.49, Oil Heaters, $4.85.

"Shake-up" in Bedroom Suits

—needless to take a page on our Bed Suit line—it's known and granted the best chosen one for miles around! Here's to five remarkable leaders:
One line, $14.95—$25 sort.
A $30 Oak Suit, 24x30 beveled plate mirror, at $17.50.
Cheval mirror, Quartered Oak Suit, beautiful, was $45, for $29. A heavily carved Suit, quartered oak, serpentine top, 28x34 mirror, oval in shape, elegant, was $60 now $42. A massive Suit in finely marked oak, very large, swell front dresser, French beveled plate mirror, 28x34, for $45 was $65.

The far-famed "Domestic" Sewing Machine may be yours on "credit" or for cash—lightest running, most durable, safest of machines. Your old machine, no matter what its age or make, allowed for in part payment.

BY THE CAMP FIRE.

After a good day's sport we drew around the camp-fire and told stories. When every one had contributed his personal quota, we looked slyly at the colonel.

"I suppose you fellows expect me to say something now?" was his interrogation.

We expressed ourselves as anxious to that effect, and he gave me a long, steady look, as if studying my features. Then, glancing out into the darkness, he began:

"It was while I still wore the shoulder-straps of a lieutenant that we had a hot fight with the Johnny Rebs in the eastern part of Kentucky.

"Our forces came out victorious, and among the prisoners was a dashing, handsome lieutenant that I congratulated myself upon taking. Looking me in the eye he threw back his coat and said: 'Lieutenant, you would never have taken me but for this.' And I saw a bullet hole just above his heart.

"I must say that I felt a sharp pain shoot through my heart. He was in the very flower of manhood. Stepping up to him, I put my arm around his body to support him, urging him to lie down. He shook his head and said, 'I shall die standing and facing my foes.' Then a spasm of pain contorted his face, and he whispered: 'Lieutenant, you look like an honest man, and when the last roll shall be called it will be as men that we shall answer—only men. Then, as a man, I shall ask a favor of you.' His utterance grew thick for a moment, but with an effort he continued: 'Your forces are pushing on to S——. I know it, and I want you when there to deliver this package of letters'—taking them from his pocket. 'They are from my wife—tell her—tell—her—I died thinking of her.' He kissed a picture that was in the package, then looking appealingly at me he gasped: 'Will you deliver them? God bless—bless'—and with blurred eyes and shaking arm I laid him gently down, for he never finished his sentence.

"I glanced at the letters and saw that they were addressed to Lieutenant Russell, and the picture—if I should attempt to tell you of the beauty of that face, you would think me in my dotage. I put it and the letters into my pocket, and from that moment a burning desire arose in my heart to deliver the letters and message to his wife.

"I had not long to wait for an opportunity. In two weeks we were in possession of the town of S——, and in my first leisure I set out to find the widow. I learned that she was not yet aware of her husband's fate.

"Gently as I could I gave her to understand that her husband had been wounded, but her intuition told her the truth. With a heart-rending cry she fell fainting. The other inmates of the house rushed to the room. I remained long enough to give my name and asked to be called upon if I at any time could be of assistance. Then, leaving the letters, I went back to camp.

"Some weeks later she sent for me. When I called, I found her in the same room where I had seen her before, but she was in an invalid's chair, and beside her sat a black mammy with an infant in her lap. If her face had been beautiful before, it had something of heaven in it then. She motioned me to a seat, then begged me to tell her everything about the death of her husband.

"There was little to tell, yet I went over the death scene, while the tears streamed from her lovely eyes. When I finished, she lay back as if she could bear no more, yet, reaching out her hand to me, she said:

"'I thank you, Lieutenant N——. You have been very kind. I should want to die, too, but that now I have our child to live for.' And she looked at the child with a world of love in her eyes.

"When the war ended I sought the town of S——. In her house I found strangers, and inquiries brought out the facts that she had gone to her home in Louisiana, and word had come of her death from fever, contracted by nursing sick soldiers.

"And now, young gentlemen, you know my romance and why I have never married," said the colonel, getting up hastily before anyone could speak. He walked out into the darkness.

"A sentimental old chap," remarked Tom.

"Shut up, you fool," I said savagely. Something was choking me. I, too, got up and went into the mysterious shadows.

When the other fellows had crept into their beds in the tent, I still waited for him. At last he approached.

"Colonel," I called softly, and he started. "Colonel, have you her picture? May I see it?"

We walked toward each other and met over the dying camp-fire. He drew out a picture and struck a match that I might see. I gave one glance, and the word "Mother!" burst from my lips. I had seen just such a faded picture of her many a time. He caught me in his strong grasp.

"Boy, boy, is this so? Prove it is so, and my fortune is yours for her sake. You have her hair and eyes—that's why I have loved you all along. You remind me of her, but can you prove it?"

"I'll let mother herself prove it," I answered. "She did not die as was reported, but is still alive and well, and—and—handsomer."

That's all, except that now I have a right to call the colonel father and have plenty of cash all the time, but it would never have happened but for the stories over the camp-fire.—Cincinnati Post.

THE MAKING OF A MAN

It had been a great game. Because of its sensational finish, it would occupy a place of its own in college history. The older men were all talking of Sargent, the lips of beauty were busy with Mr. Sargent, while the throng of students gathered around the dressing-room to await the appearance of their idol, could find no other theme than Baby Sargent.

It was characteristic of Baby that after the game in which he won so great glory he should elude his admiring companions and make his way to his own room. There he found a stranger awaiting his coming. The visitor was a man just past the prime of life. His dress was that of a gentleman, and when he spoke, it was as an educated man. Yet in the hard, cold glint of his eyes and in the lines of the mouth, there was something that belied the bearing and the speech. Looking from one to the other, an observer would have said that the older man was the younger with the ideals of youth gone from him, and with the knowledge that they were gone forever.

"May I ask what you want?" said Baby, rather stiffly.

"Why, of course," said the stranger. "I forgot. You can't be expected to know me. Sit down and I will tell you."

The manner was one of singular courtesy, but there was a ring in the voice that evidently grated on the sensibilities of Baby. He obeyed, and the stranger looked him up and down very carefully. Finally he spoke.

"I knew you as soon as I saw you," he said. "It was at the game to-day. If I were capable of the feeling, I should be proud. Did you ever hear of your father? Yes, he's dead. I thought so." This last as if to himself. "When a gentleman signs another man's name to a cheque he is dead, and I suppose he had better stay dead."

Baby sat with white, drawn face and the man continued as if in soliloquy:

"Yes, I have been dead and in hell for twenty-two years. And what is more, the ghost of my dead self has always stood before my face. Outside, I am as when I married your mother, a gentleman. Inside, I look upon myself as a corpse, and know that I shall never again be honorable; what is worse, I have no desire to recover my lost manhood. This, too, I comprehend. I have lost my self-respect, and I know it. Therefore, I say I am in hell."

The voice was heavy with the weight of unalterable judgment. In Baby's eyes the horror of the thing was written plain. Now, like a hunted animal, he turned instinctively towards the mantel, on which stood an old portrait of a man in the uniform of a cavalry officer. He looked back to the face before him, and the certainty of it was overwhelming.

There was silence between them for some time, and then the man spoke again.

"My welcome is not cordial, but my dead self does not feel. The rest of me, however, must live, and there is no life except at the gaming table. For that I gave my soul, for that I lost your mother, for that I am here. She has come into some property, I am told. Well, I shall return to my family. My dead self will be easier in its coffin if I am able to move in the circles where I belong. As long as I am supplied with money I shall not injure your prospects. I shall not disgrace your mother's name. But money I must and will have. Come, let us go home now at once."

The voice had grown fierce, and the eyes shot a red glare as the demon of his passion for gambling laid hold of the man.

At the mention of his mother's name, Baby was transformed. He rose and stood before his father. His lips were shut like a vice, and his eyes gleamed as steel gleams in the moonlight. He took some bills from his pocket, and threw them on the table with a powerful gesture. Then the words came slowly and sternly from between the clinched teeth.

"What you want," said he, "is money. Take it. When you want more, come here and get it. But if ever you show yourself to my mother, I will most certainly kill you. Now go!"

Without a trace of feeling, the man took up the bills and left the room.

* * * * * * * *

That night the students celebrated their victory. They cheered for Sargent, they sought him high and low. They rushed to his room, but it was dark, and repeated poundings on the door brought no answer. Yet inside Roy Sargent (Baby no longer) was sitting with the ruins of his shattered family idols around him. From the wreckage he was gathering materials wherewith to build new gods. In the anguish of his soul he was working out the salvation of his manhood.

Witout, his name was borne high upon the midnight air. Within, a portrait in his hand, he sat in the darkness, staring at a face he could not see.

The following letter, written by Big Heart, a Sioux at the Rosebud Agency, to the United States Marshal, seems to be capable of two interpretations: "I want to make complaint against my brother for shooting at my mother. He missed her at least a foot."

"I have tried to make Monsieur le Americaine's apartments as homelike as possible," said the French landlord.

"Yes?" queried the American.

"Oui, monsieur. See, here ees ze cuspidor."—Philadelphia North American.

ALMOST A SCANDAL.

Mrs. Hillyer turned upon her companion with a flash of indignation in her gray eyes, and a brighter pink dyed her fair cheeks.

"What do you mean, Mr. Landor?" she demanded in low tones which trembled with feeling.

"What I said, of course," replied Landor, looking down upon her with a peculiar sparkle in his sombre eyes. "I don't wonder that it affects you so. When I saw it, it was all I could do to prevent myself from springing forward and throttling that faithless husband of yours."

"You say that with your own eyes you saw Robert Hillyer kiss a woman—that is the charge, is it?" in a calm, measured way.

"Yes. And you his wife! For this man you trampled my love in the dust. Oh, Mildred, how I would have cherished you!"

"You forget yourself, Mr. Landor."

"Yes, forgive me—I think only of you."

"Can you tell me just when and where you witnessed this remarkable scene?"

"At Arlington's ball. You know where the Cupid and Psyche stands? I was having a solitary cigar in the shadow of a laurel, when he—your husband—came along with a lady. I saw him plainly, though I could not tell who she was. They stopped among the palms just back of the statuary, and—what is the matter?"

Mildred's pink-lined sunshade concealed her face from his view, but the convulsive breathing, fluttering the lace at her throat, told him that she was greatly moved.

"Mildred! I should have spared you, but I could not! Curse the infamous wretch who has been the cause of your unhappiness—who, having won the loveliest woman on earth, wears her so lightly—who——"

Landor stopped short in amazement as the pink-lined sunshade was slanted back and revealed a rosy, dimpling face.

"Oh!" laughed Mrs. Hillyer. "I can't keep up my role of tragedy queen, though I must congratulate you on the success you are in playing the heavy villain. Mr. Lanrod," more seriously, "you are too good a friend of mine. You worry too much about trifles. I shall give Robert a lecture, and I am sure it will never happen any more."

"You are different from what I thought you if you can let such a thing pass so lightly."

"It was bad form, but the dear boy is so unconventional. He thought there would be no scandal if he stole a kiss from his wife in the dark."

"It was you?" he asked, forcing a smile to his pale lips. "How infernally stupid I was not to have known it! Can you ever forgive me?"

"Yes, and forget you, too. Your very protective, watchful friendship is wholly unnecessary, Mr. Landor. Robert dearly loves to take care of me, and you are superfluous. Be good enough to transfer your kindly offices to some woman who will appreciate them more."

New Engagement Ring.

Even the engagement ring of the New York girl tells the story of the times she is living in. It might not be thought that lovers, generally all sufficient unto themselves, would be influenced by consideration of patriotism and memories of the war that has just come to an end, but there are evidences that they are. The new engagement ring is patriotic in the extreme, and several engaged girls are proudly wearing it.

It displays the three national colors and is really three rings. These are quite separate and distinct. Each is a very narrow band of gold, on which is set seven very small stones. There must be no display. Each must be extremely simple, and the combined effect of the three very quiet and elegant.

The first band or ring has rubies for its seven stones. These are ranged in a row. The second ring, of seven other stones similarly placed, is of diamonds, the whitest that can be found. The third ring shows blue in its seven sapphires.

All this is rather expensive, despite the fact that the stones necessarily are small ones. So it can safely be said that not many engaged girls will be able to "sport" a ring or rings of this variety. It is a betrothal present, however, that any girl who once sets eyes on one of them will envy."—New York Herald.

"Knots" and Miles.

The use of the word "knot" in connection with the speed and distance sailed or steamed by a ship in a given time is open to misconstruction. The difference between the geographical mile, as the term is used by landsmen, and a nautical mile is that the latter measures 6,080 feet, or 800 feet more than the land mile. Thus, when we read of a war ship making 20 knots, it means that she is covering 23 ordinary miles in an hour.—New York Herald.

Soldier's Magnanimous Act.

The war with Mexico is a part of our martial history. Taylor and Scott and Davis and Lee came out of it immortal. The epic of that great struggle was the storming of Chapultepec. That frowning fortress was the Gibraltar of Mexico. Its massive walls seemed impregnable. But American daring knew no obstacles, and an intrepid band of volunteers was chosen to scale and assault it.

PETTY ECONOMIES IN GERMAMY.

Racks for Cigar Stumps Where Smoking is Not Allowed.

An American in Munich writes to a New York paper concerning "German thrift," with examples of petty economies he has seen in Germany, and that strike Americans as extraordinary. He tells of a stout German gentleman who came into the lobby of one of the picture-galleries of Munich one day last summer puffing a cigar. After depositing his hat and umbrella, he looked around uneasily. Big signs on the entrance doors to the gallery warned him that no smoking was allowed. Finally his face lighted up as he strode over to one corner and deposited his half-finished cigar in a sort of metal rack fastened to the wall. "So!" he exclaimed with a sigh of relief, and marched in to see the pictures. Almost at the same moment another German, having "done" the pictures, approached the rack in question, and, having scrutinized its contents, selected a stump of a cigar as his particular property, and proceeded to light it before getting on his hat and coat. This provision for saving the stumps of cigars was a novelty to the American, and he examined it with some curiosity. A sign, "Cigarre Ablade," placed above it in large letters, announced its purpose—a "leaving-place" or "depositing-place" for cigars. The rack was of metal, and fashioned something like a miniature wirerack; there was a special groove for each cigar, but no particular mark or number by which one could identify one stump from another, and no particular reason why the first-comer should not help himself to the best and biggest cigar of the lot. These cigar repositories are common all over Germany in galleries, museums, and other places where smoking is not allowed.

NECKLACE OF BLACK DIAMONDS.

The only black diamond necklace known to exist in this country or Europe is that owned by Mrs. Celia Wallace, of the Auditorium. Mrs. Wallace has been fifteen years collecting them and has searched for the perfect stones in every jewel market of the world. They are found more often in the diamond mines of South Africa and in rare instances in South America.

The black diamond, as its name signifies, is as jetty as a piece of coal, perfectly transparent, and with all the lustre and glisten and brilliant rays of its white sister. It is used as the mourning stone of the Russian court. The necklace is composed of fourteen pendants, hung on a fine platinum chain. Each one has a black diamond centre, set closely around with a row of steel white diamonds from the Jaeger mine, South Africa.

The black stones in this larger pendant and in the two on each side of it are eight karats each. The rest are a trifle smaller. Between each pendant, hanging like a pierced dewdrop, is a single white diamond, while directly above the larger pendant is a nine-karat white Indian diamond of unusual beauty. For this single stone unset Mrs. Wallace paid the neat sum of $6,000.

It is almost impossible to estimate the value of the necklace, as no two stones were bought at the same time and none of them was set, but it is rudely estimated at $65,000.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

He Would Not Be Insulted.

Jim O'Brien, a patrolman in one of the downtown police districts, stepped into Stanley's shoe store on Christian street to buy a pair of shoes. He was a regular customer and wore a very heavy style of shoe. Stanley was busy at the time, but there was a new clerk who came forward to wait upon O'Brien. The latter picked out a pair that suited him and prepared to try them on. It was a rainy day, and the customer's socks were a trifle damp. The clerk accordingly proceeded to sprinkle the insides of the new shoes rather generously with powdered soapstone that they might slip on more easily. O'Brien suddenly changed his mind about the shoes. He didn't want them, he said, and proceeded to draw on his old pair. As he was walking out the proprietor said: "Well, Jim, did you get suited?" Jim turned upon him a face red with anger. "No, Oi did not git suited, Mr. Stanley." "What's the trouble, Jim?" "Well, sor, Oi loike ye purty well, an' Oi loiked yer shoes afore this, an' mebbe Oi'd kape on loikin' ye an' yer shoes, but Oi didn't come in here fur teh be insulted. Oi kin sthand a joke as well as the next wan, but whin a little whippersnapper loike that puts chloride of lime on my feet, Oi don't mane to sthand fur it."—Philadelphia Record.

Post-Mortem Weddings in China.

A Shansi missionary who went to conduct a funeral the other day narrowly escaped being present at a marriage. The dead man was a bachelor of 50, and fearing that his spirit would wander companionless in the world of shades, relatives had scoured the country side for a dead maiden to marry to him and bury with him. A desirable bride had been found some seven miles away and was encoffined and prepared for the double ceremony of marriage and burial. As soon as the Christian service was concluded, and the missionary and his friend had left, the other ceremonies began. Marriages of the dead by interested friends are common in Shansi.—North China Herald.

NEWCORN FOR JUDGE.

A CANDIDATE FOR NOMINATION ON REPUBLICAN TICKET.

He Has Now Announced His Candidacy —Wm. N. Runyon His Principal Rival Fourth Ward Wants Representation

Justice William Newcorn, the well-known Fourth ward politician, has announced himself a candidate for the nomination for the office of city judge this term, on the Republican ticket The announcement is no surprise to his friends, many of whom have been urging him to take the field for that office for several months, and especially since the last election.

Two years ago there was talk of Justice Newcorn for the office of city judge, but the election was so far off then that there was no effort made to rally friends to his support. A week ago the Justice determined to come out for the nomination.

The Fourth ward Republicans can be counted upon to support Justice Newcorn loyally. They feel as though they should have a representative among the local officers, and the City Judge is the only one that seems to fall to their lot. Judge DeMeza is a Fourth ward man.

Mr. Newcorn has the qualifications for the office. His five years' service as a justice of the peace has acquainted him with the duties of a magistrate, and then his loyal work for the Republican party, his friends say, justly entitles him to the reward.

The most formidable opponent in the field against him is Councilman W. N. Runyon. The other aspirants have dropped out of the race. Although Councilman Runyon has not come out and openly announced himself as a candidate, it is generally understood that he is after the office, so the race seems to have simmered down to these two at present.

ABRAMS SAW SHOES GO.

Charges Three Small Boys With the Theft—All Are Arrested.

A warrant was issued today by Justice Nash for the arrest of three lads, Edward and Willie Howe and Augustus Nier on a charge of stealing a pair of shoes from Morris Abrams, the West Front street shoe merchant, Monday night. Edward Howe was arrested at his home early this morning and locked up in the borough jail, and the other two were caught later. A hearing will be given them tomorrow.

Monday night Abrams saw three three boys pass the store and, as one of them went by, Abrams says he saw him grab a pair of shoes and run. Abrams followed the lads down West Front street to Somerset, and up Somerset to Pearl street, where he caught them. The boys said their names were Cooley, Haynes and Howell, and that they lived in the borough. Marshal Schenck appeared on the scene, but, as the alleged offense was committed on this side of the brook, he refused to lock them up, except on a warrant, so the lads were allowed to go. Yesterday it was found that the boys had given Abrams and the officer wrong names, but their right ones were found out and their arrest followed.

This morning after much difficulty Augustus Nier, aged fifteen years, and Willie Howe, aged twelve years, were arrested by Marshals Wise and Schenck. They were found on the Park Golf Club grounds. The Nier boy had in his possession a revolver, and he told the officers that he was going to blow his brains out. They were taken in custody and placed in the borough lockup. Later in the morning Roundsman Flynn and Patrolman McCue were sent over the brook to bring the three boys to this city.

WOULDN'T OBEY OFFICER.

Presistantly Hung Around Entrance to Music Hall Last Night.

Thomas Casey and Henry Mollison were two of a group of boys who hung around Music Hall last night and refused to go away when ordered to do so by Officer Totten. Finally the policeman took them to the lockup where they stayed until this morning, when City Judge DeMeza fined them $5. Casey paid his fine, but Mollison will probably go to jail.

DONATIONS FOR HOSPITAL.

The Children in the Public Schools this Morning Made Offerings.

Today was the time selected by Superintendent Maxson, of the Plainfield Public Schools, for the school children of the city to make their donation for the Muhlenberg Hospital. It was made at the request of some of the members of the Women's Auxiliary Board of the Hospital. The children were notified several days ago, but this morning some of the older ones forgot about it and brought their donations in the afternoon.

At the High School potatoes were brought. They came in sufficient numbers to fill two barrels. The Whittier School was also asked to donate potatoes and filled a barrel more than full with them.

At the Irving School, the donation included two barrels of potatoes and apples, a barrel of vegetables of various kinds, and some fifty cans of fruit and canned vegetables. The showing there was an excellent one.

The Bryant School also made a large donation which included two barrels of potatoes, half a barrel of apples, together with a number of other articles. At the Lincoln School one barrel was filled with potatoes and a large basket with apples. There was also a goodly showing of other things.

At the Washington School two barrels of various kinds of vegetables were received, together with some canned fruits and jellies.

At the Franklin School two barrels of potatoes and one of apples were collected, with a quantity of other vegetables, cereals and canned goods and 90 cents in cash.

FAMOUS CHARACTERS PORTRAYED.

Tableaux and Social Held in Chapel of First Presbyterian Church.

Last evening at the First Presbyterian church a church social was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the church. The affair was held in the chapel and was very largely attended.

The feature of the evening was the tableaux given under the direction of Mrs. Waldorf. The subjects were taken from the works of Charles Dickens, and were faithfully portrayed by young people in appropriate costumes. The first tableau was entitled "Barkus is Willing" and the parts were taken by Miss Lillian Glen and Percy Dayton, "Romeo and Juliet," was given by Miss Mary Luckey and Guernsey Nevius. Several sketches from David Copperfield were represented by Miss Edith Pruden, Charles Hazeltine, Percy Dayton, Miss Searing, Mr. Remsen, while Miss Lillie Remsen took the part of "Maud Mueller," and Miss Clara VanFleet that of "Cleopatra." 'Over the Hills to the Poor House," was faithfully portrayed by Miss Jessie MacKillop. Miss Mabelle Force was the efficient accompanist. During the evening Mr. Burroughs rendered several violin solos.

Following the programme refreshments were served by the Auxiliary, and a genuine social time was enjoyed.

MAD DOG SCARE.

Frothing Cur Spreads Terror in East Third Street.

The residents on East Third street had a mad dog scare last week, which proved to be something more than a mere scare. Saturday a cur was seen running around the neighborhood, frothing at the mouth and giving every evidence of the rabies. Mothers kept their children indoors and watched the actions of the animal through doors and windows.

No one was bitten, but several dogs in the neighborhood were. A pretty little pug belonging to Special Officer Edward Martin was bitten, so was one of Mrs. Michael Weber's dogs. Martin promptly shot his dog, and yesterday Chief Grant gave James Frisbie orders to put both of Mrs. Weber's dogs to death. Mrs. Weber refused to permit one of her dogs to be killed, claiming that this one was not out where the mad dog was, but the other Frisbie put to death in his usual scientific manner.

Cash Makes Another Arrest.

John Smith was arrested last night on West Front street by Officer Cash for being drunk and disorderly. This morning he was given $15 or 60 days. Smith lives at Bound Brook and he wanted to go home after money with which to pay his fine, but this Chief Grant wouldn't permit.

DION'T WANT REPORTERS.

Citizen's Movement in First Ward Started Behind Closed Doors.

The dissatisfied citizens of the First ward held a meeting last night in Thomas J. Howell's house, on Raymond avenue, to take the first steps towards organizing a citizens' movement. The meeting was attended by about 20, but for some unknown reason reporters were vigorously barred, and it has been a difficult thing today to obtain any information in regard to the meeting.

Wm. T. Banks was elected chairman and Irving L. Brady secretary. A resolution was passed to appoint a committee of ten, five Republicans and five Democrats, to confer with the committee appointed in the Fourth ward Monday night. Several of those present made speeches, in which they complained of the acts done by the local officers now in power, and Counselor W. S. Angleman was present to tell what had been done in the Fourth ward the night before, and give them some hints on organizing. Chairman Banks will appoint his committee today.

FERRYBOATS IN COLLISION.

Two Jersey Central Boats Crashed Together Without Very Serious Results.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New York, Nov. 16—The New Jersey Central ferryboat Fanwood crashed into the ferryboat Central of the same line as she lay in her slip in Jersey City this morning. The forward cabin of the Central was wrecked and the Fanwood but slightly injured.

Fortunately there were not over twenty-five persons on either boat when the accident occurred, and consequently no serious panic ensued. The Central was towed to Elizabethport for repairs, and the Fanwood is making her regular trips.

AGAINST STUDYING IN PARIS.

American Girls cannot Find Better Instruction Than at Home.

An authority on the subject of music study in Paris for American girls declares that it is a great mistake for young women to go from this country to the French capital with the expectation that they will become successful public singers there. She says that managers, composers, and even the public all demand now that roles shall be filled by native artists, and she cautions any girl against treasuring the hope of becoming a special favorite of a composer and being chosen by him to interpret his compositions in the way that Sybil Sanderson was chosen by Massenet. Composers must please the public, and the public seem to dislike foreigners. A director of a chorus in one of the leading theatres said recently that the feeling of unfriendliness concerned foreigners generally, but many believe that it is especially directed against Americans.

Many girls have sacrificed home life for themselves and involved their friends in a great expense in order to take a foreign musical course, and then have never been able to get back any portion of the money expended.

Some years ago Americans were welcomed in Europe as debutantes on the stage, but those who have observed the foreign trend of affairs say that this is all changed. There are only two cities now where a debut is possible for an American. These are London and Paris. Success in either of these places, indeed, gives the singer a cachet that is valuable in every part of the world, but to get this is growing more difficult yearly.

It is said that pupils are solicited for the sake of augmenting the reputation of the teacher, and that false hopes are held out to students to persuade them to join classes. Fees are as high as they are at home, $5 or $6 being the charge for half-hour lessons, while the cost of living is equally dear. Girls who fancy they can get board and home comforts in a French family are usually bitterly disappointed. If it is found, it is the rarest exception, and one that cannot be taken as a guide for others. It generally happens that two or three girls—those who really try to economize—take a small flat and live a la Bohemia. This sounds charming, but is comfortless, and but for the determination and youthful spirits of the students would be unbearable. Not one who endures it would put up with such accommodations in America.

Thus those who have carefully observed the chances and opportunities for "getting placed" and being finished as a singer in Paris pronounce against the advisability of American girls leaving their homes to try for some chimerical glory in the Old World.—New York Tribune.

French and German Expansion.

So far, neither France nor Germany is the richer or the stronger by any of its colonial acquisitions. Every piece of land that either France or Germany has obtained in Africa, or Indo-China and the Eastern Archipelago, lies in the tropics, is unhealthy and unfit for Frenchmen or Germans to settle in, and affords no prospect of giving for many years to come a return proportionate to the sums of money which will be needed to develop it. With all the passionate avidity for acquisition which the German "colonial party" has lately shown, the only spot which they have secured which holds out a promise of proving valuable for trade is the port of Kiao-Chau in China. The reason, of course, is that before France and Germany entered the field all the temperate zone, and the best parts of the tropics, were already occupied by other nations, whom it was impossible to displace. Nothing worth having was left; and the keen rivalry now shown to get or maintain a foothold in China is due to the fact that China is practically the only region over whose markets there can be a struggle.

So far, therefore, as the examples of France and Germany go, they are examples calculated rather to dissuade than to encourage any other nation from entering on a like course.—James Boyce in Harper's Magazine.

A Satisfactory Examination.

There is occasion for much beating about the bush for answers to many questions put by wise theologues to timid people, but one set of men found their match in the old Scotch woman under examination for admission to church-fellowship.

"What are the decrees of God?" she was solemnly asked.

"Indeed, I trow, he kens that best himsel'."

"What kind of a man was Adam."

"Ou, just like ither fouk," was the quick reply.

The questioner insisted on a more definite answer. "Weel," said she, "he was just like Jeems Madden, ye ken."

"How so?"

"Weel, naebody got anything by him, and mony lost."—Youth's Com-

ADVANTAGES OF A SOLDIER'S LIFE

Not Particularly Gay, Perhaps, but Profitable in More Ways Than One.

"It would be a good thing," said an army officer, "if parents more generally knew that their sons might go further and fare much worse than in the United States Army. Could they know fully as we know the benefits of the service to young men, they would approve of their sons enlisting rather than object to it.

"The general opinion that people have of life in the army is erroneous in the extreme. The army is not a rough place, nor is the service, except on the far frontier and in the winter, a rough service. Young men, even those who have acquired vicious habits in civil life, come out of the army after five years of service better men, unless they are utterly incorrigible and bent on a life of evil. The service and the discipline develop all the good qualities of the man. He knows that disobedience of orders or violation of any of the unwritten laws which should govern society meets with prompt and merited punishment, and that makes him suppress and govern what may be vicious in him. This disipline gives him a manly courage, an assurance he might not otherwise possess, a better respect for law and order; and he learns to obey without questioning, which is, unfortunately, something young men do not learn in civil life.

"There is another thing to be considered about service in the army, and that is the habits of economy, and prudence that are generally acquired. True, the pay is not large—$13 a month, but in addition to this the men have a home, food, abundant clothing, medical attendance, and in fact everything necessary to a comfortable existence. They do not have the luxuries, to be sure, but such as they may require or desire, for that matter, are obtainable from the Commissary or Quartermaster at just what those things cost the Government to purchase at wholesale. The men are paid once in two months, and if they are provident and not extravagant, the greater part of their wages may be saved, and if the soldier so desires, the money can be deposited with the Government. When the amount of these deposits reaches $50, interest at the rate of 4 per cent. begins to accumulate. This money, once deposited cannot be touched until the soldier's time is out, and he gets his discharge when he hands in his deposit book and receives the amount due him.

"During the third year of service the Government allows the soldier $1 a month extra; during the fourth year $2, and during the fifth year $3. This accumulation, $72, is paid the soldier when he receives his discharge. He may also save durng his five-year term as much as $200 on the single item of clothing if he is careful of his uniforms. All of these methods of saving allow him to accumulate a snug little capital to start him in life with when he leaves the army, if he cares to leave. Moreover, wherever he may be at the time of his discharge he receives his transportation to the place of his enlistment at the rate of a day's pay for every twenty miles of distance, and an additional allowance of 30 cents a day for rations. Thus, should he happen to be in Montana at the time of his discharge, and be entitled to transportation to New York, he would receive $150, or $75 more than the actual cost of the transportation, or an entire profit of $150 if he chose to remain in Montaina. Very many soldiers who have served their time on the frontier have settled down there and become prosperous and influential citizens, and the frontier has many prosperous farmers to-day who became such from the savings of a term of army service, that enabled them to take up claims and make happy homes.

"There are a great many good phases to army life if people only knew it. In all the Western posts there are regularly established libraries and reading rooms, containing the daly papers and the best curretn literature. Then there are schools under the supervision of regularly appointed Government teachers, where the best kind of common and practical education is given without expense. a solder desires to pursue his studies further officers are willing to assist him. Besides that he has plenty of leisure time to educate himself. The drill and guard duty is not severe, and, taken all in all, the work required is much less confining and onerous than that in many of the pursuits the soldier would follow in civil life. And the service is healthful, and there is very little —I might almost say no—opportunity to cultivate or contract the vices so rapidly acquired in our cties and towns.

"The opportunties to a soldier, also, for making money are many, especially if he have a good trade. Tailors, shoemakers, carpenters, blacksmiths, masons, bakers, tinsmiths, harnessmakers, and sometimes painters, bricklayers, telegraph operators, and other skilled workmen pick up considerable sums of money in the course of the year by doing odd jobs for the officers and soldiers of the post where they are stationed. I honestly believe that such men do better in a financial way in the army, when these extras and their regular pay are added together, than they would do at home."—New York Sun.

THE DEMOCRATS AND A STRAIGHT TICKET.

The Democratic Association to Meet Tonight.

MUCH INTEREST AROUSED.

NEW VIEW OF THE AFFECT OF A CITIZENS' MOVEMENT.

It is Argued That the Democrats Cannot Hope for Any Betterment Unless They Put up a Straight Ticket—A Favorable View of it From the Democratic Standpoint of Success for the Party.

The meeting of the Democratic Association at Councilman Moffett's office on North avenue tonight is expected to be largely attended and interesting on account of business that will be brought up concerning the city election.

There are a large number of Democrats who believe that the party should put a straight ticket in the field. The point to the fact that an effort is being made to re-organize the party in the city on an effective working basis and the only way this can be done is by giving the members something to work for. For the Democrats to abandon the plan of putting up a ticket would leave the party an absolute nonentity in local affairs, and all the interest and enthusiasm that has been aroused to make it something of a factor would be wasted. Naturally, with the Democrats cutting no figure in the city election the party organization would revert back to its former condition, because, it is argued, the Democrats as a party could not go into a campaign to support a Citizens' ticket with probably more Republicans than Democrats on it.

Another interesing view of the situation is taken by some. That is to the effect that perhaps it will be better after all for the Democrats to have a Citizens' ticket put in the field. If the Democrats put up candidates and poll their party vote for them, which it is very reasonable to expect that they could do, the Citizens' would withdraw enough support from disgruntled Republicans to endanger the success of the regular G. O. P. ticket and probably afford the Democrats a clean sweep. With this view taken into consideration the Democrats would center their energy in the campaign on getting out the full party vote; of course, striving to secure whatever other dissatisfied Republicans they could to vote with them, though none could be expected to come out openly before election and announce their support of the Democrats.

"It is recognized political principle," said one Democrat in talking to a Press representative this morning, "that the only way a political party can become a factor in community is through its activity and success in running candidates for local offices. It is in the local elections that the individual interest is aroused and then reflected helpfully in State and county elections. The Democrats who argue for their party to help the Republicans on the Citizens' movement offer an idea that will, if it is accepted, make the party more disorganized than ever in Plainfield."

A great many Democrats feel confident of carrying the First and Fourth wards by substantial majorities for a party ticket, and look at the Second ward as good fighting ground. With a Citizens' and a regular Republican ticket in the field, the latter's majorities in the Second and Third wards, if they have any there, would be more than overcome by the Democratic majority in the First and Fourth wards and result in the election of the Democratic city ticket as well as part of the ward councilmen.

OLD FIREMAN DEAD.

Jerome M. Collins Passes Away in His Sixty-ninth Year.

Word has been received in this city of the death of Jerome M. Collins, in his sixty-ninth year, who has been a resident of Brooklyn for some time past. Death occurred last Tuesday after a long illness. Mr. Collins formerly resided in this city with his daughter, Mrs. S. B. Joseph, of 331 East Sixth street. When in this city he was an attendant at the First Church of Christ. He was a brother of George Collins, painter, of 31 Harmony street, in the borough. He was an exempt member of the New York Volunteer Fire Department. He was well known in this city, where he had a number of friends. The funeral services will be held from the residence of Mr. Collins' son, No. 76 Hart street, Brooklyn, tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

TAMPERED WITH BILL.

SUCH IS THE CHARGE AGAINST AUGUSTUS BALDWIN, HAYCARTER.

It Is Alleged That He Increased the Weight on the Way Bill and Was Paid on the False Weight—Arrested

Detective Dabelle, of Orange, came to Plainfield yesterday afternoon with a warrant for the arrest of Augustus Baldwin, of West Fourth street, the well-known haycarter. The warrant was endorsed by Justice Nash, and Roundsman Flynn was sent out with the detective to make the arrest.

Flynn found Baldwin and made the arrest without trouble. Baldwin was taken to Orange last night.

The charge against the the young man was for forgery. A short time ago, he took a load of hay to Orange and sold it there. The charge is that he tampered with the way bill and changed the weight of the load from 3,100 pounds to 4,700 pounds, receiving pay for the false weight. It is alleged that he afterwards wrote to a colored man in Orange bragging of what he had done and asking if there had been any trouble over it. The latter, it is alleged, was turned over to the police and Baldwin's arrest in this city last evening was the result.

THEIR WOODEN WEDDING

PLEASANT ANNIVERSARY OF MR. AND MRS. VANFLEET.

Home Prettily Decorated for the Occasion—Large Number of Friends Gathered Together—Dancing a Feature.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter S. VanFleet, of 705 West Front street, last evening was the scene of an enjoyable celebration, when the host and hostess entertained a large number of relatives and friends in honor of the fifth celebration of their marriage. The event was marked with many pleasant features and everyone present joined heartily in the joyous occasion. Outside of the house and surrounding the porch were a number of Japanese and Chinese lanterns, which gave a brilliant illumination about the house. The interior of the home was prettily decorated with choice flowers, while there was a pleasing arrangement of satin ribbon which held the flowers in position about the several rooms.

The festivities began early and continued until early this morning. During the forepart of the evening Miss Kathryn McKeon and Miss Mamie McKeon, of this city, favored the audience with several pleasing piano and vocal selections. Soon after 9 o'clock dancing was started and, under the inspiration of the music as furnished by genial Samuel Frazee, the light fantastic toe was tripped during the balance of the evening.

About midnight the guests sat down to a sumptuous spread as provided by the host and hostess, and all did justice to the good things provided. After the inner man was attended to dancing was resumed and continued till the small hours of the morning.

Mr. and Mrs. VanFleet received a large collection of useful wooden presents, while some of the presents were of more value, and included silverware and cut-glass, showing the unmistakable popularity of the celebrants.

Guests were present from Westport and Southport, Conn., Newark, Jersey City, Bayonne, Trenton, North Branch, Somerville, Lebanon, Morristown, Millington, Brooklyn, Elizabeth, Chester, Westfield, Milltown and this city. Before the guests departed they all wished the host and hostess many happy returns of the day.

SAD FATE FOR BOSSY.

Drunk too Much Water and the Grain Swelled and Killed Her.

Andrew Carney, of Lincoln, was the owner of a fine cow, but the animal met with sad fate yesterday and today she is no more. Mr. Carney's man fed the cow a good mess of grain yesterday and immediately afterward allowed the cow to drink a large quantity of water. It was not long before there was trouble. The neighbors heard a terrible noise, as though someone was being murdered, and a large number of people turned out to learn the cause. It was soon discovered that there had been an explosion and that Mr. Carney's cow was the victim. The cow died soon afterward in great agony. Today she was taken away in an ambulance to New Brunswick.

Mr. Lovell Improving.

School Commissioner Leander Lovell, of Crescent avenue, who has been confined at Roosevelt Hospital, New York, for sometime past, is reported as improving rapidly, and the physicians in charge predict that he will be able to leave the hospital in two weeks if nothing unforseen happens.

FLIGHT OF A RUNAWAY DOWN PARK AVENUE.

Edward Hooley's Horse Made Things Exciting.

PART OF HARNESS MISSING.

CARRIAGE STRUCK HIS HEELS AND FRIGHTENED THE ANIMAL.

Coachman Had Just Driven Mr. Hooley to the Depot—Little Miss Hooley a Prisoner in the Brougham, but She was Not Frightened—The Runaway Collided With Three Other Carriages.

A runaway horse, drawing a handsome brougham, dashed down North avenue this morning about 8 o'clock when the streets were crowded with carriages and pedestrians. The horse and carriage belonged to Edward Hooley, of Rockview avenue, and the horse ran from the North Avenue station to Louis Hummer's store on Park avenue before it was caught.

The cause of the horse's running away was said to be the absense of a breeching strap on the harness. The animal was hitched so close to the carriage that his heels struck the crossbar of the shafts. The coachman had driven Mr. Hooley to the station, and turned the bougham about to return to the house. When the horse was headed for home he started off on a quick trot. The coachman pulled the horse in, but as there was no breeching strap the carriage was drawn close to the horse so that the animal's heels struck the cross-bar. This frightened the animal and he bolted.

The coachman on his box dared not pull hard for fear of pulling the carriage on the horse's heels. Everything would have been all right if Park avenue had not been filled with carriages, but when the horse turned the corner and saw the street blocked he turned towards the sidewalk and made directly for L. A. Hummer's store. Mr. Hummer happened to be near the door and caught the horse.

Mr Hooley's little daughter was in the brougham, and as soon as the runaway was stopped she jumped out of the carriage. She was not hurt.

W. W. Howland's carriage stood in front of Hummers's store, and the brougham collided with it and upset it. F. C. Jenning's phaeton which was being driven to the depot was also struck. The damage done to the carriages was slight. A cap was knocked off the wheel and a lamp was broken on Mr. Hooley's carriage. Mr. Howland's carriage lost a mud guard and a spring on Mr. Jenning's phaeton was broken.

Mrs. Howland had just alighted from her carriage and escaped being struck.

TRAMPS GET THREE MONTHS.

Bad Men Arrested at Fanwood Arraigned in Court.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 17—In the Union County Court of Common Pleas today James O'Neill, a traveling tinker, was sentenced by Judge Vail to one year in State Prison for stealing a sealskin cape and a new overcoat from the residence of Mrs. Eva Davis, on Pearl street. Joseph Bowers, Geo. Brooks and Joseph Cummings, arrested at Scotch Plains for stealing chickens, pleaded guilty and threw themselves on the mercy of the court. Judge Vail sentenced them to three months in the county jail. Cummings belongs to the Third Regiment and expected to go back to his company the day he was arrested. He was on a furlough.

The petit jurors for the October term of court were discharged.

Engagement Announced.

Miss Pierson, of Watchung avenue, gave a luncheon this afternoon in honor of her guest, Miss Georgia Welles, of Wyalusing, Pa. At the luncheon the engagement was announced of Miss Marion Bowen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Bowen, of this city, to Dr. William Hall Coon, of Wakefield, Mass. Dr. Coon, who is now visiting in Plainfield, was surgeon in the United States Army at Montauk Point and Santiago de Cuba.

Princeton Club Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Princeton Club of Union county will be held in Elizabeth on the evening of December 15th. It was to be held this evening but the date was changed some time ago. There will be a number of prominent speakers present. S. St. John McCutchen, of Plainfield, will represent Yale. E. S Paterson will be the only other local speaker.

Freeholders to Meet.

The Union County Board of Freeholders will meet at Elizabeth this afternoon and settle all election bills.

HOW ABOUT THE CURFEW

SHALL IT BE RUNG TO SEND THE CHILDREN HOME?

It is Hinted That the Town Improvement Association May Make it an Issue in the Approaching City Election.

The Newark Sunday Call recently published the following:

"Plainfield has had many novel issues raised in its municipal campaigns in years past—such as the rights of the darkey to have a monopoly of carting ashing, the commuters, or 'rooters,' as they are locally nicknamed, ruling the town, etc.—but if the fair members of the Town Improvement Association carry out their present intentions this year will probably see one of the most remarkable agitations brought forth that have yet interested citizens in local government. It is the question:

"'Shall Plainfield have the curfew bell inaugurated for the benefit of its rising generation of citizens?'

"A year ago the women of the Town Improvement Association advocated that the curfew bell be made a part of the city ordinances by enactment of the Common Council, but at that time the matter was laughed down by the men. Now, however, the women are again agitating the matter, and right on the eve of the city election campaign, too, as the municipal election takes place in December. At the recent meeting of the Improvement women the curfew idea was brought up and a paper read upon the subject by Mrs. Pierre Malli, president of the association. Notwithstanding the ridicule of the curfew bell by the sterner sex, the women still persist in their devotion to the idea. They say that many young lives are wrecked by the street education gained at hours of the night when all good little people should be tucked away in bed, and that with a curfew bell warning children under 16 years to vacate the streets at 7 o'clock in the winter and 8 o'clock in the summer, unless accompanied by a guardian, the percentage of crime attributed to street education would be greatly reduced.

"It is the intention of the women to commence an educational campaign by personal advocacy among their gentlemen friends and by the distribution of suitable literature for converts to the curfew bell idea, and in this way to create sufficient sentiment to bring the matter into a municipal campaign. They feel confident that once such an issue is raised no political candidate would dare to affront the women of the city by declining to carry out the idea if elected to office, and in this way they can carry out what has thus far proved a difficult undertaking."

ARRESTED TWICE ON SAME CHARGE.

Martin Holmes Again in Custody on an Assault Charge.

Martin Holmes, who has just been released from the Somerset county jail, after having served ten days on a charge preferred by John Barrick, of the borough, was arrested again yesterday afternoon by Marshals Wise and Schenck on a State warrant issued by Justice Mattison, of the borough. It appears that when Holmes was arrested before it was on a borough warrant. He was taken before Recorder Long and a sentence of ten days and fine of $20 was imposed. When Holmes had served his ten days he was released. His fine of $20 was not paid and the Recorder claims that Holmes should not have been released from the county jail until the $20 had been served out at a $1 a day.

It is claimed that Holmes cannot be arrested twice on the same charge, but Justice Mattison has issued a State warrant on a second charge preferred by John Barrick for assault and battery with intent to kill. The scrap took place a short time ago in George Wise's barn on Grandview avenue, when Barrick was cut by Holmes about the head. Holmes will be taken before Justice Mattison this afternoon and given a hearing, when it will be determined whether Holmes can legally be committed to jail the second time on a similar charge.

Died From Appendicitis.

The death of Benjamin Meyers, son of Bernhard Meyers, of Finderne, occurred last Tuesday night after a short illness with appendicitis. Mr. Meyers for sometime past resided in this city and looked after the interest of his father's business on Watchung avenue. He has a host of friends who will mourn his death.

UP TO MIZZEN PEAK BY THE TROLLEY CARS.

Latest Scheme Developed by Silas D. Drake.

SAYS HE HAS THE MONEY.

THE ROAD TO RUN FROM LINCOLN TO TOP OF THE MOUNTAIN.

It is an Independent Enterprise and is Not Controlled by Any of the Existing Traction Companies—A Hotel to be Built and the Peak Made a Great Resort for New York Business Men

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Lincoln, November 17—The dashing town promoter, Silas D. Drake, seems to be a never-failing spring of new schemes. His latest is a trolley road to connect Lincoln and Mizzen Peak. It isn't all talk, either, says the undaunted Silas. He says that he has all the consents for the proposed line and that the necessary funds are ready to be invested in the roadway.

The Lincoln and Mizzen Peak Trolley Company is an independent organization and has nothing to do with the Brunswick Traction Company, the lines of which it will connect with at Lincoln.

Mizzen Peak is a high point in the first ridge of the Watchung Mountains and lies right back of Bound Brook. It is a beautiful place with a magnificent view and gloriously cool mountain breezes in the summer time. It makes an ideal summer stopping place. Heretofore, however, the trouble has been in the method of getting there. It was a hard hilly road to climb and rather expensive to live there. A hotel was erected there and met with fair success which would have been much better had the transportation facilities been better. The hotel afterwards burned down.

Mr. Drake's plan is to run a trolley road up to the side of the mountain and convert Mizzen Peak into a summer home for New York business men, making it easy for them to reach that delightful spot every day. The line will be completed, Mr. Drake says, by May 15th.

COMMISSIONERS GET MORE TIME.

They Have Until December 9th in Which to File Their Report.

[Special to The Daily Press.]

Elizabeth, Nov. 17.—In the Union County Circuit Court yesterday Justice VanSyckel made an order giving an extension of time to the commissioners appointed by the Court to make an estimate and assess damages to property-owners for land which the county wants on the north side of Westfield avenue, from Elizabeth to Cranford, in order to widen the avenue to a county boulevard.

The Commissioners were to present their report today to Justice VanSyckel, but were unable to complete it in time. They are now given until December 9th to file their report. It is probable that the same Commissioners will be continued to make a similiar assessment of damages to property-owners from Cranford to Plainfield.

A Railway Project.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Rahway, Nov. 17—A project is on foot to construct a railroad through Rahway to connect with the Jersey Central's Long Branch division near the mouth of the Rahway river, and with the Lehigh Valley Railroad in Clark township. It is said that several well known capitalists not residents of Rahway, are back of the enterprise, and some capitalists in Rahway are also interested. The road is to be a local line for the benefit of the people of the city, and to give them additional facilities for getting to New York and other places.

Ferry-Boats in Collision in Slip

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City, Nov. 17—The ferry-boat Fanwood, of the New Jersey Central Railroad Company, crashed into the ferry-boat Central of the same company at 8:30 a. m. yesterday. The Central was lying in its slip on the Jersey side. The collison was due to the heavy tide. The Fanwood struck the Central in the forward portion of the starboard cabin, ripping it for several feet. There were no passengers in that part of the cabin, and no one was injured. The damage is estimated at $1,000. The Fanwood was uninjured.

Yale Clubs Coming to Plainfield.

The Yale Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs are arranging their Christmas tour through the country. Their first stop will be in Plainfield Wednesday evening, December 21st, when they will give their concert at the Casino. The Yale boys are general favorites with the Plainfield people, and they always present an excellent programme, well-rendered.

WILL APPLY ONCE MORE

PLAINFIELD STREET RAILWAY WANTS FRANCHISE AGAIN.

Secretary of Board of Trade Receives Word That Company Will Apply if Backed by the Board of Trade.

Ever since the Plainfield Street Railway Company withdrew its application for the Scotch Plains extension of its line, the Board of Management of the Board of Trade has been using its influence to have a new application made.

Last evening, Harry C. Runyon, secretary of the board, received a verbal message from Chandler Riker, of Newark, through L. W. Serrell, Jr., of this city, that the company would make a new application at the first opportunity if the Board of Trade would back it up. This the Board of Managements says it will do.

The Board is now trying to arrange a meeting between the street committee of the Council and the railway officials to see if a satisfactory agreement can be reached.

Republicans Will Have Special Train to State Capital—Councilman Wm. N. Runyon is on Committee of Arrangements.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 17—Union county, as the home of Governor-elect Voorhees, is planning to make a rousing demonstration at his inauguration at Trenton in January. It is the wish of the Republican county executive committee to collect an army of three thousand enthusiastic G. O. P. men from the county and show the rest of the State how Union can turn out when one of her sons is raised to a position of eminence.

At the meeting of the county committee, Tuesday evening, the demonstration was discussed and active action taken. A committee of five, composed of James White, James Calvert and M. W. Halsey, of Elizabeth; Harry Rollinson, of Rahway, and William N. Runyon, of Plainfield, was appointed to take charge of the arrangements.

Reduced rates will be secured to Trenton and, if the crowd promises to be large enough, a special train will be run to the State capital to carry the Union county men. Something elaborate in the way of a souvenir badge will be provided.

In Trenton and at the inaugural ceremonies, arrangements will be made so that Union county will take a prominent part. The Veteran Zouaves, of Elizabeth, will go as a special guard for the Governor-elect, and Drake's Band will head the procession.

A CHAFING DISH SOCIABLE.

Seventh-Day Baptist Endeavorers Arrange a Pleasant Affair.

The members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-Day Baptist church invited their friends to a "chafing dish" sociable last night. The novel name given it and the good things provided by the ladies to eat, made the sociable an enjoyable.

There were five chafing dishes in operation with ladies attendant upon each one. There were two of welsh rarebit, with Mrs. Lewis Kimball and Mrs. Frank Smith in attendance; one of creamed oysters, in charge of Mrs William Hubbard, another of panned oysters, Mrs. Frank Hubbard and candy, Mrs. Charles Dunham. Mrs. Charles Randolph poured the coffee. The chafing dishes were in the church parlors, where the refreshments were served with all their accompaniments.

During the evening an impromptu programme consisting of a piano duet by Mrs. William Hubbard and Miss Jessie Utter was rendered, a vocal solo by Miss Nan Randolph and a solo by George Rogers. The waitresses were four young ladies connected with the society, Miss Ethel Titsworth, Miss Ruth Maxson, Miss May Ross and Miss Mertie Randolph.

LONG DELAYED CHARGE.

Rahway Woman Accuses a Plainfielder of Robbing Her.

Miss Nellie Stack, a Rahway girl, caused the arrest of John Teeple, of East Third street, today. She claims that on the night of March 20th last, she and Teeple were out riding together, and when near Linden, Teeple turned about and struck her, rendering her insensible. He then, she says, took a $250 diamond ring from off her finger and $10 in money from her person and left her. Teeple refused to say anything when arraigned before Justice Nash this afternoon, and was held in $500 bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury.

WHO WILL G. O. P. NAME FOR CITY JUDGE.

William N. Runyon States He Is a Candidate.

STILL ANOTHER CANDIDATE.

CITY JUDGE DEMEZA MAY TRY FOR RE-NOMINATION.

Will Announce His Decision in the Matter Tonight—Runyon Long Understood to be in the Race—Told Press Reporter That He Will Take the Field—Active Worker in Second Ward.

The question as to who is to be the choice of the Republican party for the nomination for City Judge is beginning to grow interesting. Yesterday the active candidacy of Justice William Newcorn for the nomination was announced. Now comes out the fact that Councilman William N. Runyon is an avowed candidate as well and that the present incumbent, Judge George W. DeMeza, is likely to be in the race after a re-nomination.

It has been understood for some time that Councilman Runyon was to try for the nomination, but nothing was definitely said on his part. This morning he stated to a Press reporter that he was a candidate and would fight hard for the nomination. Although a young man he has been very active in politics in the Second ward and has worked hard to further the interests of the G. O. P. Last spring he was admitted to the bar in New Jersey. He has been practicing in New York for several years, and is considered an able young lawyer.

There has been a persistent rumor in circulation that City Judge DeMeza would try for the place. There are a number of the Judge's friends who are anxious to have him try for a renomination and have been bringing considerable pressure to bear. The Judge's business has been steadily increasing and he first thought of making no attempt to re-enter the field. He is now considering it and his advocates are to have an answer today as to whether he is willing to go ahead for the place.

With these three candidates, all of whom have considerable strength, the contest is likely to be a lively one indeed.

LORTON-NAYLOR.

Nuptials Celebrated at the Home of the Bride's Parents.

Eugene Victor Lorton, of West Fifth street, one of the drivers for the United States Express Company, was married last night. The bride was Miss Sarah E. Naylor, of 235 East Third street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Naylor. The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church.

The bride wore a dark green cloth dress trimmed with white brocade satin. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Naylor stood up with the couple. After the ceremony a short reception was held, and the young couple were congratulated and complimented. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome moonstone pin, and the presents received by the couple were numerous and costly. For the present they will continue to live at the bride's home, but next spring they expect to go to housekeeping.

Among the guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Naylor, Mr. and Mrs. John Naylor, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Albert Naylor, Mrs. Lorton, Samuel Sorensen, Mr. and Mrs. Haberle, Mr. and Mrs. Huff, Edward Towley, of Westfield; Mrs. J. Connelly, Miss Ethel Lorton and Mr. and Mrs. Lee.

A HOME WEDDING.

Miss Mary Esther Labaw Married to Berne Egel.

A pretty wedding was celebrated at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Labaw in Harlingen, Somerset county, last night in the marriage of their daughter, Mary Esther, to Berne Egel, of Bound Brook. The officiating clergyman was Rev. F. M. Kitt.

Mrs. G. W. Saums, of this city, presided at the piano and played the wedding marches. The ushers were E. V. M. Labaw, Alfred Stout, of this city, J. F. Egel, of Bound Brook, and Fred H. Stein, of Somerville.

The bride was attired in a brown traveling suit, trimmed with white lace. She carried a bouquet of white bridal roses.

The ceremony was performed under a beautiful floral arch, the house throughout being decorated in an elaborate manner.

CAROLINA RACE RIOTS

The Government Orders the U. S. Attorney to Investigate.

TOLBERT TO GOV. ELLERBEE

The Exiled Postmaster Wires to the Governor of South Carolina Asking if He Will Be Afforded Protection in the Event of His Return to McCormick.

Washington D. C., Nov. 17.—The government has decided to investigate the circumstances under which James W. Tolbert, assistant postmaster at McCormick, S. C., was compelled by the threats of an armed mob to abandon his office and home.

With that end in view the matter has been placed in the hands of United States Attorney Lathrop with instructions to look into the matter with a view to the prosecution of violations of the federal statutes in this or any other cases growing out of the recent race riots in that locality.

As a preliminary step, Mr. Tolbert sent a telegram to Governor Ellerbee at Columbia, asking to know whether, as governor of South Carolina, he can and will afford him protection in returning to his family and office.

The following is the text of the telegram, to which no answer has yet been received:

Washington, Nov. 15.

To the Governor of South Carolina, Columbia, S. C.:

I am a citizen of South Carolina, where I was born and raised and have always resided. My home is at McCormick, in the county of Abbeville. My wife is postmaster there and I am her assistant and conduct the business of the office for her, she being a delicate woman.

On Thursday, the tenth inst., I was forced by an organized and armed mob of one hundred men to leave my family and my home under the threat that if I remained there I would be killed. I, therefore, fled for safety, because I was unable to resist this mob. I am a large land owner in the county of Abbeville and also the owner of valuable houses and other real estate in the town of McCormick.

My wife is there with our only child, a girl four years old, without my presence and my protection on account of the action of an armed mob, and my property is without proper care. I have committed no crime against the laws of my country and have done nothing to give any offense whatever to any man or set of men, save that I am a member of the Republican party and believe in the doctrines of that party.

I send this to know if you, as the governor of South Carolina, can afford me protection as one of its citizens and as an employe of the United States government, that I may return to my family, to my property and my business and be safe from mob violence.

Answer, care of St. James Hotel, Washington, D. C.

(Signed) JAMES W. TOLBERT.

Shower of Flashing Meteors.

Williams Bay, Wis., Nov. 17.—The much talked of meteoric shower was observed here between midnight and daybreak yesterday.

While there was a good display, promising much for next year, when the earth encounters the densest part of the swarm, the brilliancy was not what was popularly expected.

The sky, which was overcast with clouds, the fore part of the night cleared about midnight, just in time for the display. In the short space of time during which they were visible from the Yerkes observatory about two hundred meteors were seen.

Many were of the first magnitude, leaving a brilliant trail of light, with a bluish green tinge. Others were very faint.

Most of them appeared about one hundred degrees from the radiant, showing the distance they passed through the atmosphere before becoming ignited.

Professor Barnard, assisted by Professors Ellerman and Ritchie, took observations of the display from the roof of the Yerkes observatory. Numerous photographs were made, but what results were obtained is not yet known, as the negatives have not yet been developed.

Value of the Clearing House.

New York, Nov. 17.—An excellent example of the value of the clearing house system was afforded yesterday, when the bank of the state brought to the clearing house $15,647,245.82 in checks upon other banks and other banks brought $15,647,401.85 in checks upon it.

The result was that more than thirty million dollars' worth of business was transacted by the actual employment of $141.97 in cash.

The exchanges at the clearing house have been on a very heavy scale in the past few days.

They aggregated two hundred and forty million Tuesday and two hundred million yesterday.

Their big volume has been due to the heavy increase in Wall street business in both bonds and stocks.

Gen. Graham Dying.

New York, Nov. 17.—Major General William H. Graham, formerly commander of the department of the gulf who was in charge if Camp Alger last summer, is very ill with typhoid fever at Fort Hamilton.

Dr. Robertson, who is attending the general, said last night that his patient was dying.

General Graham is fourth in seniority among the major generals of the army. He is preceded by Generals Miles, Merritt and Brooke. About three weeks ago he was relieved from the command of Camp Meade because of the age limit of 64 years.

Death of an Actress.

New York, Nov. 17.—Ethel Marlowe of this city, an actress of note, who has been playing the part of "Polly" in "The Christian," at the Knickerbocker Theatre, fell dead at the close of the play last night. Heart disease was the cause.

GOLD PRODUCTION AND COINAGE.

Figures from the Report of the Director

Washington, D. C., Nov. 7.—The report of the director of the mint, to be made public in about a week, will contain some surprises.

The gold coinage of the world for the year ending June 30 last, will be shown to have been about double that of any preceding year, and this in spite of the fact that the coinage in the United States was not quite up to the recent average.

This was due to the lack of mint facilities, which still continues.

We have to-day $134,000,000 worth of gold bullion ahead of the minting presses. But while the United States was not increasing in its gold coinage, Russia and Japan were making long strides, and throughout Europe there was a generally increased output.

In the case of the two countries named, however, the extraordinary movement of the year just closed was largely due to the accumulation in previous years of gold bullion in preparation for putting the finances of the nation squarely on the gold basis.

"But the real test of the abundance of gold," said Mr. Roberts, director of the mint, yesterday afternoon, "is to be found in the statistics of production rather than of coinage. In 1888 the output of the world was only $110,000,000, while in the calendar year 1897 it reached $237,000,000, and will this year go as high as $275,000,000. Returns already in show that South Africa will increase last year's output by $20,000,000; Australia by $10,000,000, and Canada by $6,000,000 or $8,000,000. The United States will probably show some increase, but how much it is now impossible to predict with safety.

"The figures for the Yukon product, which have not yet been published officially, are as follows: From the first of July till the first of November we received at Seattle and San Francisco a little more than $10,000,000 in gold from that quarter. This is rather above the expectations of the office."

THE NICARAGUA GRANT.

Ex-Mayor Grace and Associates Get New Concession.

New York, Nov. 17.—E. F. Cragin of Chicago, who engineered the purchase of the concession for the building of the Nicaragua canal in the interest of the Grace syndicate, arrived here yesterday on the fruiter Allegheny, from Greytown.

He was accompanied home by Colonel Alexander Bacon and Mr. Eyre of the firm of W. R. Grace & Co., and a corps of civil engineers belonging to the corporation.

Mr. Cragin says that the syndicate which he represents has now full control of the building of the interoceanic canal, and that the old grant, for years held by the Warner Miller syndicate, has been cancelled and that at the opening of the Nicaraguan congress in extraordinary session recently, President Zolaya, in a message, said: "I shall give you an account of a promise of a contract for the opening of an interoceanic canal through our isthmus granted to Messrs. Cragin and Eyre, representing a respectable syndicate of American capitalists.

"The promise made to Messrs. Cragin & Eyre is based on the security of the reputation and standing of the parties we are dealing with and on a deposit of $100,000 in gold. Messrs. Cragin & Eyre offer something more positive in a line of interoceanic transportation from the Atlantic to the Pacific that shall be completed three years after the new company is organized."

McMillan at the White House.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—Senator James McMillan of Michigan, who has been persistently "mentioned" as ambassador to England to succeed Colonel Hay, called on the president yesterday morning.

The question of the ambassadorship was not brought up in the course of the call, and Senator McMillan says he has no knowledge whatever of the president's intentions.

Regarding the probability of his own appointment the senator says he has never been consulted on the subject by any officer of the administration.

Secretary Alger, who, it was reported, would be appointed senator by Governor Pingree if McMillan should go to England, says that there is no such plan on foot and that he will not leave the cabinet until the end of his term.

In Favor of Austrian Union.

Vienna, Nov. 17.—Upon the occasion of the emperor's jubilee, on Sunday, November 27, a pastoral letter signed by the whole Austrian episcopate will be read in the pulpits of the empire. After reviewing the emperor's fifty years' reign, the letter refers to his strong religious feeling and concludes with an expression of hope that his jubilee may mark the day of reconciliation of the Austrian peoples.

South Dakota Republicans.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 17.—Enough returns have been received to make positive the election of the entire Republican state ticket, with the possible exception of governor.

The Republican congressmen have been elected by majorities ranging between three thousand and five thousand. The legislature is Republican in both branches.

Disturbance in India Threatened

Simla, British India, Nov. 17.—Trouble is brewing in the Upper Swat valley, whose notorious "Mad Fakir" at the head of six hundred men, is preparing to attack the Nawab of Dir and create a rising against British rule.

Rear-Admiral Schley Detached.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—An order has been issued from the navy department detaching Rear Admiral W. S. Schley from duty with the Porto Rican evacuation commission and ordering him home to await further orders.

Press Gag Applied in Russia.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 17.—The minister of the interior has prohibited the retail sale of the newspaper Novoe Vremya, owing to its infraction of the press law.

A MASSACRE IS FEARED

Aguinaldo Says He Will Make War on the United States.

GEN. MERRITT'S OPINION

Gen. Otis Says Iloilo is Surrounded by Insurgents and There May be a Slaughter. Admiral Dewey Regards Aguinaldo as Treacherous. Feared Complication.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—Reports of a somewhat disquieting nature have been received from General Otis, in command at Manila.

He says that the province of Iloilo, in the island of Panay, technically occupied by Spaniards, is surrounded by insurgents and fears are entertained that the Spanish population and garrison will be massacred.

The indications are, however, that the present situation in Iloilo cannot be controlled by the United States army at Manila or the insurgent leaders there.

The troops under General Otis are not available for such duty, and, under the terms of the protocol, pending peace negotiations, it is not desirable to send a force from the army to the island of Panay.

Aguinaldo's Threat.

Seattle, Nov. 17.—Captain John Barneson, commander of the transport Arizona, has arrived here from Manila. He says the general impression among army officers is that when the peace commission concludes its labors the United States will have serious trouble with the natives.

Admiral Dewey told him that Aguinaldo was not only unreliable, but treacherous. It is said that Aguinaldo has promised his men that immediately upon the withdrawal of the Spaniards he will declare war against the United States.

He says he will kill off American soldiers faster than the United States government can ship them to the islands. Captain Barneson states that the naval officers favor and the army officers oppose the retention of the Philippines.

Gen. Merritt Talks.

London, Nov. 17.—General Merritt says it would be impossible to establish an American system of government in the Philippines.

He adds that they must have some form similar to the British colonial governments.

Regarding the complaints of the Filipinos the general says:

"It was impossible to recognize the insurgents, and I made it a point not to do so, as it would lead to complications. Admiral Dewey, after my arrival, pursued the same course. What was done before is not for me to comment on. I purposely did not recognize Aguinaldo nor his troops, nor use them in any way. Aguinaldo did not ask to see me until ten days after my arrival. After that I was too much occupied to see him.

"In talking with leading Filipinos, I told them the United States had no promises to make, but that they might be assured that the government and people of the United States would treat them fairly. This was because the United States is in the habit of dealing fairly with all struggling people, and not because I had been authorized to say anything of the kind.

"We purposely did not give the insurgents notice of our attack on Manila because we did not need their cooperation and did not propose to have it. We were moved by fear that they might loot and plunder and possibly murder. Aguinaldo's subordinate leaders, in conversing with American officers, frequently said that they intended to cut the throats of all the Spaniards in Manila.

"Aguinaldo himself wrote a complaining letter, saying that the insurgents had been denied 'their share of the booty,' whatever he may have meant by that. I took no notice of this letter, nor do I think the subject now raised is a matter for discussion between Aguinaldo and any representative of the American government."

Humbert Indorses Czar.

Rome, Nov. 17.—King Humbert in opening Parliament yesterday referred to the rioting in Italy last spring, and said he was looking forward to the moment whenhe would be able to pardon those who were misled at that time.

Continuing, the king pointed to the acceptance of Italy's proposals regarding the government of Crete and the Anarchist conference as proving the cordiality of her relations with the powers.

The financial condition of the country, his majesty asserted, was satisfactory, the navy would be gradually increased and a series of internal reforms submitted.

In conclusion King Humbert said Italy needed peace and cordially adhered to the czar's proposal to discuss the question of disarmament at the approaching congress.

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it isn't always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

NEWS FROM HAVANA.

Progress of Evacuation. Prominent Arrivals.

Havana, Nov. 17.—A joint session of the evacuation commissions was held yesterday morning. Captain General Blanco, in order to complete the evacuation of the province of Puerto Principe by November 22, has ordered the transports Chandonagar, San Augustine, Isla de Panay and Mexico, which are capable of taking on board about five thousand troops, to leave at once for Nuevitas.

Major General Humphreys and Colonel Hecker and their staffs and John J. Washburne have arrived here on board the steamer Mascote.

Captain Carbonell of General Lee's staff, and his wife, formerly Evangelina Cisneros, whose escape from prison here about two years ago caused a great stir, also arrived on board the Mascotte.

Manuel Sanguilly of the Cuban commission left for Washington yesterday by way of Tampa, Fla. The other members of the commission will go to Washington by way of New York today.

The official returns as to deaths from yellow fever last week were received yesterday by Colonel Clous. The only two cases reported were those of Colonel Williams and Mr. F. T. Stewart, the typewriter in the quartermaster's department.

Mr. Caldwell also of the same department, is now much improved and is rapidly canvalescing. There are no new cases.

The entire staff of clerks and typewriters will accompany Colonels Livermore and Thompson and Dr. O'Reilly north to-day.

Naval Engineer Menocal will return to the United States on Saturday, in response to a summons from Washington.

It is understood that he will go later to Porto Rico on a special mission for the government.

The Spanish mail steamer Isla de Panay has arrived, bringing 260 political prisoners, who had been deported, and twenty-two more nanigos. Senor de Castro, the civil governor, has directed that they be lodged and fed for the time being at the Fosos Municipales.

The return of these men is a new menace to the peace and order of the city.

SALE OF FOOTBALL TICKETS.

Enormous Demand for Seats for Yale-Harvard Game.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 17.—The public sale of tickets for the Yale-Harvard game began at nine o'clock yesterday morning, and within fifteen minutes the three hundred or more sittings on the end stands and on the newly built ones in corners were disposed of, going in lots of two and three to each purchaser.

A small army of speculators was ready to gobble up lots of ten, as they expected first comers would be served with as many as asked for.

Three of the speculators stood in line from 4.30 in the morning and others paid representatives to hold places for them.

Every supposed speculator was tabooed by a spotter and the ticket seller refused them seats.

It required the assistance of a policeman to handle them.

Never at a Yale-Harvard game has the demand been so great for seats, despite the twenty-six hundred extra ones added this year.

Christmas Gifts for the Soldiers.

San Francisco, Nov. 17.—The transport St. Paul will sail on Friday for Manila with about two thousand tons of supplies, of which two hundred tons are Christmas presents for the soldiers in the Philippines.

The vessel will carry twenty-one wives of officers. Captain Niebaum of the Alaska Commercial Company is sending a redwood to the California boys for a Christmas tree.

The steamer Aztec has sailed for the Orient with 4,800 casks of liquor for Manila and 1,250,000 pounds of tobacco for Japan.

Eastern League Meeting.

New York, Nov. 17.—A special meeting of the Eastern League of Professional Baseball Clubs was held at one o'clock yesterday afternoon in a parlor of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, to take action in regard to the proposed change in the present circuit by substituting Utica for the city of Wilkesbarre.

The Wilkesbarre managers were represented at the meeting by counsel of this city, who gave notice that their clients would resort to legal means if necessary, to compel the league to reimburse the Wilkesbarre organization if it was dropped from the list.

No action was taken in the matter at the meeting.

Close Vote in Nassau County.

Mineola, L. I., Nov. 17.—In accordance with the official count, Robert Seabury and James P. Niemann, both Democrats, will be the first county judge and district attorney, respectively, of the new county of Nassau. The vote between these candidates and their Republican rivals was close and both sides claimed the election until the official canvass was made.

The Republicans elected Woods, sheriff; Patterson, county clerk, and Eastman, county treasurer.

Roosevelt Spent $2,000.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 17.—The certificate of Governor-elect Theodore Roosevelt, showing his expenditures in aid of his election, has been filed with the secretary of state. The document reads:

"I have paid to E. A. McAlpin, the treasurer of the Republican state committee, the sum of two thousand dollars."

Trained Nurses for Manila.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 17.—Miss Abbie H. Zaner, directress of nurses at Portland Hospital, has received a dispatch from Surgeon General Sternberg to proceed to Manila immediately with as many trained nurses as could be secured in Portland.

THE PARIS PEACE PARTY

Brief Joint Session of Commission Without Results.

PAY FOR THE PHILIPPINES

The Spanish Argument Presented and Adjournment Taken Until Saturday. A Statement from Madrid that the Conferences Will Continue.

Paris, Nov. 17.—The meeting yesterday of the Spanish-American peace commissions began at 2.15 p. m., and ended at 3 p. m.

At the session the Spanish commissioners presented a long document on the Philippine question in answer to the American argument, which was submitted last week.

By mutual consent the memorandum was handed to the Americans without being read, and the meeting adjourned until next Saturday.

The Spaniards, in their communication yesterday reaffirmed the position which they have assumed against the discussion here of Spain's Philippine sovereignty.

They insist that the words "shall determine the control, disposition and government of the Philippines," in article 3 of the peace protocol, do not warrant any reference to Spain's withdrawal from the Philippines, except on her own terms, and, therefore, the Spaniards propose arbitration on the construction to be placed on the words, "the control, disposition and government."

The Spanish communication was translated last evening, and its contents will be discussed by the United States commissioners to-day at their usual daily session.

The Journal, referring to the peace negotiations, says: "We think that the extravagant exactions of the United States have made discussion almost impossible between that country and Spain. Nothing but submission on the part of Spain seems possible. As the rumored intervention of the German emperor is a myth, Spain should reconcile herself to the inevitable and set herself about preparing for future struggles."

Madrid, Nov. 7.—The minister of foreign affairs, Duke Almodovar de Rio, has received dispatches from the Spanish peace commissioners, now in Paris, indicating that yesterday's meeting of the joint commissions will not be the last.

The commissioners have received additional instructions to defend Spain's rights in the Philippine islands.

The minister of marine, Senor Aunon, and the minister of foreign affairs have conferred on the subject of Emperor William's visit to Spain.

The newspapers discuss the Carlist agitation, but express belief that the followers of Don Carlos will not issue a revolutionary manifesto.

Pay for the Philippines.

Washington, Nov. 7.—Up to this point, the discussion at Paris having touched on principles, there has been no attempt to give exact figures in relation to the amount of money that might be paid to Spain by the United States on account of the Philippines. Such, for instance, was the statement that the United States would reimburse Spain "for the pacific expenditures" made on account of the Philippines, for no one here at the time had an exact knowledge of what these expenditures amounted to in the aggregate.

This has been ascertained, however, to the satisfaction of the American commissioners, at least, and they will name the exact amount of money which the United States is willing to pay over to Spain on this account.

What is proposed is a cash payment to the Spanish government for the United States does not propose to enter into any relations whatever with any of the holders of any of the bonds issued by Spain, notwithstanding the efforts of some of the European powers to bring this result about.

As to the amount which will be offered to Spain, the officials here are mute, but it is believed to lie somewhere between twenty million and forty million dollars.

Our commissioners do not look for an unconditional rejection of our offer but believe that there will be an attempt on the part of the Spanish commissioners to secure a liberal increase of the amount named.

The Amelcan commissioners are under instructions to inform the Spanish commissioners that there can be no further delay in the final conclusion of the work of the commission, so that it is expected that a conclusion one way or the other will be reached before long.

Stronghold Captured by Boers.

Pretoria, Nov. 7.—The Boer forces, after a heavy musketry and artillery bombardment, have stormed and captured the mountain stronghold of Chief Opefu of the Bagatos tribe, in the Zouttans Berg district.

Opefu recently massacred a missionary and his family, and the Transvaal government sent an expedition to punish the natives.

The latter attacked the Boers, but were driven into the mountains.

Two Boers were killed during the storming of the stronghold.

Inspects Troop Ships.

The one nearest completion is equipped with 2,400 beds, or about double the capacity of the largest of the transports the government was abliged to employ during the war.

The Dreyfus Scandal.

Paris, Nov. 17.—A commissary of police has notified M. Francis de Pressense, the well known writer, political economist and Dreyfus agitator, of his formal expulsion from the Legion of Honor.

This is a sequel to M. de Pressense's denunciation of certain officers for their treatment of Dreyfus.

WAR DEPARTMENT ACTIVE.

Ten Thousand Troops Ordered to Hold Themselves Ready to Move.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—There has been remarkable activity about the war department for several days in the way of preparing troops for lands beyond the United States.

An order has been issued directing at least ten regiments of the regular army now stationed in northwestern forts and posts to hold themselves in readiness for immediate transportation and service in tropical climates. Mose of these regiments were sent into the northern and western posts a few weeks ago for recuperation after the Cuban campaign.

While holding themselves in readiness for service these regiments will now be recruited up to their maximum strength.

Nothing is said officially as to what the present activity means, but there are several reasons suggested.

It is believed that an early movement to Cuba is intended, somewhat sooner than has been generally believed heretofore.

Another belief entertained is that the United States government desires to be in a position to meet any conditions that may grow out of the pending peace negotiations, and to be in readiness to resume hostilities if Spain refuses to accept the terms the American peace commissioners offer the Spaniards.

In this connection an intimation has got about to the effect that during the delay which has occurred Spain has been able to form some sort of coalition with European powers to back up the pretensions she has been making in the negotiations.

It may be that some of the regular regiments are destined to replace volunteers who have been pleading to be sent home.

An interesting feature of the matter is the refusal of the United States authorities to order the muster out of the volunteers who recently returned from Porto Rico.

These regiments were sent to their homes and given sixty days' furlough, but contrary to the plans heretofore followed, they were not allowed to be mustered out.

As to the ten regular regiments, every department of the government has been directed to prepare supplies for them and to arrange for transportation as soon as they are ordered to move.

MURDERED WOMAN'S BODY FOUND.

Mrs Anderson Was Killed and Her Body Buried in the Pigpen.

New Canaan, Conn., Nov. 17.—The dead body of Mrs. Sarah Anderson was found yesterday, buried in the pig pen at her home, near this place.

The woman's throat was cut from ear to ear.

Neighbors had been searching for her body since Tuesday, when the burning of her house and barn and the discovery of the body of her hired man hanging to a tree indicated that a murder might have been committed there.

The fire was first discovered by John Brown, a farmer, who was working in the fields about a mile from the Anderson homestead.

Brown ran to the place and found the house and barn in flames.

It was too late to check the fire, as the two buildings were almost consumed.

Other men had been attracted by the smoke, and a search for the former occupants of the house revealed the body of Mrs. Anderson's hired man hanging to a chestnut tree half a mile from the house.

In the pocket of his coat was found a letter which contained the announcement that he had killed Mrs. Anderson. The letter said:

"I have worked here a year and have got no money and mighty little to eat. I killed her. She has been dead seventeen days. Search and you will find her."

TERESA TO BE ABANDONED.

Naval Officials Convinced She is Now Worthless.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 17.—Although a formal order to abandon the Maria Teresa has not yet been sent to Captain McCalla, naval authorities are convinced by his report that the vessel is now nearly a worthless hulk, beyond repair and incapable of being moved at any expenditure within reason.

It is probable that some arrangement will be made with the wreckers to recover from the hulk anything of value that can be fetched away before the Teresa is finally abandoned.

The navy department has not yet abandoned the effort to secure at least one of the vessels of Cervera's fleet as a trophy to be placed on the American naval list, though somewhat discouraged by the result of the adventure in the case of the Teresa.

Advocates to Aid Dreyfus.

Paris, Nov. 17.—The announcement that two advocates will be sent to Cayenne, capital of French Guiana, to assist Dreyfus in the preparation of his defence, gives rise to the belief that he will not be brought back at once, after all.

It is believed he has already received the government's message announcing the revision.

The court of cassation will undoubtedly demand the secret dossier; and, according to the Soir, the government has taken the full responsibility for whatever measures may be necessary to prevent the dossier obtaining a publicity that would be dangerous from an international viewpoint.

New Motor for Trains and Steamers.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 17.—Elisha Seymour, seventy-five years old, born at Skaneateles, N. Y., but for several years past a resident of Chicago, and living at the Palmer House, claims that he has invented a new steam turbine.

He has two working models of his invention in a foundry at Rockwell and Fillmore streets. One of them is ten by twenty-four inches in size, and exerts a ten horse power.

By aid of this motor Mr. Seymour predicts railroad trains will be propelled from Chicago to New York in sixteen hours, and steamers will cross the ocean at a speed of forty miles an hour.

Fate of Music Hall.

A place of public amusement is one of the essential institutions of a city the size of Plainfield, and whenever there is a man at the head of a local theatre who strives to give the public the best and cleanest attractions on the road he ought to be well supported.

Manager Maze Edwards, of Music Hall, is such a man, but his efforts are not appreciated to the extent that they should be. He has had long and valuable experience in catering to the amusement public and in association with the best managerial and dramatic talent in the country. He has given Plainfield the best that such experience and association would naturally bring, but it is a fact that the patronage he has received has been very discouraging for further endeavors on his part.

Mr. Edwards is far from a pessimist or a grumbler, but if the treatment accorded him by the public in the near future is of the same slighting kind that he has been receiving thus far this season, Plainfield will probably lose the best theatrical manager it ever had.

It is an advantage to the city to have a creditably conducted place of amusement such as Music Hall has been under Mr. Edwards' administration, and it is to be hoped that the patronage given the house for the rest of this season will be gratifying enough to induce Mr. Edwards to remain in Plainfield.

A Trying Position.

The position of Editor Runyon in the approaching municipal campaign reminds one of a picture in a comic paper not long ago, in which a youthful citizen was seen to be walking along the street between two elders, who were deeply engaged in conversation and paying no attention to the youth. The boy's hands were held tightly by the elders, and the little fellow was crying as though his heart would break. When asked what ailed him the little fellow whimpered out between his sobs that he wanted to blow his nose. The point, of course, is obvious.

Editor Runyon is in the same sort of a pickle. One of his hands is linked to the Republican party by association and a gratitude that is defined by a lively sense of favors to come, and the other hand is secretly tied up to the movement for the Citizens' ticket. With both hands thus employed in a general hub-bub he is unable to say which he is for.

For a Straight Ticket.

James E. Martine is in favor of a straight Democratic ticket in the approaching municipal campaign.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

It was because VanDoren, the Republican candidate for Sheriff in Somerset, had been seeking public office so many times that scores of Republicans cut him recently at the polls. To charge Louis A. Thompson, the party leader, with responsibility for VanDoren's defeat is not justified by the returns. The opposition to VanDoren was as strongly developed in remote townships as it was in Mr. Thompson's home.—New York Press.

MYSTERY OF HIGHGATE CEMETERY.

Mrs. Anna Maria Druce has stirred England. Her claim that the coffin in Highgate Cemetery said to hold the remains of her fatherinlaw, T. C. Druce, was filled with lead, and that the supposed deceased was in reality the fifth Duke of Portland, has made a sensation. Proof of this would make her son Sidney sixth Duke of Portland.

Miss Fannie Kelly, of West Seventh street, has gone to New York for a week to attend the wedding of her brother, Edward, which takes place today.

Mrs. Wm. Wilson, of Grove street, who is confined to the house by illness, is not much improved. Her husband, Chief Marshal Wilson, is obliged to remain off duty to assist in attending her.

"ROYAL BLUE LINE."

Change of Time—New Five-Hour Trains to Washington.

On Sunday next, November 20th, the most important change of time in the history of the "Royal Blue Line" train service between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington will take place. The features of greatest interest to the public is the lessening of time between New York and Washington, and the introduction of two of the finest trains that have been built in modern times. With the coming change there will be three fast express trains that will run to Washington in five hours. One will leave New York from station foot of Liberty street, Central R. R., of New Jersey, and South Ferry, foot of Whitehall street, at 11:30 a. m., another at 1:00 p m and the "Royal Blue Limited Express" at 3:00 p. m. The latter train is composed entirely of parlor and dining cars that were built by the Pullman Company for this elite service and, in all their appointments, interior and exterior, are admitted to be the most beautiful and substantial vehicles of railroad travel of the present age. A train composed of these cars will leave Washington also daily at 3:00 p. m.

Other important changes will occur as follows: Train leaving New York at 7:45 a. m., will arrive at Philadelphia 10 o'clock. Trains for Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington now leaving New York at 1:45 p. m. will on and after next Sunday, leave at 1:30 p. m.

Disgruntled Republican View.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I notice in the News from time to time the names of certain prominent Republican gentlemen mentioned as probable candidates for the office of Mayor on the Republican ticket. I think there are about ten in all, but I understand that they have all declined the honor so far. Now, it is a very unusual thing for the Republican party in Plainfield to have to hustle for a candidate to head the ticket. It looks to me as if the gentlemen referred to see the landslide coming and do not want to be caught. Formerly it was considered quite an honor to get the nomination on the ticket; now it seems there is no one willing to take the chance. Republican.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

A play with a plot full of heart interest and sufficient comedy element causing numerous natural complications, is the ideal play of the times.

Just such a play is "The Girl From Frisco," which will be at Music Hall tomorrow night. It is full of ludicrous situations, and a most interesting story. Comedy and pathos have been ingeniously interwoven in this best of all plays.

This is its second prosperous season, and is therefore a guarantee of merit.

The play is of a very high order, with just enough comedy and musical interpolations to give it additional favor.

"The Girl From Frisco" is a play suited to all tastes, and possesses many features new to the stage.

Myron Leffingwell, its author and leading actor, is surrounded by a large and most capable company of artists, who give a most pleasing performance.

* * * * *

The Burrill Comedy Company which will open a week's engagement at Stillman Music Hall Monday, Nov. 26th at popular prices of 10, 20 and 30 cents, will change their programme nightly and present a new play a each performance. The opening play Monday night will be the pretty society drama "Infatuation," in which Miss Hulbert appears to great advantage; Tuesday, the war play "Old Glory;" Wednesday, the powerful drama "True as Steel;" Thursday, "The Octoroon," Friday Joseph Jefferson's "Rip Van Winkle;" and Saturday the melo-drama "Nobodys Daughter." The matinee prices are only 10 cents for children and 20 cents for adults.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 17—Mrs. Thomas Robison, of Newark, is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Staats, having been called here suddenly because of the illness of her sister.

A party of young folks gathered at the home of Conductor Dodwell last night to attend a party given by his little children. There were only a few there, but they had a fine time with games and good things to eat until 11 o'clock, when their mothers came after them to take them home.

This afternoon will occur the marriage of Miss Maier, daughter of Mrs. J. Maier, to Terry J. Ronayne, the popular telegraph operator and ticket agent at the station. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. Father Bogaard at the Catholic church.

Rev. E. S. Jamison, of the Methodist church, will preach to the Junior Order United American Mechanics Sunday night. Members of Lakeside and Friendship Councils will attend in a body. The sermon will be a patriotic one.

The committee on decorations finished their work in Apgar's Hall last night, and now everything is in readiness for the fair and bazaar which opens there tonight.

Mrs. Griggs, of New Brunswick, is very ill at the home of her father, ex-Postmaster Peter Staats, and fears are entertained for her recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Runyon and daughter, Mrs. J. Smalley, of Plainfield, spent yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. John Runyon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Walker, of Piscataway, spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. John Runyon of Washington avenue.

John Herbert has cut down two large willow trees that have stood in front of his house for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Terry have returned from Califon, where they have been visiting relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Emmons, of Montclair, have returned home after a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Brower.

J. D. DeGroff has rented a house on Washington avenue, and will move there this month.

Many loads of hay passed through here yesterday, bound for Newark and New York.

Miss Jennie Smalley, of Plainfield, has been visiting William Randolph, of Piscataway.

John Herbert, conductor on the Central Railroad, is taking a week's vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. William Connoly will move to Port Reading in a few days.

Repairs are being made to the chimney and roof of the postoffice.

A. D. Pope, of Plainfield, visited friends in the borough yesterday.

Mrs. A. N. Randolph spent Monday with relatives in Piscataway.

Squire Luckey spent Tuesday in Plainfield visiting friends.

John Fenner has returned from a visit in Glen Gardner.

Mrs. George Huff is recovering from her illness.

S. Vermuel will soon move to Plainfield.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Nov. 17.—The Thanksgiving supper and entertainment to be given under the auspices of Friendship and Lakeside Councils Tuesday evening, promises to be a big success. The affair will be held in Friendship Hall, and supper will be served from 6 o'clock until 8:15. The proceeds will go towards papering and painting the hall.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 17—Some excitement was caused last evening about 7 o'clock at the Fanwood station. An engineer of a freight train slowed up at the station and notified the agent that a man was lying dead on the track beyond the North avenue bridge. A search was immediately made, but no trace of a body was found.

It looks as though the hoboes Judge Clark committed to Elizabeth last week will have to face an additional charge, that of highway robbery. Mrs. I. L. Jones, of Fanwood, identified the trio as the ones who recently held up her and her coachman by the water tank in Netherwood while she was out driving.

The adjourned case of the Board of Education against the seven boys charged with breaking and entering the school building Hallow'een night, comes up before Judge Clark in Excelsior Hall tomorrow evening. The general opinion is the case will be dismissed for lack of evidence.

Mrs. James A. Baker and daughter, Miss Eva, returned Wednesday from a visit with relatives in New York State.

The condition of Jacob V. Coles, who lies dangerously ill at his home on Front street, remains about the same.

The Taylor cottage on Front street is having a new roof put on. John Bornman has the contract.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 17—Irving I. Ross, the hustling representative of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Co., who has been located on Staten Island for several weeks, has been tranferred to Elizabeth, and if "Irv." has his way every merchant at the county seat will have telephone connections before he leaves.

Miss Mount, an elocutionist, a graduate of the State Normal School at Stroudsburg, Pa., will give an entertainment at the Methodist church Friday evening. "The Shaking Quakers" is the name under which the entertainment is given.

The Advance Club meets Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Rufus S. Green on the boulevard. The members will be entertained with a humorous paper by Dr. Green, on Artemus Ward.

A large number of the members of Fireside Council, Royal Arcanum, went to New York last evening to attend a big meeting of a council, which was held in Masonic Temple.

MONEY IN OLD CHIPS.

Experts Who Make Good Violins From Odds and Ends.

People in Chicago who pass the windows of a large music store are attracted by the display of baskets full of chips and fragments of the old fiddle family. These unattractive bits of wood have large money value, however, as they can be skilfully joined and reassembled to make violins that have the genuine, rich tonal qualities of age. Chicago is the only city in America where such an artistic redivivus is attempted or accomplished. These chips and fragments of former musical glory are not mere flotsam and jetsam carelessly accumulated and cast up in this show window as a mournful memory, for they represent long travel, patience, shrewdness and diplomacy. Most of the old violins or parts thereof have been collected in Italy. They had a lower pitch, and when a century ago the fad came in for instruments of high pitch the shyster repairers proceeded to graduate them by gouging out the backs. This vandal process not only weakened the instrument, but the tone was soon correspondingly repressed, and then the instrument was cast aside. Nearly all the backs of these old instruments show this gouging, and the first task is to level up this hardwood surface.

The top of the violin being of soft wood usually has its edges worn down by handling and carrying in the case. The corners are generally broken and the S holes are frequently split or frayed. This necessitates what is technically called "redoubling." This consists in matching the parts, building up by gluing on pieces, the united parts remaining in the clamps for weeks in order to set them firmly. Cracks are filled with tiny strips; small pieces are matched in so adroitly that their presence can harly be detected on the surface. Consider now that the cracked and frayed top has been bent up after long continued pressure to its original shape; the gouged back restored to its former thickness; the seamed sides filled and blocked and even the old varnish revealed in its former richness.

These important parts have been artfully restored, indeed; but the assembling of them is, after all, the matter of most vital importance, for this means a retention or revival of the tonal qualities of the instrument. No matter how beautifully the patchwork is done, the violin is comparatively valueless unless it has the tone to soothe the sensitive ear of the connoisseur. The sound post must be adjusted so that it will hold the weight of the top, for the strings bring a pressure of sixty-five pounds upon the breast of the violin, quite a weight to rest upon a thin, vibrant slab of wood.

Even more important than this pillar is the base-bar, the long, thin piece of tempered spruce that runs two-thirds the length of the breast between the S holes. This not only serves to help in carrying the weight imposed upon the breast of the instrument, but it is the back bone of the violin's nervous system. It must neither be too stiff nor too light, and must be so adjusted that it will sympathetically sustain the vibrations that come from every touch of the bow. Of course, in all this large chances are taken, but fortune generally favors art, science and skill where materials have been wisely selected.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

NO DOCTORS' BILLS IN SWEDEN.

It's a Case of "Write Your Own Ticket" When You Employ a Physician.

Do you pay your doctors' bills? some persons don't. Do you have an idea that the medicine men are in the same category with street railway companies and therefore to be "beaten" in season and out of season? Do you object to getting a bill from your physician, and object on general principles? Then go to Sweden. That's the place for you. That's the place where the doctors cease from troubling and the poor debtor is at rest. No doctors' bills go in Sweden. Who wouldn't be a Swede?

When you are ill in Sweden and require the services of a physician, all you have to do is to send for him. He is likely to be an efficient man and courteous to a degree. Your needs will be ministered to and between the times of feeling your pulse and taking your temperature he won't slip one of his professional cards in your hand and remind you that he charges $10 a visit. Nothing is said of payment, and your doctor looks after you faithfully until you have recovered. When you feel like liquidating the obligation you'll find that it is a case of write your own ticket.

If you have been holding an office under Tammany prior to your trip to Sweden, or have struck it rich in Sugar, you may fill out your check for a handsome sum. The money will be accepted and no comment made. If you have been writing on space for some years or have picked the horse races wrong end first, you may send a small donation to the doctor, and it will be just as unemotionally received.

The Swedish doctor on his native heath tends the sick and makes no rates. His wealthy patients pay him handsomely, his poorer patients give what they can afford, and the extremely poor give nothing at all. All get the same treatment.—New York Herald.

Silent Partner—What do you expect to do with all that rusty barbed wire fencing?

Hustling Merchant—Oh, I don't know. There's going to be a demand for pieces of them Cuban trochas for relics after a while, ain't there?—Chicago Tribune.

ANXIOUS FOR PEACE.

SENTIMENTS OF THE ARCHBISHOP OF MANILA.

He Expressed Great Appreciation of the American Occupation of the City—Residence of the Archbishop. His Opinion of the Insurgents.

The intense feeling by the Philippine insurgents against the Spanish priests made it seem very desirable to see the archbishop of Manila, and he informed two American priests that he would have pleasure in making an expression of his views to me to be placed before the people of the United States, says Murat Halstead, who has recently returned from Manila, in the Chicago Record. He had been charged with extreme vindictiveness and the responsibility of demanding that the city should be defended to the last extremity, when actually, in the consultation of dignitaries that took place, when the surrender of the capital was demanded by General Merritt and Admiral Dewey he declared the situation hopeless and that it was a plain duty to prevent the sacrifice of life. He was overruled by the peculiar folly that has caused Spain in the course of the war to inflict heavy losses upon herself. Indeed the war originated in the Spanish state of mind that it was necessary to open fire and shed blood wantonly for the honor of Spain.

The Spanish officers knew why they could not save Manila from the hands of the Americans with the command of the sea by our fleet indisputable and unlimited reserves to draw upon to strengthen the land forces, saying nothing of the swarms of insurgents pressing in the rear and eager to take vengeance for centuries of mismanagement and countless personal grievances. It was the acknowledgment of the Spanish captain general, when he received the peremptory summons from Merritt and Dewey to give up the city, that there was no place of refuge for the women and children, the sick and wounded, and yet it was insisted that the honor of Spain required bloodshed, not much perhaps, but enough to prove that the army of Spain was warlike.

The residence of the archbishop is within the walled city, and is a very substantial edifice, the stonework confined to the lower story and hard wood timber freely used in massive form instead of stone. His grace was seated at a small table in a broad hall, with a lamp and writing material before him. He is impressive as a man of importance, and his greeting was cordial to kindliness. He said his acknowledgments were personally due the American people for the peace of mind he had enjoyed during the occupation of the city by the army of the United States, for its establishment of order and the justice in administration that relieved good citizens from oppression and alarm. He was glad to have Americans know his sensibility on this subject.

When asked what it was that caused the insurgents to be so ferocious against the priests and resolved on their expulsion or destruction, he said the rebels were at once false, unjust and ungrateful. They had been lifted from savagery by Catholic teachers, who had not only been educators in the schools, but teachers in the fields. The same Catholic orders that were singled out for special punishment had planted in the island the very industries that were the sources of prosperity, and the leaders of the insurgents had been largely educated by the very men whom now they persecuted. Some of the persecutors had been in Europe and became revolutionists in the sense of promoting disorder as anarchists. It was the antagonism of the church to murderous anarchy that aroused the insurgents of the Philippines to become the deadly enemies of priests and church orders. It was true in Spain, as in the Philippines, that the anarchists were particularly inflamed against the chucrh. His grace did not seem to have heard of the American anarchist.

There was one thing then that he had in his heart—that his anxiety for peace and his appreciation of order as enjoyed under the American military government should be recorded and responsibly reported to the people of the United States. The American priests had informed him that I was a friend of long standing of President McKinley, and he desired and enjoined that I should declare his sentiments to the president.

His grace announced that he would return my call, and his convenience being consulted the time was fixed for him to appear at 11 o'clock the next day, Sunday, and he came accordingly, accompanied by three priests, the chaplain of the First California, Father Daugherty, who sailed with General Merritt to Manila, and Father Boyle, the superintendent of the famous observatory founded by the Jesuits.

The Pope's Vigor.

The pope, if ill, is full of pluck. According to an anecdote in the Naples papers, he was walking in the Vatican garden the other day, leaning heavily on his stick. Suddenly he turned smiling to one of the officers of his household and said: "The doctor will have it that I am not well. But look here." And, giving his stick to the guard, his holiness walked forward about 40 steps without it, almost at a run, to the astonishment of his companions.—London News.

Prayer For England at Marseilles.

The extension of the work of the Archconfraternity of Our Lady of Compassion goes on steadily in France. The latest evidence of this comes from Marseilles, the bishop of which has recently issued a pastoral letter announcing that he has erected in the Church of the Sainte-Trinite in that town a confraternity of prayer for the conversion of England affiliated to the archconfraternity established at St. Sulpice in Paris by the pope.—London Tablet.

"THE MOUTHFUL OF BREAD"

Charitable Association That Watches Over the Poor of Versailles.

There is a charitable association at Versailles, under the direction of three vice presidents, one of whom is a Catholic priest, another a Jewish rabbi and the third a Protestant minister, and all three agreed in choosing, as secretary of the work, a Freemason. For the past four years these four representatives of different religions have also agreed in doing good and rival each other only in devotion. The work is called "The Mouthful of Bread," a benevolent society, whose object is to give to the unfortunate men, women and children, without distinction of nationality or creed, with the single condition that the beneficiary presents himself in person and eats it on the spot.

Half a pound of bread is distributed every morning and evening to any person who holds out his hand for it. He is never asked whence he comes or why he is obliged to beg his bread. The only reason for making him eat it while he stays is to prevent him from trading it off for a glass of liquor. The association does not confine its activity to the dispensing of bread. Its members watch over their poor and make cautious inquiries about them. If they are men out of work they try to find occupation for them. In winter tea and coffee are sometimes added to the bread. No other eatables are ever distributed, except such as come to the society as a private donation. It is contrary to rule to purchase anything but bread.

As it is, the expense of carrying on the distribution for two hours morning and afternoon is very great. The resources of the society, appealing as it does to all without distinction of creed, are considerable. Every year a fete is organized at the Versailles theater. The Comedie Francaise, and especially the two Mounets, have been very generous.—Sacred Heart Review.

CATHOLICISM IN AMERICA.

Its History Began With the Landing on San Salvador.

The history of Catholicism in our western world began the day when the keel of the Santa Maria of Columbus grated on the beach of San Salvador. As the admiral stepped ashore he intoned the "Gloria In Excelsis Deo." His little party were all Catholics; had held Catholic services every day they were on the trackless deep; had been present at the mass and received communion the day they started; had been gathered together under Catholic auspices, through the assistance of a Catholic monk, by means of the pledged jewels of a Catholic sovereign and through the impelling motive of gaining new souls to Christ in the Catholic church. A monk, a mariner and a mother—these three, symbolic of faith, hope and charity—wrested the unknown land from the bosom of the ocean and opened a new continent where the highest providential designs of God were to be wrought out. The art of printing had been discovered 50 years before, and many other of the great instruments which produced our modern civilization had come into vogue. Martin Luther was then but a little German lad learning the catechism he was later on to repudiate.

When Columbus returned to Europe, he took with him six of the natives. These dusky savages were baptized into the church, Queen Isabella standing as their godmother. These were the first native American Catholics. These six Catholics of 1498 have become the 10,000,000 of 1898.—Frank Leslie's Monthly.

Russia's Greatest Churchman.

Constantine Pobedonostzeff, procurator general of the Church of the Holy Synod of Russia, who was recently decorated by the czar with the order of St. Andrew, is one of the notable figures in Russia. He is not only the head of the Russian church, but he stands very close to the throne and wields vast influence in the councils of state. During the reign of Alexander III he was the intimate friend and adviser of that monarch, and on the czar's death he remained in close touch with the ruling powers. The action of Emperor Nicholas in decorating him and eulogizing his work shows that the great churchman and statesman has lost none of his power.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Pope's Tomb.

Signor Marasi, the celebrated Italian sculptor, who was commissioned by the pope some years ago to execute his tomb, has at length completed his task. The tomb is of flawless white Carrara marble. Surmounting the lid of the tomb is a lion, with its paw resting on the papal tiara, while on the right hand is a statue of Faith, with a torch in one hand and the Bible in the other. On the opposite side is a statue of Truth, bearing the arms of the pope. On the tomb, beneath the lion, is carved the inscription, "Hic Leo XIII, P. M., Prelvis Est."

Back to the Fold.

Ninety and nine are asleep in the fold,
But one little lamb is abroad in the cold—
One little nursling in pitiful plight
Alone in the silence and gloom of the night.

Wandering about on the desolate plain,
Seeking its close sheltered comrades in vain,
What will become of it, tossed by the storm—
The lamb that yestreen was so safe and so warm?

But see! A light glimmers! Oh, joy, it comes near,
And a soft voice is calling—the shepherd is here;
He lifts it and cuddles it close to his breast—
The culprit forgiven, the wanderer at rest.

O, thus, Blessed Saviour, whenever we stray
From sin's darkling paths lead our footsteps away!
Thou dear, watchful Shepherd, whose love is untold,
Oh, welcome us back to the peace of thy fold!

—Sarah Frances Ashburton in Ave Maria.

Provinz Ostpreußen.

Königsberg. Die Prüfung, der man den Königsberger Seekanal in Bezug auf Fahrbarkeit unterzog, ist trotz des heute niedrigen Wasserstandes des Pregels, der den Kanal speist, zur vollsten Zufriedenheit abgelaufen. Der Kanal soll ermöglichen, daß die Dampfer und Segler, die den Seeverkehr vermitteln, direkt bis Königsberg kommen können, um hier zu löschen beziehungsweise zu laden.

Memel. Das Memeler Schiff „Satisfaction," Kapitän Hech, mit Kohlen von Leith hier unterwegs, ist in der Nordsee gesunken. Der Kapitän, seine Frau und neun Mann der Besatzung sind ertrunken, nur ein Junge wurde durch einen Gothenburger Dampfer gerettet.

Provinz Westpreußen.

Elbing. Die Stadtverordneten beschlossen, für 125,000 Mark Aktien der projektirten Kleinbahnen des Landkreises Elbing zu übernehmen.—Bei Adlershorst ist auf der Ostsee während einer stürmischen See ein Fischerboot gekentert. Der Fischer Perleberg ertrank. Sein Stiefsohn wurde gerettet.

Thorn. Wegen Beleidigung des im Juni als Reichstagsabgeordneter gewählten Landgerichtsdirektors Graßmann durch ein von polnischer Seite während der Wahlbewegung verbreitetes Flugblatt wurde von der hiesigen Strafkammer der Redakteur der hiesigen „Gazeta Torunska," Brejski zu 150 Mark, Buchdrucker Buecynski zu 50 Mark Geldstrafe verurtheilt.

Rheinprovinz.

Köln. Im Dorfe Eichholz überfielen mehrere Buben im Hause allein anwesende Frauen, tödteten eine Greisin, verwundeten eine andere Frau schwer durch Revolverschüsse. Auch ein Kind wurde verletzt. Alsdann entflohen die Thäter. Indessen gelang es den Dorfbewohnern, einen der Räuber später festzunehmen.

St. Goar. Der hier verstorbene frühere Landrath unseres Kreises, Geheimrath Mooren, hat seinem Wohlwollen für unsere Stadt dadurch Ausdruck gegeben durch ein Vermächtniß von 13,000 Mark, das er unserem neuen Krankenhause zugewandt hat.

Provinz Sachsen.

Eisleben. Der Mansfeld'schen Gewerkschaft ist bis jetzt durch den Ankauf von Häusern, die durch die bekannten, sich noch immer wiederholenden Erdbewegungen im sogenannten Senkungsgebiet der Stadt beschädigt wurden, wie durch die Ausführung von Reparaturen ein Verlust von über 1,600,000 Mark entstanden. Weitere Entschädigungen werden noch geltend gemacht. Indeß wird nach und nach ja eine Verzinsung dieser Summen erzielt werden, denn die Gewerkschaft hat die von ihr erworbenen Häuser ausbauen lassen, um sie zu vermiethen. An Miethern aber kann es ihr bei dem hier herrschenden Wohnungsmangel nicht fehlen.

Provinz Schlesien.

Striegau. Aus der hiesigen Strafanstalt entsprang der Gastwirth Neumann, der wegen Mordes zu lebenslänglichem Zuchthaus verurtheilt und bereits 14 Jahre verbüßt hat. Der Verbrecher konnte bis jetzt nicht festgenommen werden.

Provinz Schleswig-Holstein.

Kiel. Neuerliche Probefahrten im Nordostseekanal ergaben, daß Torpedobooten eine Höchstgeschwindigkeit von 20 Kilometer während der Durchfahrt durch den Kanal gestattet werden könne, ohne eine Beschädigung der Böschungen herbeizuführen. Diese wesentliche Erhöhung der Fahrgeschwindigkeit ist auf Vorstellung der Marineverwaltung erfolgt.

Lokstedt. Als kürzlich der 20jährige Maurer Biesterfeld beim Ausmauern eines ziemlich tiefen Brunnens thätig war, lösten sich auf bisher unaufgeklärte Weise Sandmassen, die ihn unter einer circa 2½ Meter tiefen Schicht begruben. Obgleich der Rettungswagen der Feuerwehr auf's Schnellste zur Stelle war, gelang es nicht, den Verunglückten zu retten.

Provinz Westfalen.

Münster. Der jüngst hier verstorbene frühere Oberbürgermeister Scheffer-Boichorst hat der Stadt Münster 40,000 Mark vermacht.

Bochum. Der Andrang bei der hiesigen Bergschule, deren Unterhaltung der „Westfälischen Berggewerkschaftskasse" obliegt, ist in diesem Jahre ein äußerst großer. Die aufgenommenen 336 Bergleute, für die der Unterricht kürzlich seinen Anfang nahm, vertheilen sich mit 29 auf die Oberklasse und mit 307 auf die Unterklasse. Von den letzteren konnten vorerst nur 134 Aufnahme finden; die noch verbleibenden 173 können erst nächste Ostern nach Fertigstellung des neuen Bergschulgebäudes berücksichtigt werden.

Read this statemant made by a citizen:

Mr. Wm. Swalm, of 603 W. Front street, says:—"I consider Doan's Kidney Pills an elegant remedy for kidney troubles. I have used them and was greatly benefited. For several years I suffered from a severe pain across my back which annoyed me so much at night that I could not sleep. If I took cold it settled in my back and at such time I could scarcely get about at all. There was also a kidney weakness which was very distressing. I often had to get up at night thus breaking my rest. I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and thought I would try them. My daughter got me a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store and after using them a short time I felt much better in every way. The pain in my back does not bother me now at all and the other difficulty has been relieved. Other members of the family have used them with equally good results. Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement and I will recommend them whenever an opportunity presents itself."

Commissioners of Assessments report for sewerage construction on consideration before the Common Council, Plainfield, N. J.

Notice is hereby given that, at a meeting of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, N. J., held on Monday, the twenty-fourth day of October, there were presented and laid before the Common Council (the same having first been filed in the office of the City Clerk September sixth, 1898,) the report and assessments of the Commissioners of Assessments of said City heretofore appointed under the ordinance entitled, "An Ordinance to provide for the appointment of Commissioners of Assessments under Chapter CXLI P. L. 1895," approved April 26th, 1896, containing the assessments of damages and benefits or expenses, as the case may be, for the making and constructing of sewers and appurtenances (including house connections), under and by virtue of the Act of the Legislature, entitled, "An Act to provide for drainage and sewerage in Cities of this State", approved April 7th, 1890, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto, and ordinances and other proceedings of the Common Council had under said Acts of the Legislature, said report and assessments covering the whole of said system of sewerage and appurtenances already completed, (not covered by assessments heretofore made) and particularly in and through the following described streets and parts of streets, to wit:

Steile avenue, from Plainfield avenue easterly 1148 feet to a point near Central avenue.

Berkeley avenue, from Ravine Road southwesterly 379.7 feet to a point near Belvidere avenue.

Watchung avenue, from East Front street northwesterly 168.6 feet to a point near Greenbrook, including house connections and including appurtenances of said sewerage system in connection therewith: the said streets and parts of streets in which the same were so made and constructed and the location and dimensions of the several lots, tracts and parcels of land and real estate so assessed being delineated on a certain set of maps numbered "1 a" and "2 a", and each map marked "Sewerage Construction Assessment Map dated August 8th, 1898" and attested by the signatures of the said Commissioners and filed in the office of the Collector of Taxes September 6th, 1898.

And it was ordered that said Common Council will proceed to consider, review, alter, ratify and confirm said report and assessments at a meeting to be held in the Common Council Chamber, 109 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield, N. J., on the twenty-first day of November, at 8 o'clock p. m., at which meeting all persons interested in or affected by said assessments, on account of which said assessments were made, will be given ample opportunity to be heard upon the subject of said assessments.

The Character of the work and improvement for which said assessments have been made is shown by the foregoing, and in general is the construction of said sewers and appurtenances (including house connections), and said system of sewerage and appurtenances; and the streets and avenues or particular sections thereof which are included in said assessments are those hereinabove particularly set forth.

Dated, Plainfield, N. J., October 24th, 1898.

Savinien-Cyrano de Bergerac was born in Perigord in the year 1620 and died at Paris from a broken head received in one of his numerous escapades at the early age of 35. In his day he was known as a comic author, an inveterate rhymester and a writer of two plays of sufficient merit to have portions of them appropriated by Moliere. His work, however, was as odd as his character. Even as a child he was vicious and quarrelsome and was famous for his many crazy and audacious deeds. He was charged, among other things, with maiming children in his native village, persecuting any one to whom he took a dislike, and when he migrated to Paris with leading a life of unbridled dissipation. At the capital he attached himself to the turbulent Gascon company of M. Carbon Castel-Jaloux and was no sooner a soldier than he took up squabbling and dueling as a pastime. The demon of desperadoes, he liked nothing better than plunging recklessly into the greatest dangers, and his exploits became the small talk of Paris. He was seriously wounded at the siege of Arras in 1641, left the army and bullied Gassendi into making him, along with Moliere and other scholars of the time, a member of his classes for the study of philosophy.

Out of this scant biographical material Edmond Rostand has created his now justly celebrated play, which has thrilled into enthusiasm not only France, but also England and America.

CHAPTER I.

The waning twilight of Richelieu's day of power found France the mistress of Europe. Austria lay under her thumb, she dominated Catalonia, and her old enemy, England, was in the throes of revolution. National quiescence and prosperity found a diverted expression in the exuberant social life of Paris. In the capital it was a day of drama and duel, of ballad writing, love-making and little intrigues.

Pit and stage alike were dusky that afternoon in 1640 when all Paris gathered in the Hotel de Bourgogne to see produced the play to which Master Balthazar Baro looked for fame—his comedy "Clorise."

The candles were not yet lighted, but the house hummed with sounds. Now an imprecation smote through the buzzing when one of the troopers of the household of his majesty Louis XIII knocked insolently against one of the guard of the great cardinal, Armand de Richelieu. Now there was the clash of foils where two gentlemen passed the tedious time of waiting at fencing. Pages played pranks and pickpockets likewise.

Now a swaggerer seized a kiss from a pretty shopgirl, and now the foaming of wine bespoke a man about to quench his thirst.

Honest burghers made their sober way among the roisterers of the aristocracy and those of the gutters. Sometimes a ripple of laughter floated musically from the galleries where the ladies' boxes were—the ladies whose slumbrous eyes roused love their scornful lips pretended to disdain.

Now a band of young marquises burst through the doors, swords clattering at their sides. They came bent on their favorite sport—the baiting of the burghers. In the semidarkness they could not make out the crowd.

"Ah, Cuigy," cried one when his eyes had swept the dim theater, "what sport is here? Where are the good people we were to rush? Pshaw! Not a toe have we trodden upon. We come in like a band of woolen drapers. Is this your fun?"

"You should have waited at least till the candles were lighted," said Cuigy. "Ah! Here come the lighters now!"

The crowd gathered around the candle bearers. By their light the little group of nobles made one another out. The theater where the king's own players were to perform was plain in the light. Above the tapestried curtains that hid the stage the royal arms were crossed. The hall was a sort of tennis court, arranged and decorated for a theatrical performance.

On both sides of the stage were benches, and steps led from it down to the floor. On either side of these were places for the violinists. In the pit, where the men of the audience gathered, there were no seats, and in the rear of it, beneath the steps that led to the ladies' gallery, was the buffet, where a girl sold cakes, tarts and sweet drinks.

The lights showed two men, both striking and strikingly alike. Ligniere, already half drunk, though the day was young, piloted his friend Christian, the Baron de Nervilette, about the pit, presenting him to one group of nobles after another.

Christian's "delighteds" were perfunctory. His eyes ceaselessly sought the gallery. He was indifferent to the scarcely whispered comments of his new acquaintances. He heard, as from a distance, Ligniere explaining that his friend was but new come to Paris from Touraine and that the next day he was to join the guards as a cadet. He bent his head in acknowledgment of the congratulations, but his eyes were still upturned toward the boxes where the grand dames of Paris gathered to pass their pretty judgment upon Master Baro's work. Ligniere marked his abstraction.

"The lady comes not," he said. "Release me from my guidance. I will betake me to my favorite tavern."

"Stay," begged Christian. "You who know the town can tell me who she is for love of whom I die. You must stay and tell me who she is. Yet what will it boot?" he added gloomily. "I come from Touraine, and the ways of the court sit not easily upon me. I do not know its language. That they speak here today—aye, and write, too—confounds me. I am but an honest soldier—a lubberly one, if you will. What could she see in me?"

He turned gloomily toward the buffet, and when next he looked the empty box toward which his eyes had been directed was no longer empty.

"Look!" cried Christian, seizing Ligniere's arm. "Look! 'Tis she!"

Ligniere glanced toward the box. He did not even cease to sip his rivesalte as he answered.

"Ah! She is Madeline Robin—'Roxane,' they call her. She is a wit—a precieuse. Cyrano de Bergerac is her cousin. She is orphaned. There is the Count de Guiche speaking to her now, the blue ribboned nobleman there. He is enamored of her, though he has wed the cardinal's niece himself. He would marry her to M. De Valgert, a most complaisant viscount, but Roxane will none of that bargain, though De Guiche may persecute her for her obstinacy. See, she looks at you!"

It was true. The precieuse had bent her eyes upon him. He stood transfixed, the gentleman from Touraine. Ligniere, delayed beyond his wont from his favorite tavern, made his escape from the lovelorn youth's side.

The audience was growing impatient. It had been promised a rare treat—rarer than good Master Baro's "Clorise" afforded. Ragueneau, king of pastry cooks, patron of poets and playwrights, had circulated among them, telling them of the bargain of Cyrano de Bergerac.

"He has got a hate of Montfleury," said Ragueneau. "He has forbid the actor to set foot upon the stage again for a month. And today Montfleury is billed to play! Surely there will be rare sport when our Cyrano sees him!"

"Who is this Cyrano," asked Christian, "that he should dictate to the king's players?"

"The choicest of earthly beings," answered Le Bret, who had been pacing up and down the hall in search for him.

"And a poet," said Ragueneau.

"And soldier," said Cuigy.

"And philosopher," said Brissaile.

"And musician," added Le Bret.

"But," said Ligniere, "of how fantastic a presence!"

"Marry," went on Ragueneau affectionately, "'twould puzzle even our grim painter Philippe de Champaigne to portray him! Methinks, so whimsical, wild, comical is he, only Jacques Callot, now dead and gone, had succeeded better and had made of him the most valiant of all his visored crew. And proud—he is prouder than all the fierce Artabans of whom Gascony has ever been the prolific alma mater! And you should see him fence! He is a cadet in the guards, the maddest fighter of them all. You should see him with his triple plumed beaver and his six pointed doublet—his sword point out beneath his coat like a pert cock's tail! He is ruffed, and, ah, you should see his nose above his ruff! The nose of a false face it is. One must believe that he plays a joke and that it will come off. But 'tis his own, and off it will not come. And woe to you, my master, if you dare but stare at it!"

"Ah, well! He will not come today to clear the stage of Montfleury! You'll see," said one.

CHAPTER II.

The young Christian, half divided between the tale of the great Cyrano and watching Roxane, felt suddenly a hand in his pocket. Clasping it, he swung around and faced a pickpocket, but the rogue was clever.

"You sought?" he hazarded.

"A glove," said Christian. He did not add that it was his intention to throw the glove into the face of the complaisant Valvert, designed by De Guiche for Roxane's husband, and, fighting him, perhaps to rid the world of him.

"You find a hand," said the ready scoundrel. "Let me go, and I shall deliver you a secret. Your friend Ligniere there, who has just left you, is being plotted against. His life is in peril. A song written by him has given offense in high places. A hundred men lie in wait for him. He has offended the great nobleman, De Guiche, who married the cardinal's niece. I am one of the hundred, but I have no stomach for the job. Go you and warn him!"

So Christian, easily put off, hastened from the theater and missed, not Master Balthazar Baro's comedy of "Clorise," but the play between Cyrano de Bergerac and Montfleury.

The laughter, talk and tumult keeps up. The pages in the upper gallery fish for the wigs of the burghers in the pit with slings and bent pins. When a wig is drawn up on the end of a string, leaving the embarrassed burgher uncovered, cries of delight resound through the hall.

Montfleury had come upon the stage and had mouthed his opening lines. The nobles whispered one to another, "De Bergerac not here?" Ragueneau, the pastry cook, breathlessly loyal, had wagered a fowl, a La Ragueneau, upon his coming. Suddenly from the center of the pit there came a voice:

"Villain! And did I not forbid you to set foot upon this stage for a month?"

Montfleury broke off in his mouthings. The crowd stood dazed for a second. Then came a shout. The nobles recognized De Bergerac. Montfleury, interrupted, stammered wildly.

"Dare you defy me?" cried the voice.

"On, Montfleury, on!" cried the nobles.

Montfleury stammered another line.

"So you itch for a taste of my cane?" said the voice, and in the pit a hand lifted above the heads of the spectators waved a cane.

"Hap-happy he," began Montfleury, for the third time.

Then Cyrano sprang upon a chair, a terrible figure to see, with his crossed arms, his cocked beaver, his bristling mustache and his great nose.

"Go!" he cried fiercely. "Go!"

"Help, help!" begged the actor.

"Go on, Montfleury," advised the nobles indifferently. "We will protect you."

"Another moment!" cried Cyrano, "and I must even slit his ears off. My anger rises."

He left his chair and stood in the middle of a circle.

"Your protectors," he said politely, "I will meet first—one after the other. Gentlemen, come on! What, none? Ah, then, to you alone I will devote myself. Thrice will I clap my hands, thus. At the third clap get you gone. One!"

Montfleury wavered. "He'll stay!" shouted the crowd.

"Two!"

"Gentlemen," begged Montfleury, "'twere discreet, methinks"—

"Three!"

Amid the jeers and cries of the whole house the enormously fat actor disappears on the instant. Cyrano, center of a circle, bandied jests. Jodelet, the manager, mourned over entrance fees to be returned.

"Here, take that," called Cyrano, and tossed him a bag of gold.

And all the while the eyes of his cousin, the dainty wit Roxane, were bent upon him from her box.

Jodelet weighed in his hand the purse that Cyrano had just thrown to him on the stage and told him that at this price he was welcome to stop a play every night.

The audience rose and prepared to leave the theater. The ladies in the galleries stopped in adjusting their mantles and scarfs to listen to Cyrano, who again had the floor.

"It's shameful! Montfleury is protected by the Duke of Candal. Have you a patron?" demanded a bore of Cyrano.

"No patron or protector," answers Cyrano, grasping his sword, "but I have a protectress here."

"You'll have to leave town. The duke has a long arm."

"Not so long as mine when it's lengthened out," retorted Cyrano, holding out his sword. "Show your heels now or tell me why you stare so at my nose."

"Your grace mistakes," apologized the bore, drawing back.

"Come, now," said Cyrano, "what amuses you? Is it that it's dangling like an elephant's trunk or crooked like an owl's beak? Or is it the fly that takes the air on the tip?"

"I—I—did not look. I was careful—I knew better."

"Then why did you look at my nose, sir? Does it disgust you? Is its hue unwholesome to you or its proportions too large?"

"No, no!" gasped the bore. "It is small, quite minute, in fact. Heaven help me!"

"It's enormous," said Cyrano, "and I am proud to possess it. Every meddler knows that a big nose is indicative of an affable soul." And to illustrate his point he soundly cuffed the bore, and, having taken him by the shoulders, turned him round, that he might administer a parting kick.

The bore ran away, calling to the guards for help, and Cyrano, having convinced the audience that he was a man of his word, warned them that the next who finds amusement in his nose shall have a taste of his sword and not his boot.

Down from the stage came De Guiche, with his friend, the Viscount de Valvert, their swords clattering at their sides and both annoyed at the turn events had taken, disappointed at not having seen the play and jealous perhaps of Cyrano, hero of the evening, who had sprung into sudden popularity with the facetious Parisian audience.

"This fellow becomes a nuisance," said De Guiche, shrugging his shoulders.

"A swaggerer," said De Valvert. "Will no one put him down?"

"I," answered the viscount, "will treat him to one of my quips. See here, sir, your nose is—h'm—very big!"

"Very," answered Cyrano gravely, who was as great a master of his tongue as he was of his sword. "Is that all you can say, young blade? Your repartee is a trifle short. You might have said at least a hundred things. Aggressively you might have said, sir, if I had such a nose I'd amputate it; or it must fill your cup when you drink, you ought to have a drinking trough of special shape; or when you smoke your pipe do not the neighbors cry, 'The chimney's afire!' or pray have an umbrella made that the sun may not destroy its color; or this useful crook is the latest thing to hang your hat on, friend; or, as a rustic, 'tis a dwarf pumpkin or a prize turnip; or behold the nose that wears the harmony of its master's phiz, blushing its treachery!

"Such, my dear sir, is what you might have said if you had wit or letters, but the only letters that you have are three, and they spell ass! Had you the wit to serve me these pleasantries I quote—you would not have been let to quote one—I take them from myself in good part, but not from any other man that breathes."

De Guiche, alarmed at the turn of affairs, tried to draw away the viscount, who, choking with rage, cried out, "A country lout who has no gloves and goes without sleeve knots, ribbons or lace."

"True," said Cyrano snarkily, "I wear no gloves. But what of that? I had one once and, not knowing what to do with it, threw it in the face of a young fool!"

"Base scoundrel! Rascally, flat footed lout!"

Cyrano took off his hat and bowed low, as if the viscount had introduced himself.

"And my name is Cyrano Savinien Hercule de Bergerac."

RARE OFFHAND SPEECHES.

Not so Spontaneous as They Appeared, Even Lincoln's Were Written.

A group of literary men were discussing the other day the rarity of spontaneous eloquence or wit.

"I was at a dinner once in New York," said one, "and was seated next to Major Hay, who, you know, had been Lincoln's secretary. Somebody making a speech exclaimed:

"'In genuine eloquence the words come hot from the heart. No nobler speech was ever uttered in America than Lincoln's address at Gettysburg, and I am assured it was wholly spontaneous. He had not given it a thought before he rose to speak.'

"'While he was delivering it,' said Major Hay to me, aside, 'I had the fifth copy of it in my pocket.'

"I, too, remember a dinner in New York," said another, 'at which all the foremost men in journalism and literature were present. The speech of the evening was made by George W. Curtis. It sparkled with wit and apt allusions to the men present, evidently inspired by the moment. Once he stopped, interrupting himself, and exclaimed:

"'I see my friend, Judge D., looking at me doubtfully, but I must remind him that he, too,'—going on with some brilliant raillery that brought down peals of laughter. As we rose to go out I said to the editor of a Boston paper:

"'Who but Curtis could pour out impromptu wit like that?'

"'Impromptu?' said the newspaper man. 'I had the proofs of all the speeches given to me this afternoon to send to Boston to-night. Let us look at his.' We looked, and there it all was, word for word, even to the 'I see my friend, Judge D. looking at me doubtfully,' etc."

"I knew Artemus Ward," said a third man, "when he was a reporter on a Cleveland paper. One evening in the office he told a story, apparently a mere trifle, the flash of a moment.

"'Browne,' said the chief, 'how can you say such clever things offhand?'

"'Offhand!' muttered Browne. 'I told that to myself fifteen times this afternoon!' Ten years afterward I heard him tell the same story to a brilliant London audience, without the alteration of a comma.

"Even to make a good joke," remarked a listener, "work apparently is needed as well as genius."—Youth's Companion.

THE GREAT STRENGTH OF BEARS.

One Seen to Carry a Heifer, Weighing 200 Pounds, Three Miles.

An old hunter, speaking about bears, declares that grizzlies have strength almost beyond belief, and cites some instances to prove it.

"I have read," he says, "about the powerful muscles in the arms of African gorillas, but none compare with those in the arms and shoulders of big grizzly bears. I have seen a grizzly bear with one forepaw shot into uselessness pull its own eleven hundred pounds of flesh and bone up precipices and perform feats of muscle that trained athletes could not do. I have seen grizzly bears carrying the carcasses of pigs that must have weighed seventy pounds several miles across a mountain side to their lair, and I have heard hunters tell of having seen cows knocked down as if by a thunderbolt with one blow from the forepaw of a bear.

"Three summers ago I spent the season in the coast mountains in Monterey county, and one moonlight night I saw a big grizzly bear in the act of carrying a dead yearling heifer home to her cub. I had a position on the mountain side where I could see every movement of the bear in the sparsely timbered valley below me. The animal carried the heifer in her forepaws for at least three miles, across jagged, sharp rocks ten feet high, over fallen logs, around the rocky mountain sides, where even a donkey could not get a foothold, to a narrow trail up the steep mountain. She never stopped to rest a moment, but went right along. I followed, and just about half a mile from the beast's lair I laid her low. The heifer weighed at least two hundred pounds, and the bear some four hundred and fifty pounds."

FOOTBALL NOTES OF PARTICULAR LOCAL INTEREST.

Gossip and Points About Those Who Seek the Gridiron to Have Their Sport at This Time of the Year

The decision of the management of the Plainfield eleven to hold the Thanksgiving Day game in the morning is very satisfactory to both players and audience. It will not interfere with the Thanksgiving dinners of those who turn out to witness it.

The Plainfield eleven met last evening on the Westervelt avenue grounds. It was the first practice since the election day game, but much interest was manifested and there is every prospect that Plainfield will have a strong team to represent her on Thanksgiving Day.

Saturday afternoon, the crack elevens of Yale and Harvard will meet at New Haven for their annual game. It will be impossible this year to tell which of the great college teams has really won the championship as Harvard and Princeton will not meet. Another year, it is hoped, a triangular league will be formed.

The Plainfield eleven is going to play again on the morning of Thanksgiving Day. The San Remos of the New York Athletic Club will be the visitors and their excellent reputation is to well known here to need repeating. They are as gentlemenly a lot of young men as ever gathered on the gridiron and their actions in Plainfield have always been all that could be desired.

Edgar I. Serrell will play end on the Plainfield eleven Thanksgiving Day. In the Election day game he was held in reserve for use back of the line to take the place of any of the backs should they be injured. He is too valuable to be left out of the game, however, and he will now be played at end, for there will be material enough to substitute behind the line should any of the regular men meet with accidents.

The Plainfield team will be much strengthened in its next game by the return of Louis Waring. There is something in the personality of that young man that seems to infuse new life in the team whenever he makes his appearance. He was away on a business trip Election Day and so could not play, but he will be here Thanksgiving and probably play quarter. If not there he will be found at end and Hallock will be moved in to tackle.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

F. O. Ball, captain of the Park Club bowling team, is trying to arrange a game with the N. J. A. C. to be rolled some time in December. This game will take the place of the game which was to have been rolled Monday night.

"Doc" Charles R. Thiers will wind up for the Park Club team this year as formerly. He is too valuable a man to be lost. At first, he thought that he had better give up the game this season but much pressure was brought to bear and he will be out at the first match in his accustomed form.

The bowling season will open at the Catholic Club by a match game tonight between the regular club team and the Bound Brook Bowling Club. The Catholic Club team is composed of Messrs. Moran, Carty, Shannon, McInery and Higgins. The team has been practicing for some time and expect to be in tip-top shape.

There is a marked increase in the activity on the Park Club alleys these days and all the members are trying their hand at the game. Of the youngsters, William J. Roome, Jr., has made the most rapid strides to the front. It is probable that he will be tried on the league team of the club and if he can show the same form there that he does in practice games, he will remain there as a permanent feature.

F. O. Ball will captain the bowling team of the Park Club again this season. His success last year was very satisfactory and his interest in the game keeps him up to the top notch. It has always been the fault of the Park Club that the bowlers lost interest toward the end of the season and became easy prey for the other teams, thus loosing all chances of being at the top of the heap. This year, Captain Ball is going to make extra efforts to keep up the interest and carry the team on to victory.

GOLF.

A large number of golf enthusiasts visited the links of the Park Golf Club yesterday and went over the course for practice.

There will be open handicap play for members on the links of the Park Golf Club Thanksgiving Day. A tea will be served in the afternoon.

A handicap tournament, open to members, will be played on the Park Golf Club links Thanksgiving Day. A prize for gentleman, also one for ladies, will be awarded for the best scores. Rules and conditions governinfl the tournament will be posted at the club house. All wishing to enter must send their names and best scores for 9 holes to the secretay on or before Monday, November 21st, 1898. Meredith Dryden, Secretary.

ROD AND GUN.

Harry Snyder and Richard Scott, of this city, have returned from a successful hunting trip.

Samuel Goff, Fred Willibald and Ben. Potts, of this city, have returned from a hunting trip. They captured eight rabbits, one woodcock and a pair of quail. Fred Willibald had the distinction of killing a cat with the load in one barrel of his gun and a rabbit with the load in the other. The cat was in the brush chasing the rabbit.

The Park Club Whist team will play a game with the Elizabeth Chess and Whist Club team in this city Wednesday evening, Nov. 23d, and Dec. 7th the New Jersey Athletic Club team will come to Plainfield and play a match game with the Parks.

BICYCLIST TO BLAME.

By His Reckless Riding He May Make a Girl a Cripple for Life

The young daughter of Warren C. Squier, of 38 Clinton avenue, is now confined to her home with severe injuries which may possibly result in her being a cripple for life. The girl was walking along Clinton avenue Tuesday morning when a young man named Kelly, who resides on West Third street, came up behind her on his wheel and ran into her. The cyclist was on the sidewalk, where he had no business to ride, and knocked the girl down.

She was assisted to her home not far away and Dr. Long was called. He examined the girl and found that in addition to several bruises she had a very bad sprain of the left knee and joint. The latter injury is the most serious and may cause trouble for life. The outcome of the case will be watched with much interest.

BAD LITTLE BOYS.

They Admitted Taking Shoes From Morris Abrams' Stand.

Edward and Willie Howe, and Augustus Nier, of the borough, who were arrested yesterday on complaint of Morris Abrms, the shoe dealer, who charged them with stealing a pair of shoes from his stand Monday night, were arraigned before Justice Nash this morning.

When first accused of the act all three lads denied it, but when they were taken before the justice they admitted taking the shoes. As they were so small, being from ten to twelve years of age, they were given a severe reprimand and allowed to go.

Attempted Burglary.

An attempt was made to burglarize the home of Henry Windham, of Somerset place, Tuesday night, but was baffled by a dog belonging to Marshal Campbell who lives next door. The man ran away when the dog began to bark, and Mrs. Campbell saw him as he vaulted over the piazza rail. The piazza had been freshly printed and the footprints and marks of his hands were visible.

BUY ALL THE MEDICINES.

People Who Like to Try Everything That Comes Along.

"You have heard of opium fiends, and all the other so-called fiends who buy narcotics or poisons and dose themselves with them," said the druggist, "but did you ever know that there was a class of all around drug fiends?"

"I mean," continued the druggist, "the persons who make a habit of sampling all the new patent medicines as they come on the market, and also think up combinations of their own. Every long established druggist has a score of such customers. It is like this. A man will come in, take a stroll around the store, looking at the sponges and tooth brushes in a vacant way, and then say, as if the thought had just occured to him: 'Say, I hear there's a new remedy for the liver. I've forgot the name—begins with a B.' I get down the bottle. He asks me if it is any good. I reply that it has a great many testimonials and he walks off with it. The next week he comes in and buys a bottle of something for the kidneys, and the next week a sovereign remedy for consumption.

"Now this man is only one in twenty or more, and some of them bring in the most remarkable home made prescriptions—the Lord knows where they get them—and I fill them, although I can't imagine what ailment they can be good for. Do I ever remonstrate with these fiends? Not now; I used to talk to them mildly in my early days, but I only sent them to another store, so I quit. No: I don't think it does them any particular harm. Like that ancient king who fed on poisons until he got immune, these fiends are impervious to drugs, and the only danger in the practice is that they may some day become really ill, and then ordinary remedies will have no effect on them. If the physician they call in has no knowledge of their habit his prescriptions will have no more effect than so much water."—Chicago Herald.

FIDDLED HIS WAY TO VICTORY.

How the Candidate Got on the Good Side of the Voters.

"The last time I was nominated I was with the minority party, and had little hope of election. The highest flight of my ambition was to make a good showing. In the river district along the docks there was a dense population, and as the voters there went, so went the district. I was told there was no chance of making any inroads there, but I wanted to satisfy myself by personal inquiry. I happened there on the night of a little dance at the house of a rough but influential giant among the river men, and dropped in to have a talk with some of those present. My opponent had been invited, but sent his regrets. My reception was a chilling one, and I was figuring on getting away as gracefully as possible when it was discovered that the fiddler was prematurely under the influence of refreshments and could not play. A canvass of the invited guests showed that no one could supply the vital accomplishment to the festivities, and the entertainment began to assume the appearance of a dismal failure.

"'Perhaps I can help you out, gentlemen,' I volunteered with inward tremblings, for I had not touched a fiddle since I used to saw away in the kitchen at the old farm home.

"In no time they had me on the top of a barrel, fiddle, bow and resin in my hands. Their enthusiasm was an inspiration, for it meant votes. Merrily and vigorously I rendered such classics as 'Money Musk,' 'We Kept the Pig in the Parlor,' and 'O'Reilly's Reel' while the dancers shook the house and shouted approval. 'More power to his elbow,' and 'It's him as will be the nixt jidge' was the music that I heard on every hand till I gave the 'Home, Sweet Home' at 4 o'clock in the morning. I went in with a whoop and have been going in ever since."—Detroit Free Press.

A "HARVEST HOME" FOR THE HOSPITAL.

Gigantic Donation Party Bringing All Kinds of Articles.

LADIES WERE IN CHARGE.

TEA WAS SERVED AND PLEASANT SOCIAL CHATS ENJOYED.

Notwithstanding the Disagreeable Weather There Was a Large Attendance—A Large Amount of Fruit and Vegetables Were Sent, Besides Much Needlework — Everyone's Services Given.

Yesterday afternoon was the time set for holding the harvest home at the Muhlenberg Hospital, and in spite of the rain and disagreeable weather, the affair was more of a success than the ladies had anticipated. The harvest home was nothing more than a gigantic domestic party, at which tea was served, and a good social time enjoyed. As for the donations, they found places in the cellar, in the hallway and all over the building, and were so plentiful that it will take some time to distribute them fully.

The harvest home was held in the nurses' home, which was prettily decorated with autumn products of the fields and gardens. In one room a daity tea table was presided over by the ladies, who served tea, cake and crackers with generous hospitality.

The Woman's Auxiliary Board had charge of the harvest home, and the officers, Mrs. Daniel T. VanBuren, president; Miss Elizabeth Cock, Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mrs. George M. Randall, Miss Emilie Schipper, Miss Henrietta Haviland, Mrs. William E. Lowe and Miss Mary Eleanor Tweedy, received the people as they came and tried to personally thank each one for what they brought.

Everybody was supposed to bring a donation of some kind with them, either in the shape of vegetables, fruit, canned goods, provisions, jelly, clothing or money, and as they were brought in the officers of the auxiliary, assisted by the associate members, all of whom were distinguished by the absence of their hats and a large white badge, bearing on it a red cross conspicuously displayed, disposed of them in their proper places.

Ever since early yesterday morning until late at night the expressmen of the city, all of whom gave their services gratuitously, were busy carting goods from this part of the city and the other to the hospital. By 7 o'clock, when the harvest home was over, the cellar was a mass of barrels, boxes and baskets, containing apples, potatoes, sugar, flour, pumpkins, squashes and everything in that line. One room upstairs contained 175 articles of underclothing, linen, towels, etc., given by the members of the City Needle Work Guild.

In another room was a great pile of jellies and canned goods, 200 glasses of which had been given by small children through Mrs. O. T. Waring, who canvassed for it.

The committee in charge of the harvest home consisted of Mrs. D. T. VanBuren, chairman; Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke, chairman of the committee on decorations and private schools; Mrs Guion, chairman of the committee to solicit from the churches; Mrs. E. Johnson, public schools, and Mrs. E. T. Barrows and Mrs. W. A. Pinto on the tea table and the refreshments.

The supper rooms were thrown open to inspection, and many of the visitors availed themselves of this chance to inspect for the first time the snug apartments of the nurses. Several members of the board of governors were present, as were also Drs. Hedges and Murray. The harvest home proved such a success that it is the intention of the ladies to repeat it annually hereafter.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office last week: Catherine A. Kenney and husband to Mary R. Loomis, North Plainfield, $1; Mary R. Loomis to David D. Kenney, North Plainfield, $1; Harriet Stafford to Thomas H Stafford, North Plainfield, $; Isaac J. Stites et ux to Saron D. Stites, North Plainfield, $1,600.

Secretary McCall to Lead.

Donald McCall, State secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will lead the 4:15 meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday. Mr. McCall, when in this city a month ago, was well received. During the anniversary exercises he spoke in two churches and addressed a Gospel meeting. Miss Louella C. Harris, of the First Baptist church choir, will sing, and there will also be the male choir.

DROVE THREE ABREAST.

CITY JUDGE DEMEZA SAID THAT WASN'T RIGHT.

So He Found Wm. Baldwin, N. B. Smalley and C. V. D. Corle Guilty of Reckless Driving—Policemen Made the Complaint.

After various delays three prominent horsemen of this city were arraigned this morning before City Judge Demeza for trial on the charge of fast and reckless driving. They were William Baldwin, Newton B. Smalley and C. V. D. Corle.

The circumstances that led to their arrest occurred October 28th. Chief Grant and Roundsman Flynn were out on their wheels looking over the city. They were riding townward on Park avenue and had just passed the Cedar brook bridge when they met the three horsemen approaching. According to the statements of the officers they were driving three abreast and at a three-minute clip. The Chief and his companion hailed them and notified them to appear before the City Judge.

This morning they appeared and protested to the Judge that they were driving at an ordinary gait and were not racing. The Judge held that they should not have been driving three abreast, as they admitted they were, even if they were not speeding their horses. He decided that they were guilty of reckless driving, and reserved his sentence until a week from tomorrow morning.

ELEVEN LABORERS KILLED.

Run Down By a Train on the Hackensack Meadows.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

New York, Nov. 18—Eleven men were killed, two probably fatally injured, and four seriously hurt, by being run down by the Millstone local train of the Pennsylvania Road, on the Hackensack Meadows, just west of the Hackensack river, at 8:15 o'clock this morning.

The men were laborers at work repairing the railroad tracks on the outskirts of the town of Harrison. William Quirk, of 182 Steuben street, Jersey City, the foreman in charge of the men, escaped injury, but nearly everybody was either killed outright or injured.

FOURTH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland Celebrate an Auspicious Event.

The fourth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland, of West Front street, was celebrated last evening in a pleasant manner, and in a way that was a surprise to the celebrants. About 8 o'clock, twenty-two intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Hoagland called at their home and found them in an unexpected mood. They were wholly unaware of the intended invasion, but in their usual happy manner, they cordially received their guests and made them feel at home.

The evening was marked with many pleasant features, and the guests participated in many amusements to pass the time enjoyably. There was vocal and instrumental music, games, etc., and at a late hour a bountiful supper was served by the host and hostess. Everyone present wished the host and hostess many happy returns of the day, and when the guests departed for home they all agreed that the evening had been pleasantly and profitably spent.

Mr. Serrell Denies.

To the Editor of The Daily Press.—I wish to deny the exclusive news published in your columns last night, attributed to me, that the Plainfield Street Railway Company would apply once more for a franchise to Scotch Plains, if they could get the Board of Trade to back them up. Such is not the case, and I wish when you take the trouble to attribute any statements to me hereafter you would first ask my permission and verification of such news as you propose to publish. L. Wm. Serrell.

[The authority for the statement made in The Daily Press yesterday, in which Mr. Serrell's name was used, was Harry C. Runyon, secretary of the Board of Trade.—EDITOR.]

Entertained at Whist.

The Thursday Night Whist Club was entertained Wednesday night by Miss Mabelle Force, of Watchung avenue, and the entire membership was present. The first prize for the women was won by Miss May MacLoughlin. Miss Charlotte Messersmith and Miss Force also won prizes, and the men's prize was won by Edward Clark. After the play the members indulged in dancing, after which refreshments were served by the hostess.

POLITICAL.

ROCKFELLOW STILL REPUBLICAN CHOICE.

Most Prominent Candidate for Mayoralty Nomination.

WAS MAYOR ONCE BEFORE.

ELECTED SUCCESSIVELY ON DEMOCRATIC AND REPUBLICAN TICKETS.

It is Understood That he Will Accept the Nomination if Tendered to Him—Is Not Gunning for it, However—Marion S. Ackerman Out of it—Councilman Buckle Proposed by His Friends.

Who is going to be Plainfield's next mayor? It is an interesting subject but no one knows the answer as yet. It is not quite as difficult to name the Republican candidate for that office. It is too early in the campaign to make any definite predictions but, from present appearances, the choice of the G. O. P. will probably devolve on George W. Rockfellow. The Daily Press was the first to note his growing popularity for the office and to point him out as a likely candidate. While Mr. Rockfellow is in no sense gunning after the nomination, it is understood by those in power that he will not refuse the nomination if tendered to him. Of that fact, they are quite certain.

Mr. Rockfellow has had experience in that line having been chief executive for two terms. In the early '80's he was elected at the head of the Democratic ticket. His affiliations changed, however, and the next term he ran successfully for Mayor on the Republican ticket. He is in no sense a politician, but has devoted his time to his business and built up a large trade for his grocery at the corner of Park avenue and West Fourth street. A few years ago, he was made a member of the Plainfield Board of Health and was elected president of it. Not believing in all the methods pursued he resigned and has since had nothing to do with city affairs.

Other men have been mentioned for the mayoralty nomination on the Republican side, but none of the booms have shown much strength as yet.

Marion S. Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, was mentioned for the place but he utterly declined to allow his friends to do anything in his behalf, saying that he would not take it under any circumstances. Councilman J. F. Buckle, of Westervelt avenue, has also been spoken of. Mr. Buckle is not after it and it is doubtful whether his business duties would allow him to take it. He has the advantages of being a local business man who is quite popular with all. Last year he was the only Republican Councilman-at-large elected on the ticket against the Citizens' candidate.

THE DEVIL'S TOOLS.

Commences With a Cigarette and Ends With a Bottle of Rum.

"The Devil in the Box," was the unique subject of the meeting in Reform Hall last night. J. H. Sayers was the speaker, and illustrated his talk with different articles which he drew out of the box, and made his address and object lesson.

The first thing was a paper cigarette, which, Mr Sayers said, was the devil's first tool. Then came a clay pipe, a yellow-covered border novel, a pack of cards and what usually accompanies it, so Mr Sayers said, sweet cider, the "Devil's kindling wood." Last of all came a bottle of whiskey, and in this way the speaker illustrated a young man's downfall, beginning with the cigarette and ending a confirmed sot.

A Missionary Circle.

A meeting was held at Monroe Avenue church Wednesday evening for the purpose of organizing a missionary circle. Several addresses were made by people interested in missionary work, and the probability is that a circle will be organized at an early date.

Taxes Not all Paid.

The item that appeared in the News regarding the delinquent taxes of the borough is wholly unture. All of the 1897 taxes are now due and are unpaid and it is the desire of the Mayor and Council that they be paid as quickly as possible.

To Attend Divine Services.

The members of Somerset Council, No. 104, and Franklin Council, No. 31, Jr. O. U. A M., will attend divine services in the First M. E. church next Sunday evening, and listen to a sermon by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass.

DEMOCRATS WILL NOT ASSERT THEMSELVES.

Deemed "Unwise" to Have a Straight Party Ticket.

THINK THEY ARE TOO WEAK.

DECISION ONLY ARRIVED AT AFTER LIVELY DISCUSSION.

Resolutions Introduced Urging a Party Ticket, But it was Defeated by a Large Delegation of Citizens' Movement Men—Councilman Hetfield Spokesman for the Citizens' Party People of Plainfield.

The meeting of the Democratic Association in Councilman Moffet's office on North avenue last night was largely attended and typically Democratic in that everyone had his say concerning a straight party ticket, though the result was slightly incongruous in the fact that the Citizens' movement was tacitly endorsed by the decision that it was deemed unwise at this time to put up a straight party ticket

The meeting was called to order by President John H. Hillman, and the routine association business quickly dispensed with. Under the head of new business, W. W. St. John presented the following resolution:

"Resolved, That it is the duty of the Democratic party to lead in the movement for an honest and fair administration of city government and we deem it wise and proper that complete ward and city nominations for the various officers to be elected at the approaching election be made by the Democratic voters of Plainfield, and to that end we urge that the proper authorities issue a call for the holding of ward primaries and the city convention as soon as a favorable date is settled upon."

After the resolutions had been read and seconded, James E. Martine arose and supported them in an enthusiastic speech. Mr. Martine referred to the fact that the Democratic party was the party of the people, and that as the present city government had become distasteful to the people it was the duty of the Democrats to carry the fight successfully against the Republicans. This Mr. Martine thought was possible in view of the fact that a thorough organization had been undertaken and was willing and ready to go into the campaign it would be highly inconsistent for the party to lose their identity and leave the members to affiliate with a movement that had started with a lot of disgrunted Republicans who were unable to get satisfaction from their political associates, but instead were now trying to use the Democrats as catspaws to accomplish their purposes. If the Citizens' win this year, Mr. Martine said, the Republicans who were now pleading for non-partisanship would, when once elected to office, if they should be so fortunate, become the bitter partisians and the Democrats would find little consolation in such an outcome. Mr Martine said that he was emphatically in favor of a straight Democratic ticket.

F. M. Bacon spoke a few words against the straight Democratic ticket, and then Councilman W. L. Hetfield, as the principal spokesman for the faction that opposed a Democratic ticket, spoke at some length concerning the local situation as he viewed it. He did not think think the Democrats could win alone, and he considered thet the Republicans who were in the Citizens' movement were the best element of the party and would act in a perfectly fair and honest spirit with the Democrats. He believed that a Citizens' ticket would sweep the city on election day.

After remarks had been made by a number of others for and against the resolutions, Mr. Hetfield moved as an amendment that the resolutions be made to read that "we deem it unwise at this time to nominate complete ward and city nominations." More discussion of a lively kind ensued on the amendment, and when the question was called W. W. St. John moved that a recess of five minutes be taken for the enrollment of names as members of the Association, and that none but members be allowed to vote. This was declared out of order, and then Mr. St. John moved that the vote be taken by ballot, and when this was also defeated he moved that the roll of members be called on the vote.

Inasmuch as a majority of the Citi-

CITIZENS' WILL GO STRAIGHT AHEAD NOW.

DEPEND ON DEMOCRATS.

ADMITTED THAT DEMOCRATS HELD THE KEY TO SUCCESS.

And Now That the Democrats Have Decided to Lose Their Identity and Go in and Help the Dissatisfied Republicans the Citizens' Movement is Expected to Accomplish Wonders.

The dissatisfied ones in the Second ward fell into line last evening. They decided to give their support to a Citizens' ticket provided the Democrats agreed not to place a straight ticket in the field. The Democrats complied and the action of those who gathered last evening will be ratified by a much larger meeting this evening.

The meeting in the Second ward was held at the Bird mill and was attended by nearly a score of well known business men and property owners of the ward together with some of the prominent workers in the Citizens' movement from other parts of the city. It was entirely informal and no organization was made. The general sentiment was against the present administration and a wish that it might be defeated at the primaries or at the polls.

It was believed that a citizens' ticket would run well in the ward, provided that there was no Democratic split in the movement. All seemed confident of winning by uniting all the opposition against the G. O. P. It was decided to wait the result of the meeting of the Democrats and if they decided to join the Citizens' movement, to hold another meeting at the Bird mill this evening when the regular Citizens' organization will be completed and a committee of ten appointed to confer with the similar committees from other wards. As the Democrats withdrew from the fight as a party, the meeting will be held tonight.

REMEMBER THE POOR.

Relief Association's Annual Appeal for Thanksgiving Dinners.

The Relief Association makes its annual appeal to the people of Plainfield for Thanksgiving dinners to be given to its beneficiaries. Contributions of money, poultry, vegetables and groceries, will be most gratefully received. In the way of poultry, small turkeys and chickens are most acceptable.

To avoid duplication it is earnestly requested that the churches and King's Daughters circles send their lists of beneficiaries to Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, 544 West Front street. These names will be held in confidence. If the donations can be sent to the rooms, 544 West Front street, Tuesday, so far as possible, or early Wednesday morning, it will be greatly appreciated by the association.

Marion S. Dumont,
Secretary.

Mr. Grigg's Kind Offer.

Many will be pleased to learn that William T. Grigg, who for a number of years has so ably managed and illustrated the lectures of Garret P. Serviss, has kindly offered his services to the McCall Auxiliary, and will take charge of the pictorial part of the lecture to be delivered by Mrs. Mitchell Tyng, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church tomorrow evening. Mrs. Tyng is an accomplished speaker, and will tell of the work among the porcelain workers of of Leinoges, in St. Etienne.

To Facilitate Work.

The United States Express Company are about to put a speaking tube from their office to the platform outside. This will put the office in direct communication with what is going on outside. The men on the platform can "call off" without coming inside, and when some one on the platform is wanted inside the office, he can be made acquainted with that fact much more easily then than now.

Broke Arm and Leg.

James Brown, of Glen Gardiner, was brought to Plainfield on the 2:07 train this afternoon. Wednesday he fell from a door and broke his left arm and leg. The accident occurred at the steel works at High Bridge. He was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital in the ambulance.

The Watchung Euchre Club will meet tomorrow evening and be entertained by once of its members.

MAY ABOLISH HANGING.

SOCIETY OF FRIENDS PREPARES MEMORIAL FOR LEGISLATURE.

The Shrewsbury and Plainfield Half-Yearly Meeting Held at Watchung Avenue Meeting House Yesterday—Last Attendance.

The Shrewsbury and Plainfield half-yearly meeting of the Society of Friends opened in the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue Wednesday afternoon and closed this morning. Some eighty-five members of the local Friends were present with a dozen visitors. Most prominent were the members of the visiting committee of the New York yearly meeting. Two members of the meeting in California, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Bariglit, were present. Joel Borton, of Woodstown, N. J., was the prominent visiting minister.

The meeting began Wednesday afternoon with a gathering of the ministers and deacons at the meeting house for a brief service. In the evening a youth's meeting was held. It was of a religious character.

Yesterday morning a service for worship began at 11 o'clock and continued until after 12 o'clock. Then followed the business session of the meeting. The meeting was under the direction of the clerk, J. Edward Borden, of Eatontown, this State. The clerk, Mr Borden, and the assistant clerk, Margaret F. Vail, were reappointed to their respective offices.

A memorial was prepared by several of the members and presented to the business session. It was decided to bring it before the State Legislature. It asked for the abolition of the death penalty. A greeting was also extended to the general conference of the Young Friends' Association at Westchester, the 19th. At the close of the business meeting luncheon was served to the members on the upper floor of the meeting house. A committee of the local Friends, composed of Marietta V. Adams, Clara S. Rushmore, Catherine R. Webster, Ephraim M. Vail, Adelbert Vail, Edith G. Vail and others, was in charge.

At the meeting in the afternoon, reports were heard from the Friends' conferences held during the past summer at Richmond, Indiana. The work of the philanthropic conference was especially noticed in the reports. The principal speakers were Mr. and Mrs. William M. Jackson, of New York and Phoebe C. Wright, of Manasquan. The meeting was held under the direction of the Philanthropic committee of which Margaret F. Vail is the clerk.

The evening session was in the interest of the work done in the colored schools in South Carolina. The methods of work and something of what has been accomplished in the education of the colored children was interestingly told by Anna M. Jackson, of New York. Her remarks were illustrated with views from a stereopticon.

The half-yearly meeting closed this morning with a service for worship which began at 11 o'clock. The attendance at the meetings was very good.

DEATH OF MRS. CRITTENDEN.

Occurred Last Evening After an Illness of Two Months.

The death of Mrs. Eliza A. Crittenden, of No. 90 Grove street, mother of Mrs. John H. Carman, of Watchung avenue, occurred last evening after an illness lasting about two months. She was the widow of the late Joseph H. Crittenden, who was a very prominent leather merchant in Cleveland, O., for nearly forty years. Mrs. Crittenden was a native of New York State. She moved to Plainfield five years ago, where she resided until her death. She was a member of the Crescent Avenue church of this city, and while her health would not permit her being actively engaged in Christian work, she gave largely of her means. She leaves three daughters, Mrs. J. H. Carman, Mrs. Palmer, of this city, and Miss Minnie Crittenden. The funeral services will be held from the late home, No. 90 Grove street, Sunday afternoon next at 2:30 o'clock.

Divorce Proceedings.

Divorce proceedings have been started by Mrs. Lizzie Wilson, of Plainfield avenue, against her husband, John Wilson, of Raritan, on the ground of desertion. They were married in November 1894, at Perth Amboy. In July, 1895, Mrs. Wilson claims her husband left her and has not since contributed toward her support. The papers were filed at Trenton this morning by Judge DeMeza, lawer for the petitioner.

BEST METHODS FOR SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

Annual Institute of the Primary Teachers' Union.

MANY VISITING WORKERS.

PAPER READ BY A WORKER IN JOHN WANAMAKER'S SCHOOL.

An Afternoon and Evening Session—Greetings Received From the State and County Unions—Miss Harlow's Address was Full of Original and Practical Ideas and Very Entertaining.

The annual institute and third anniversary of the Plainfield Primary Sunday-school Teachers' Union, was held yesterday afternoon and evening in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, and was very largely attended by members of the union and teachers from many neighboring places, including Westfield, Elizabeth, Somerville, Cranford and Scotch Plains.

The services were opened at 3 o'clock in the afternoon with a song and praise service under the direction of Mrs. Powlison, of the Plainfield union. This was followed with greetings from the unions, city, county and State. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, spoke for the city, and his remarks were full of good cheer and help. The county was represented by Rev. J. S. Braker, of Scotch Plains, president of the Union County Sunday-school Association, and he brought good tidings from all parts of the county. He told of how favorably the work of the Sunday-school was progressing and he bid all God speed. The last greeting was from Rev. E. M. Fergusson, of Trenton, General Secretary of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association. His remarks were along the line of work being accomplished in all parts of the State, and from what he said every Sunday-school worker has reason to feel encouraged.

Miss Nettie Beeching, president of the local union, was in charge of the services, and at this time she introduced Miss Anna S. Harlow, superintendent of the primary department of Bethany Sunday-school, of Philadelphia. Miss Harlow taught the lesson for next Sunday which is "Manasseh's Sin and Repentance." Miss Harlow is an exceedingly interesting and talented speaker, and she held the closest attention of all during her talk. She made use of practical illustrations, and this interested the large number of boys and girls present.

Following the lesson a highly interesting paper was read by Mrs. F. R. Baker, of the local union. The paper was prepared by Miss Himes, and the subject was "Child Study." It was brimful of practical suggestions, and proved very helpful to every teacher present. The afternoon session was closed with prayer, after which supper was served in the rooms connecting with the lecture room. The members of the local union were in charge and bountifully provided for all.

In the evening following the devotional exercises, the large audience had the pleasure of listening to "Echoes from the Summer School," by Wm. D. Murray. This talk was thoroughly enjoyable and proved interesting as well as helpful This part of the programme was followed with a solo by Miss Nancy Randolph, after which an intensely interesting address was delivered by Miss Harlow, of Philadelphia, on the subject "As Iron Sharpeneth Iron." The address was a unique one from the fact that so many new and original ideas were presented for consideration. The power of Sunday-school teaching and work was shown in a forcible manner, and every word was listened to with the deepest interest. Following this address the benediction was pronounced and a short time was passed socially by those present.

Donation Party for Pastor.

A pleasant surprise party, in the shape of a donation, was tendered to Rev. James E. Groves, of Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, last night. The pastor was invited by one of his church people to accompany him to another member's house to spend the evening. Instead he was taken to the church, where the members awaited him. The donations were large, and will keep the pastor without want for several months. Refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed.

Inspected a G. A. R. Post.

Last evening Department Commander Wm. C Smith and staff, together with a large delegation from Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., went to Somerville to attend Wadsworth Post. The occasion was the annual inspection by the Department officers.

AGAINST ARBITRATION

No Such Idea Will Be Allowed at Washington.

SPAIN MUST ACCEPT TERMS

Washington Authorities Are Confident as to the Outcome at Paris. Spain Looks for Arbitration to Decide Whether the Disposition of the Philippines is Within the Scope of the Present Commission.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—While the administration authorities plainly state that they have received no official advices from Paris since the Spanish answer was submitted Wednesday, they express the utmost satisfaction, which apparently amounts to confidence, over the outcome.

They will not admit that any unofficial advices giving the purport of the Spanish communication, have been received, but apparently some intimation, to put it mildly, has been conveyed to the administration that the Spaniards realize that they cannot resist the demands of the United States and are preparing to submit.

They do not express surprise that such a proposal has been submitted, and it is plain from the guarded remarks made that such a contingency had already been considered and a decision reached as to the course to be pursued by the United States should the Spaniards refuse to do so.

It may be accepted as final that this government will adhere strictly to the demands made known to the Spanish commissioners when the discussion of the Philippine question was reached in the negotiations.

Spain must agree to relinquish claim to sovereignty in the entire archipelago, and then the United States government will agree to discuss the amount of money to be paid to Spain to indemnify her for permanent "pacific" improvements in the islands.

Beyond that the United States will make no concession.

It is a case of Spanish acquiescence in the American conditions or a resumption of hostilities.

So earnest are the president and his cabinet in the demand, that the instructions to the American commissioners concerning the Philippines have been emphasized in several dispatches sent to Mr. Day last week and this week.

A high officer of the government said recently, when it was suggested to him that Spain might offer to arbitrate:

"You may make it as emphatic as you please that under no circumstances will the United States agree to submit to the arbitration of any outside power or person the question involved in the American demands to the Spaniards."

No surprise is expressed in official circles that the American commissioners have not informed this government of the contents of the Spanish note.

It is a long document, and the time consumed in its translation from Spanish into English and then into the state department cipher, and its transmission over the wires to Washington could very well extend over the twenty-four hours that have elapsed since its presentation to the American commissioners.

Spain's Latest Demand.

Madrid, Nov. 18.—The decision of the Spanish peace commissioners to demand the arbitration of the matter of the sovereignty of the Philippines is announced here.

The Spanish peace commissioners at Wednesday's joint session of the commission, submitted a long reply to the demands of the United States respecting the Philippines.

Incidentally the Spaniards reiterated their refusal to consider the American demand for the cession of the archipelago.

But the important part of the Spanish document is a proposal to submit to arbitration the point whether or not the question of the sovereignty of the Philippines is within the scope of the decision of the present commission at Paris.

The Spaniards, in the document, assert that although the Spanish and American constructions of the scope of the protocol are so divergent that an agreement is practically impossible, Spain earnestly desires to avoid a rupture of the negotiations.

The Spanish government fully recognizes that the United States is urging its present demands in perfect good faith, and in the full belief that it had reserved the right to make them in drawing the terms of the protocol.

Spain was also sincere in her confidence when she signed the protocol that the sovereignty of her Philippines was not imperilled thereby.

The point of difference is honest and vital. It is also irreconcilable as between the opposing sides.

The situation calls, say the Spaniards in their reply, for the submission of the dispute to some impartial mind whose decision shall be binding.

Spain therefore proposes that the protocol and the preliminary correspondence and circumstances be placed before some mutually agreed neutral person, who shall decide whether the question of the sovereignty of the Philippines is within the scope of the decision of the present commission or not.

Madrid, Nov. 18.—Almost all the papers deprecate the dilatory proceedings at Paris, expressing their belief that the United States will decline arbitration, and urging the government to yield quickly, since it is impossible for Spain to renew the struggle or to expect European assistance, and furthermore, because it would be better to cease wasting money and to concentrate attention on Spain's domestic affairs, and the restoration of her finances.

A Chinese Town Looted.

Shanghai, Nov. 18.—The rebels have attacked and looted the town of Kwei-Fu, in the Upper Yang-Tse-Kiang valley, and have burned the Catholic mission there.

INSURGENTS SURROUND ILOILO.

Situation in the Visayas Islands is Considered Critical.

Manila, Nov. 18.—The United States cruiser Charleston and the gunboat Concord have returned here from Iloilo. They report the situation of the Spanish there as critical in the extreme.

The insurgents are attacking Molo and Jaro, large villages adjacent to Iloilo, where are located the Spanish outworks for the defence of the capital.

The insurgents completely surround Iloilo, stopping all traffic with the interior of the island of Panay.

The negroes have risen and the revolution is gaining strength daily throughout the Visayas.

There is more trouble for Aguinaldo in the northern part of the island of Luzon. Two provinces are in revolt against the Tagallo governors and demand that Aguinaldo appoint officers from their tribes. Six thousand men, armed with insurgent rifles, are supporting the revolt.

The revenue cutter McCulloch, the first ship of Admiral Dewey's battle squadron to leave, started for home yesterday.

The other ships gave her a great send off. As the McCulloch steamed through the squadron flying a homeward bound pennant over two hundred feet long, every ship called all hands to cheer.

Each ship manned her rigging and the bands played "Auld Lang Syne," "The Girl I Left Behind Me," and other tunes.

The McCulloch will call at many Chinese and Japanese ports to show her flag. It is expected that she will reach San Francisco in February.

Madrid, Nov. 18.—A dispatch from General Rios, governor of the Visayas Islands, dated at Iloilo, says that the situation there is unchanged. The insurrection is still spreading and the Spanish troops maintain a defensive attitude.

Dr. Stephen H. Tyng Dead.

Paris, Nov. 18.—Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, formerly president of the American Chamber of Commerce in this city, is dead.

New York, Nov. 18.—Dr. Stephen Higginson Tyng was formerly rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity, in Forty-second street, this city. He was the son of the Rev. Dr. Stephen Higginson Tyng, the late distinguished rector of St. George's church. The son was born in Philadelphia on June 28, 1839.

Dr. Tyng, in 1865 organized the Church of the Holy Trinity, and erected a church building in Forty-second street.

Dr. Tyng resigned his pastorate in 1881 and went to Paris as the agent of the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association.

He became the association's director general for Continental Europe in 1867 and retained this office up to the time of his death.

Dr. Tyng was tried in 1867, while rector of Holy Trinity, for preaching in a Methodist church in New Jersey, this being an offense under canon law.

He was found guilty and was censured by the Bishop of New York. He took a prominent part in the Moody and Sankey revival in 1875.

The Formidable Launched.

Portsmouth, Eng., Nov. 18.—Thousands of people yesterday witnessed the launching of the ram battleship Formidable at the dock yard here.

She is said to be the largest warship in the world, being of fifteen thousand tons displacement.

She is a twin screw vessel, four hundred feet long, has seventy-five feet beam, and draws twenty-six feet nine inches of water. She cost more than one million pounds, and is estimated to steam at a speed of eighteen knots an hour.

She will be armed with four twelve-inch guns in hooded barbettes, twelve six-inch quick firing guns, eighteen twelve-pounders, twelve three-pounders, and eight Maxim guns, and is intended to carry seven hundred and fifty men.

Rival for Bailey.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 18.—The Alabama congressional delegation met here and decided to put forward Representative John H. Bankhead for the Democratic leadership of the next House.

This means that the contest for the complimentary vote for speaker to be given by the Democrats will be between Mr. Bankhead and Mr. Bailey of Texas.

Mr. Bankhead's friends say that he will get the votes of all eastern Democrats and a majority from the South Atlantic and Gulf states.

Phya Visuddha Sees Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Phya Visuddha, the newly accredited minister plenipotentiary from Siam to this country, is in Chicago.

He is accompanied by his private secretary, L. C. Bateman.

Mr. Visuddha is accredited to the court of St. James as well as to this country. He presented his credentials to President McKinley last Saturday. His visit to Chicago is part of a tour of the country to acquaint himself with its general character and resources. He probably will remain here several days.

Lawyers Want Choate to Succeed Hay.

Cleveland, O., Nov. 18.—Members of the Cleveland Bench and Bar have sent a petition to President McKinley asking for the appointment of Joseph H. Choate of New York as ambassador to the court of St. James.

The same influences are said to be at work to secure for Congressman T. E. Burton of this city the appointment of chairman of the committee on rivers and harbors, in place of Warren B. Hooker of New York.

Capt. Joseph B. Foraker Out.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—Captain Joseph B. Foraker, Jr., assistant adjutant general, volunteers, is honorably discharged, to take effect December 31, 1898, his services being no longer required.

He is a son of Senator Foraker and has been for some time, until lately, in Cuba.

LIFE AT CAMP WIKOFF

Testimony of Dr. Forwood About Its Conditions.

SUPPLIES WERE PLENTIFUL

Claim that Medical Supplies Were Abundant. The Typhoid Fever Cases. Critics of the Camp Accused. Many Killed by Kindness.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—Dr. W. H. Forwood, colonel and assistant surgeon general in the regular army, continued his testimony before the war inquiry commission yesterday concerning conditions at Montauk Point, where he was chief army surgeon.

He said that from the beginning to the end of the history of the general hospital at Camp Wikoff there was never a time when there were not from fifty to five hundred vacant beds.

Many patients soon after arriving, were sent away to hospitals in neighboring cities, largely in response to public clamor. The patients taken away were largely typhoid cases, and were selected chiefly because it was believed not wise to allow typhoid cases to accumulate at Montauk.

Speaking of the nurses he said that there was a considerable number of hospital corps men who had been trained in the post hospitals before the female nurses arrived. This was limited training, but it rendered the men much more efficient than they otherwise would have been.

Dr. Forwood said that he had expected that typhoid fever would break out in the hospital, but he never had expected that the troops would remain there long enough to cause an epidemic of this disease. As it was, he did not believe that there had been a case originating in Camp Wikoff.

He declared that there had been a sufficiency of medicines and medical supplies at all times, a wasteful abundance, in fact. Notwithstanding this fact there was complaint of the scarcity of medical supplies and medicines, due largely to the fact that the doctors often required proprietary medicines, which were not kept in hand. No requisitions were required in getting medicines.

Dr. Conner read a letter from Major M. W. Wood, a regular army surgeon, dated at Montauk, in August, complaining that there was a pressing want of medical supplies, and that the camp was in a deplorable condition.

Dr. Forwood said Dr. Wood was disappointed because he did not get a leave of absence immediately after arriving from Cuba, which he had asked for, although his services were needed. General Wheeler had refused to grant this request.

"From that time," said Dr. Forwood, "he was constantly kicking and bucking. He was disgruntled and disloyal, and found fault with everything. For instance, he said that the well water was polluted, declaring he would not take a drink of it for $5."

A dispatch was read from General Wheeler saying that Dr. Wood had failed to secure medicines only because he had not sent for them.

Dr. Forwood declared that the complaints concerning the purity of the water at Montauk had originated with men who had filters and distilling apparatus for sale. The water was pure and plentiful. The transportation facilities of the camp were poor and that often the vehicles received were not complete in their equipment.

He had annulled the contracts of two or three contract surgeons because of incompetency, but he knew of no case of neglect on the part of physicians or nurses of a character to compromise the welfare of the patients.

Many physicians had come to the camp at the instance of the newspapers, generally for a compensation of about 50. Among these was Dr. Lee, who was a personal friend of his, and he had told the doctor to look the camp over and criticise whenever he found occasion for criticism. The doctor had written his article, making parts of it very flattering, but he was very much disgusted, after the appearance of the matter, to find that all the complimentary portion of it had been expunged.

Dr. Edson's predictions as to the camp had not been realized. Dr. Stimpson had spoken of the conduct of the kitchens. As a matter of fact the kitchens were in the most expert hands.

Miss Helen Gould had supplied a number of chefs, and most of these were from the kitchens of the wealthiest people of New York city. He had talked with one of them who had been with W. H. Vanderbilt for more than three years. As a matter of fact the hospitals never were so abundantly supplied. The army rations were supplemented by everything that could be found in the larder of the Waldorf-Astoria, including roast turkey, pheasants, squabs, lambs, sheep, pigs, game of all kinds, pate de foie gras, mineral waters, the finest champagnes and liquors.

At one time he had noticed eight barrels of brandy, and a large number of cases of wine. There was so much apollinaris water that it was in the way, and when a nurse came for a bottle they would offer her a case instead.

He said that the newspaper men at the camp were gentlemen, but they appeared to be under orders to criticise the camp.

He knew of two instances in which the reporters had received orders to "roast everything." He had told them not to spare where they found criticism justified.

In conclusion Dr. Forwood said that many patients who had been removed by their friends, had died, and that in many instances their deaths were due to the kindness of those who had taken them in charge.

Prairies in a Blaze.

Sioux City, Nov. 18.—In Brown, Rock and Dixon counties, Nebraska, thousands of acres have been swept by prairie fires, and grain, barns and several houses have been destroyed by the flames.

In Gregory, Todd and Tripp counties, South Dakota, the range is on fire and many cattle are reported lost.

A PECULIAR REMEDY.

The Rev. F. I. Bell, a highly esteemed minister residing in Weedsport, Cayuga Co., N. Y., in a recent letter writes as follows: "There has never been anything that I have taken that has relieved the Dyspepsia from which I have suffered for ten years except the new remedy called Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Since taking them I have had no distress at all after eating and again after long years CAN SLEEP WELL. Rev. F. I. Bell, Weedsport, N. Y., formerly, Idalia, Colo."

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is a remarkable remedy, not only because it is a certain cure for all forms of indigestion, but because it seems to act as thoroughly in old chronic cases of dyspepsia as well as in mild attacks of indigestion or biliousness. A person has dyspepsia simply because the stomach is overworked, all it wants is a harmless, vegetable remedy to digest the food and thus give it the much needed rest.

This is the secret of the success of this peculiar remedy. No matter how weak or how much disordered the digestion may be, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not. New life and energy is given not only to the stomach but to every organ and nerve in the body. A trial of this splendid medicine will convince the most skeptical that Dyspepsia and all stomach troubles can be cured. The tablets are prepared by the F. A. Stuart Co., of Marshall, Mich., but so popular has the remedy become that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets can now be obtained at any drug store at 50 cents per package. Send for book on stomach diseases free. 11 14 3 eod

YOU'RE READING THIS?

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it isn't always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

TO CHECK YELLOW FEVER.

Important Investigations in Cuba and the South that Promise Well.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The yellow fever problem has been receiving attention from the authorities here, particularly the Marine Hospital service and the war department, owing to the important new relations established with Cuba and other fever localities to the south of us, and because of the recurrence of the disease within this country during the last summer.

The purpose is to prepare during the coming winter months for such an efficient cordon of protection around the country that the chances of a reintroduction of the disease will be reduced to a minimum, while the points of infection in Cuba and elsewhere will be so improved by sanitation and guarded by quarantine that the main sources of danger will be removed.

Already the Marine Hospital service has begun its work of establishing a cordon of quarantine around Cuba. A large floating disinfecting plant is in operation in Havana harbor and a similar plant is at Santiago, although not in operation.

The work of Messrs. Wasdin and Geddings is considered particularly important, as they were especially appointed by the president to ascertain the causes of yellow fever.

Their preliminary report to the surgeon general is said to be one of the most important contributions to medical science made in recent years, as it practically sustains the Sanarelli theory that yellow fever is the outgrowth of a certain organism.

This is not yet the positive conclusion of the United States commissioners, but Surgeon Geddings reports that in his experiments he found that 76 per cent. of the yellow fever cultures had the organisms described by Sanarelli, while Surgeon Wasdin identified 42 per cent. of cases as showing the Sanarelli organisms.

The work already done by these experts gives promise to the officials here that the complete investigation will make a marked contribution to the problem of preventing and curing yellow fever.

The Wrecked Maria Teresa.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 18.—The Merritt Wrecking Company has information that both of its powerful tugs, the Merritt and Chapman, are at the scene of the Maria Teresa wreck at Cat island.

On board are about eighty wreckers and divers and the most powerful wrecking machinery in use.

Now that the government has abandoned the vessel, it may be that the Merritt Company will try and float her on their own responsibility.

At the local office it was said yesterday that nothing would be done until Captain Chittenden, who was in charge of the wreckers, was heard from.

President Dwight Resigns

New Haven, Nov. 18.—The halls of Yale University are filled with astonishment at the announcement, made public last evening, at the close of a meeting of the university corporation, to the effect that President Timothy Dwight, for twelve years the head of the institution, had presented his resignation to take effect at the end of the present academic year.

Among the friends of this great educator it has been no secret for a long time that the president contemplated his resignation before age weighed too heavily upon him.

Emperor William Going Home.

Berlin, Nov. 18.—An official telegram received here from Valetta, Island of Malta, says that the Emperor and Empress of Germany have sailed for Pola, at the northern part of the Adriatic sea, from which port they will travel overland direct for home.

It is explained that the emperor decided upon this course because the temperature of the Mediterranean has become considerably cooler, and the danger to the health of the empress by a sudden change from a northern to a southern climate is thus lessened.

Tolbert Will Not Go Home.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—James W. Tolbert regards Governor Ellerbee's answer to his telegram as a practical admission that the governor cannot afford him protection.

It is not likely, therefore, that he will return home at present.

Assistant United States Attorney Cochran, from the Tolbert district, has been ordered to Washington for conference with the officials of the department of justice, and upon his arrival here to-day the whole South Carolina situation will be gone over.

Indians Who Are Aristocrats.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The Osage Indians probably are the wealthiest people per capita on earth.

They are aristocrats, and scorn manual labor, according to Agent Pollock's annual report to the interior department.

They own over eight hundred acres of land for each man, woman and child each receiving an annuity of over two hundred dollars in cash. As an illustration, if an Indian and his wife have eight children the annual cash income of the family is over $2,000.

The Shoe-workers Strike.

Marlborough, Mass., Nov. 18.—Reports from the seven factories involved in the general strike of shoe workers showed that the situation was practically unchanged yesterday.

The Middlesex factory was again in operation and the work on the samples is proceeding satisfactorily, according to the superintendents.

The other factories, six in number, remain idle.

The strikers appear as confident of winning as on the day they struck, and the leaders predict a long contest.

Orders Twelve New Cruisers.

Washington, Nov. 18—The government of the Argentine Republic has just given orders and concluded contracts with the shipbuilding firm of Ansaldo & Co. of Genoa, Italy, for the construction of twelve new cruisers. The new vessels will all be of the first class, with the exception of three which will be second class cruisers.

GOLD FROM ALL LANDS

More Has Been Paid Us This Year Than Ever Before.

MUCH MONEY CIRCULATING

Excess So Far Over Exportations of Gold is $129,596,246. Enormous Balance of Trade in Our Favor. Big Gold Balance in the Treasury.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The importations of gold into the United States in the year 1898 are by far the largest in the history of the country, and the exportations the smallest in many years, while the production of gold from our own mines will prove the largest in many years, if not the largest in the history of the country.

The October statement of imports and exports, just issued by the treasury bureau of statistics, shows that the total imports of gold in the ten months ending October 31, 1898, are $143,658,095, which is more than fifty per cent. in excess of the amount imported in the corresponding period of any preceding year.

The exports during that time have been but $14,061,849, which is less than in the corresponding months of any preceding year for more than a decade.

This gives the enormous balance of $129,596,246 of gold importations in excess of gold exportations.

In only one other year in the decade have the ten months ending with October shown an excess of imports of gold over the exports, that occasion being in 1896, when the excess of imports was $37,085,851. In all other years from 1888 to 1898 the October returns showed for the ten months of the calendar year an excess of exports of gold over the imports of that article, that of 1895 being $43,247,360, and of 1894 $72,808,322.

This unprecedented flow of gold into the United States is accounted for in part, at least, by the enormous balance of trade in our favor, which the ten months of the year afford.

In these ten months the total imports of merchandise amounted to but $527,757,554, while the total export was $987,964,356, a balance of trade in our favor of $460,206,802.

The total exports of merchandise for the month of October, 1898, amounted amounted to $118,686,232, a sum larger than in any preceding October in the history of the country, the figures for October, 1897, being $111,744,517, and those for October, 1896, $113,516,586.

The enormous importation of gold in excess of the exportation of this article is plainly perceptible in the increased circulation shown by the figures of the treasury department. The latest statement of the gold in the treasury shows a gold balance of $242,805,604, while the gold in circulation on November 1, was $649,846,727, being $110,000,000 greater than on November 1 of last year, and nearly $200,000,000 more than on July 1, 1896, in which month it touched its lowest point in several years.

The total money in circulation at the beginning of the present month is shown by the treasury figures to have been $1,866,575,782, against $1,706,732,904 at the corresponding date last year, and $1,509,725,200 on July 1, 1896, the increase in circulation in the past year having been $159,842,878, and since July 1, 1896, $356,850,582.

Reports of the Health of Our Men.

Vancouver, B. C., Nov. 18.—Advices received by the steamer Empress of China, from China and Japan, include disquieting news as to the health of the American troops at Manila.

In addition to the malarial and typhoid fever prevailing, smallpox is reported to have appeared.

There is also a leper alarm in Manila.

Through the neglect of the Spanish officials, nearly two hundred lepers are reported to have escaped from confinement.

For a time this was unknown to the American authorities, and the outcasts were allowed to wander at large. Orders have been issued that all lepers shall be arrested and sent to a small uninhabited island southeast of Luzon, where they will be fed and cared for at the expense of the United States government.

As far as can be ascertained about sixty lepers are still at large.

Wasching the Carlists.

Madrid, via Biarritz, France, Nov. 18.—The government is greatly alarmed over the imminence of a Carlist rising in the north of Spain and has adopted strong measures to prevent it.

The Carlists, however, are as greatly encouraged as the ministers are anxious over the actual situation, which is ripe for revolt.

The government has taken measures to cope with possible Carlist movements.

The military authorities in various parts of the kingdom have been instructed how to act in case of a Carlist rising, and the movements of all prominent partisans of Don Carlos are being carefully watched.

Shortage of $200,000.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—A telegram received by Mr. Dawes, comptroller of the currency, from the receiver in charge of the First National Bank of Emporia, Kan., says his investigation has developed irregularities in the reserve agents 'accounts of $50,000. $15,000 in the cash accounts, and that the bank had invested in doubtful enterprises controlled by President Cross, approximately one hundred and fifty thousand dollars.

It is thought by officials in the comptroller's office that although the capital and surplus of the bank are entirely wiped out, the depositors will suffer little if any loss.

Trade Restrictions in Corea.

Yokohama, Nov. 18.—Advices received here from Seoul say that the Corean government has issued orders that foreigners are to be stopped from trading in the interior.

THE NEW FEDERATION.

The Military Situation in Central America a Menace.

Mangua, Nicaragua, Nov. 18.—Everything is quiet, thus giving hope for the peaceful and successful continuation of the new Central American republic, formed by the union of Nicaragua, Salvador and Honduras, which began its course as a nation yesterday under the name of the United States of Central America.

It is claimed, however, that the commissioners who organized the new government have dodged present great difficulties and shifted them to the future for disentanglement and solution, and that they have ignored a fundamental part of the constitution by the understanding said to exist between the commissioners and the governors of the three states that the government of the new republic will not enforce the constitutional provision demanding from the governors the munitions of war now belonging to each state.

It is understood that the generals in active command of the armies of each state will be merely changed and instructed nominally to report to the new government, while actually they will remain under the control of the governor of each state.

This action is taken, it is asserted, because the governors cannot retain their positions and power without a comparatively large army at their command.

The army of Nicaragua has been very largely increased in order that it may be ready for any emergency that may arise.

FORWARD TOWARD HAVANA.

United States Troops Will Begin the March Within Ten Days.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—The movement of United States troops to Havana province will begin within ten days. The exact date of their arrival will be determined by the reports of Major General Greene of the Seventh Corps, now in Havana on business connected with garrisoning that province, and of General Charles F. Humphrey and Colonel Hecker of the quartermaster's department.

These officers have authority to complete arrangements for the reception of the troops, the quartermaster's officers being engaged in supervising the construction of wharves and depots.

In the occupation of Cienfuegos General Snyder will command the first brigade to land. He will be followed soon afterward by Major General Wilson and the First Corps.

Nothing has been heard of the detachments of the Eighth Cavalry, which sailed for Nuevitas and Puerto Principe, but as there is no telegraphic communication with that part of the island, no surprise is manifested at the war department.

The conduct of the volunteer regiments in Santiago province may result in a transfer of some of these troops to corps where a more rigid discipline can be enforced, and where regiments under command of general officers can be used to quell any disturbances of immune regiments.

The Rev. Dr. S. C. Bartlett Dead:

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 18.—The Rev. Dr. Samuel Colcord Bartlett, formerly president of Dartmouth College, died here yesterday evening, aged 81 years. He was born in Salisbury, this state, near the home of Daniel Webster, and once had the honor of preaching to that distinguished statesman.

He prepared for college at Pinkerton Academy, at Derry, was graduated in 1836 from Dartmouth, and a year later received the degree of A. M.

For nineteen years he was a professor in the Chicago Theological Seminary, and in 1877 accepted the presidency of Dartmouth College.

Dr. Bartlett had listened to addresses by Rufus Choate, heard Daniel Webster's celebrated Bunker Hill monument address, Choate's eulogy on Webster, John Adams's historical address in Boston fifty years ago, and Alexander H. Stephens's speech in the House of Representatives upon the presentation to that body of the picture "Reception of the Emancipation Proclamation by Congress."

Army and Navy Orders.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 18.—By the army orders published yesterday morning a board of medical officers is convened to meet at the Army building in New York for the examination of acting assistant surgeons and candidates for appointment to that position.

The board will consist of Major William H. Arthur, chief surgeon of volunteers; Major Nathan S. Jarvis, brigade surgeon of volunteers; and Captain D. C. Howard, assistant surgeon, United States army.

Lieutenant Colonel Louis M. Maus, chief surgeon of volunteers, is relieved from further duty at Fort Hamilton.

Among the naval orders issued yesterday is one by which Surgeon H. Wells is detached from duty at the naval laboratory and department of instruction at Brooklyn and ordered home, and on waiting orders, to be ready for orders to the Chicago.

New Coast Survey Steamer.

Washington, Nov. 18.—The new United States coast survey steamer Pathfinder, which was especially designed for work in Alaskan waters, but which will be used also in the survey of the coasts of the islands which have lately come into the possession of the United States, will be launched on December 7 at the Crescent ship yards of Lewis Nixon, at Elizabethport, N. J.

The Pathfinder is 196 feet over all, 32 1-2 feet beam, with a depth of about twenty feet and a displacement of 875 tons.

The available speed will be twelve knots, and her regular complement of officers and crew will number seventy. She will be the finest vessel ever built for the purpose.

A New Hebrew Colony.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 18.—A new Hebrew colony sent out from Europe by the Baron Hirsch fund is to be established at Chesterfield, this state, in New London county.

A factory is to be built for making cloaks and hats and cottages will be erected for the workers.

The Democrats.

LOST, strayed or stolen—A political party known as the Democratic. Last seen and heard of on Tuesday, November 8th. Not considered worth while to offer a reward for its return in proper condition.

Briefly, that describes the result of the meeting of the Democratic Association of Plainfield last night.

Organized for the purpose of becoming an active factor in local affairs and arousing an interest that would be reflected beneficially throughout the party at all times, the Democratic Association was swooped down upon last night by an army of Citizens' party men and its light snuffed out in almost a twinkling, and today it is a bare organization with about as much influence as it moribond predecessor was for several years.

Those who were in favor of the Democratic Association becoming something more than an empty title in the city campaign had one gratifying thought anyway, and that was that that through their endeavors the most interesting meeting of Democrats that has been held in Plainfield in some years was the result of the effort to have a straight party ticket in the field.

Presumably, the Democrats are now expected to support the Citizens' candidates when they are nominated by petition. On the part of those Democrats who are inclined to be loyal to their own party at all times and under all circumstances, the support that the Citizens' will secure will depend largely, no doubt, about how the ticket is made up.

Crane Ahead of Assemblymen.

All the counties in the State have completed their canvass on the vote for Governor and the figures show a plurality for Foster M. Voorhees, the Republican candidate, of 5,573.

While the plurality against Mr. Crane, the Gubernatorial candidate of the Democrats, was 5,573, the plurality in the State against the Democratic Assemblymen, taken on the average vote, was 9,137, a difference of 3 564 in favor of the Gubernatorial candidate. The net Republican majority on the Congressional vote in the State was 10,429.

May Irwin, fair, fat and forty, being a funny woman on the stage, is possessed of the intention to drive ticket speculators away from the theatre in which she appears in New York. She has determined to do this, she says, even if it costs lots of money. We hope that the buxon May has a large-sized bank book to resolutely pursue her intentions. Ticket speculators are the most aggravating nuisance found around the New York playhouses.

Miss Kate Lunden, State lecturer for the W. C. T. U., appeared before the Raritan election officials and asked to be registered as a voter, but that privilege was denied her. Now she threatens to carry the matter to the high courts. Her course will be watched with interest in Plainfield where there are lots of women who will applaud her for her stand.

Middlesex county glories over the fact that tramps now give that bailiwick a wide berth. The chain gang and the stone cracker is said to have accomplished suddenly what years of diet on homemade cakes and pies failed to do in driving the genus hobo from that section.

THE FRENCH FLEET AT TOULON.

Like England, France has been getting ready for war right along, regardless of peace negotiations. Some of the formidable vessels of the French fleet, of which the illustration shows four, have been overhauled at Toulon and put into shape for immediate action should the necessity arise.

At the home of a prominent Republican in the Third ward last night there was a small gathering of the leading men of the party. The exact result of the conference is still a mystery, but it is understood that great pressure was brought to bear on Marion S. Ackerman to have him stand for the Mayoralty nomination.

Fred W. Bird announced today that ho was no longer a candidate for the nomination of City Collector on the Citizens' ticket.

The wise merchant now seeks big advertising space in The Daily Press to capture the holiday trade.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

As long as Plainfield and North Plainfield are in two different counties The Press will have hard work to unite them. The best and most feasible plan is to make a new county, embracing Lincoln, Bound Brook, Dunellen, New Market and the Plainfields. Then with Lincoln as the county seat The Press might secure the union it desires.—Real Estate News.

Now is the time to commence agitating the matter of bringing before the next Legislature the project of consolidating Plainfield and North Plainfield into one municipality. There is a similar plan on foot to consolidate all the municipalities in Hudson county into one city. It is urged that if such action was taken it would reduce the taxes by the elimination of unnecessary officers and the reduction of other expenses that each town now has to maintain separately. What is true of Hudson county is true of the Plainfields.—The Press.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

When you go to the theatre you want to be amused, don't you? You also want to be sure that the entertainment will be free from all coarseness, eh? Well, then, go to see "The Girl from 'Frisco" at Music Hall tonight and enjoy one of the funniest, most interesting comedies that has ever been here. The entertainment is breezy, bright and full of music "The Golden Gate Quartette," which renders all the latest songs, has a national reputation, and it can be heard only in "The Girl from 'Frisco." The company engaged to play the principal parts in the piece are stars in their respective roles.

* * * * *

The Burrill Comedy Company, which plays a week engagement at Stillman Music Hall commencing Monday, November 21st, is a great organization. Miss Laura Hulbert is the leading lady of the company, and she has appeared in this city a year ago as the star of the farce with the Lee Company. The opening play is the beautiful society drama "Infatuation. Following is the list of specialty artists: Miss Nellie DeVan, the famous buck and wing dancer; Paul Hudson, the great operatic baritone, formerly of the Lillian Russell Opera Company; Spaulding and Bortram, sketch artists, and Miss Marie Blair, chanteuse-international, singing in five different languages. In fact the company is the best on the road that plays at these extreme low prices of 10, 20 and 30 cents.

THE MAKING OF RUSSIA.

GARRETT P. SERVISS TELLS OF PETER THE GREAT'S PART.

He Was a Man Powerful in Body, Mind and Control—One Great Element of His Success Was His Self Control.

A fair-sized audience gathered at the Casino last evening to attend the third and last illustrated lecture given by Garrett P. Serviss, of New York. Like the other two lectures, this one was superb as to illustration, and the lecture by Mr. Serviss was fully up to the standard of the others. The subject was "Peter the Great and the Making of Russia."

The first part of the lecture was devoted to the land where Peter lived and the people of that country. In those days all Europe had her eyes on Russia, for she was rapidly spreading out and the great effort was to keep her from covering the earth. Peter in shaping the people had trouble with the religion of the country. Many people looked upon the Czar as a God, and it was strongly noted as a land of devotion.

Mr. Serviss devoted a portion of his talk to the dark ages of Russia, when women were slaves, and when people by the hundreds were murdered, and how perfectly crazy certain people acted. It was occasioned by the fact that it was a matter of dispute as to who should rule the country. Peter contested in the political arena, and during his early life he learned the great art of self-control, and later he learned to control a nation. He was great in strength and statue, being nearly seven feet tall. He would often approach his enemies or friends and knock them down, one for hatred and the other as a mark of friendship. He studied persistently all the well-known arts, and especially that of ship building. He also became acquainted with the art of war. In early life he was much opposed to display or title, and he went about the country in the plainest sort of dress. He detested to have people follow him and thereby make him conspicuous.

The last part of the lecture was devoted to a sad part of history in Peter's life, when he practiced such cruelties on his people by having them put to death, when a man had to take out a license to wear a beard, and when the custom of wearing long sleeves and long coat tails was abolished by Peter.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 18.—St. John's Roman Catholic church was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday afternoon when Miss Annie Maier, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Maier, was united in marriage to Terrace J. Ronayne, of Rahway, the affable telegraph operator and ticket agent at the station. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Bogaard, of Somerville, in the presence of a church full of relatives and friends of the two parties. The wedding took place at 3 o'clock. To the strains of the wedding march, played by Mr. Noonan, the organist, the bridal party, attended by Miss Lena Maier, a sister to the bride, as bridemaid, and William Ronayne, a brother to the groom, as best man, moved up the aisle and stood before the priest who joined the couple for life. The bride wore a grey traveling dress with hat to match and carried yellow roses. She looked remarkably well and endured the stares of the spectators as she and her husband left the church without a change of countenance. The bridemaid was dressed in a dark blue dress and hat and carried pink roses. After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's house after which they left for Washington where they will spend their honeymoon. Upon their return they will take up their residence in the borough.

The long-talked-of fair and bazaar, given under the auspices of the Epworth League of the Methodist church, opened last night and will continue tonight and tomorrow night. Apgar's Hall, where the fair is being held, was crowded. Judging from the crowd last night the fair will be a big success. Booths and tables are placed about the hall in the upper as well as the lower rooms, where things to wear and things to eat are displayed for sale. The quilt table last night was in charge of Mrs. F. H. Gise; Miss Grace Vail presided over the lemonade table; Miss Emma Apgar over the fruit and nut table; Miss Sydney Williams, candy; Miss Carrie Fisher, fancy table; Miss Mabel Jamison and her class juniors, the table of small articles; Miss May Apgar and Miss Ethel Jamison the gypsy booth; Mrs. H. L. Terry, flowers, and George Schenck, grocery department. Besides these booths Will Reynolds has a department where one can hear delicious music from the phonograph, and another where A. Drake, of Plainfield, has pictures to sell. One of the features last night was a Japanese tea. The waitresses were all dressed in Oriental costume, and each one who took a cup of tea was presented with the cup and saucer as a souvenir. The Queen City Band, of Plainfield, dispensed music all the evening.

Miss Nellie Dodwell gave a party Wednesday night to which a number of her young friends were invited. The evening was passed in a pleasant way with dancing, games and refreshments. Ernest Peters, who was among those present, furnished music for the dancing. Among those present were Abner Coriell, Fred Wilcox, Willie Dealaman, Hudson Wilcox, Fred Warden, Charles Vail, Willie Giles, Ernest Peters, Edna Coriell, Maude Wilcox, Edna Vail and Pearl Dodwell.

S. S. Vermule, the tailor, has moved to Plainfield, as he claims business is so dull he cannot make any money.

Mr. and Mrs. Gray, who have been visiting friends here, have returned to their home in Easton.

N. C. Sears and family, of New York, have taken up their residence on Grove street.

Mrs. Josephine Dunham is visiting her brother, Silas Hunt, of Brooklyn, who is seriously ill.

Miss Martha Sirisky, of Raritan, has been visiting her brother, Bernard Sirisky.

Mrs. James, of Jersey City, has been visiting friends on Washington avenue.

Mrs. H. A. Adams, of Newark, spent yesterday with Mrs. Webster.

Miss Alice Pettit, of New York, spent Wednesday in town.

Fred Nelson, of Basking Ridge, has been visiting friends here.

Miss Mabel Jamison spent Wednesday visiting in Plainfield.

Harry Dodwell has returned from a short visit in New York.

William J. Winges has returned from a visit to Paterson.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, November 18.—The poorhouse in Piscataway township harbors a remarkable old man who claims to have passed 126 years upon this earth and hopes to live well into the next century. His name is Noah Raby, and he has now been an inmate of the poorhouse for thirty-two years. Raby says he was born in Virginia or the Carolinas, April 1st, 1782. His father was an Indian and his mother a white woman. His long hair, jet black still, testifies to the fact of his Indian blood, which may be responsible for his longevity. Raby drifted to New Market forty years ago or so, and after awhile, becoming feeble, applied for admission to the poorhouse. He was taken in, no one expecting he would live long, but to the surprise of every one he grew better, and has continued to be active and healthy to this day. When the weather is fine Raby sits outside the poorhouse and regales the other inmates with tales of long ago. He claims to have seen General Washington, and to have been a partaker in the scenes of those troubled times just prior to and following the Revolution. Raby's only affliction is blindness, which has gradually crept over him, but for all that he does chores around the poorhouse as well as any one there. The man says he was never married, and to this he partly attributes his old age.

A disastrous fire was prevented Wednesday night by the prompt action of the fire department. A henhouse on the old Ryder place took fire from an overturned lamp in an incubator, and soon the chicken house was in a blaze. A large barn close to the henhouse was threatened, and an alarm was turned in to which the firemen responded nobly, and by their efforts the barn was saved. The fire occurred about 7 o'clock just after the chickens had gone to roost, but most of them were gotten out. Captain Thompson and family live on the place.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Nelson have been entertaining their son from over the mountains.

Miss Lillian Gunther, of Metuchen, is stopping with Mrs. William Giles.

Joseph E. Meeker has returned from a visit in Franklin Park.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 18—The local football eleven have a game scheduled for tomorrow afternoon with the Alis first team of Plainfield. Scotch Plains is to be strengthened by several out-of-town players and the Plainfield boys may meet with a surprise. The game will be played on the new gridiron on John R. Marsh's property.

Quite a number of Scotch Plains people attended the entertainment in the Fanwood Hall Wednesday evening. The proceeds were for the benefit of the basket ball team recently organized.

Mrs. George Stillger and daughter, Mrs. Frederick Clark, were the guests Wednesday of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Stillger, of Roselle.

William Lake's house on Bartle avenue presents a very pretty appearance with its new coat of paint.

Thomas Coles, who has been visiting relatives in town, has returned to his home in Jersey City.

Miss Sadie Reger attended the funeral of an uncle in Morristown Wednesday.

John Wade has returned from a two weeks' visit with relatives at Lyons Farms.

Anthony Schwalback has accepted a position with the Cranford Gas Company.

E. H. Hand spent Wednesday in Elizabeth on important business.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 19.—The Township Committee will meet this evening, and, it is expected that something will be done in regard to calling a meeting of the citizens to see how they stand on the question of the township building and owning its own water system.

The following new members have been taken into the Westfield Club: Messrs. J. H. Norris, C. S. Hinchman, J. W. Devean, Frank T. Okell, Fred Smith, A. E. Waterhouse, W. H. Gomes, H. E Ferris, H. Cotterill, H. E. Warncke C. H. Denman, William Hendrickson, Adolph Ganzell, N. B. Arnold, C Brenesholtz, H. R. Forster, G. F. Marsh, J. S. Foster, W. N. Hackett, Harold M. Winsor,

All members of the Junior O. U. A. M. in this vicinity are invited to meet at the lodge rooms of Central Council Sunday evening at 7:15 and accompany the members to the Methodist church where Rev. Dr. C. M. Anderson will deliver a special sermon.

Miss Mount, of Stroudsburg, Pa., will give an entertainment in the Methodist church this evening for the benefit of the fund for the refurnishing of the infant Sunday-school room.

INTERNATIONAL SERIES, WITH COMMENTARY BY DR. STEARNS.

Golden Text.—If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.—1 John i: 9. Nov. 20, 1898.

9. "So Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err and to do worse than the heathen whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of Israel." This is a summary of the previous part of this chapter concerning the sins of Manasseh, who began to reign when he was 12 years old and reigned 55 years in Jerusalem. He shed innocent blood very much until he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another (II Kings xxi, 16). He wrought much evil in the sight of the Lord to provoke Him to anger. Then think of the people of God acting worse than the heathen who knew not God, and even worshiping an idol, a carved image, in the house of God, where He had put His name and His glory! What a contrast to the conduct of his father, Hezekiah, who for the most part wrought good and right and truth before the Lord his God (chapter xxxi, 20). How could such a good father have such a bad son? But it is not an uncommon story. Consider the sons of Eli and of Samuel and of David. How could sinful King Ahaz, because of whose sins the Lord brought Judah low (chapter xxviii, 19), have such a good son as Hezekiah? His mother's name was Abi, the daughter of Zachariah (II Kings, xviii, 2), and to her possibly much is due. But Manasseh's mother was Hephzibah (my delight is in her), and if there is anything in a name he, too, may have had a good mother (II Kings xxi, 1). Our heavenly Father knows what it is to have rebellious children (Isa. i, 2), and when He permits us to have rebellious children it is a ground of fellowship with Him.

10. "And the Lord spake to Manasseh, and to his people, but they would not hearken:" Oh, how often the Lord has to say concerning those whom He would love to bless that they would not let Him, they would not listen to Him, they would not come to Him (Isa. xxx. 15; Math. xxiii, 37; John v, 40). If we only would receive His word with meekness, yield fully to Him and be willing and obedient, how much of heaven we might have upon the earth! How earnestly God cries to His people by His servants, the prophets, as, for example, in Jer. iii, 13, 14. "Only acknowledge thine iniquity: turn, O back-sliding children, saith the Lord, for I am married unto you." See also Ezek. xviii, 30-32; xxxiii, 11, etc.

11. "Wherefore the Lord brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among the thorns and bound him with fetters and carried him to Babylon." Thus he found some reaping, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap, and they who sow the wind may reap the whirlwind (Gal. vi, 7; Hos. viii, 7). Affliction is often the best thing that can come to one who is wandering from God. God is not willing that any should perish, and if sinners will not listen to gracious words of love He will seek to win them by chastening, as He has said in Job xxxiii, 29, 30.

12. "And when he was in affliction he besought the Lord His God and humbled himself greatly before the God of His fathers." It is often the case that only in affliction will a soul turn to the Lord, even as it is written in Hos. v, 15, "In their affliction they will seek me early." It will be seen on a larger scale some day, for it is written in Isa. xxvi, 9. "When Thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." Even the fearful judgments of Rev. ix and xvi are intended, if possible, to bring men to repentance. See Rev. ix, 20, 21; xvi, 9, 11. Pride and self will are born in us as the results of Adam's sin, the work of the devil, and all people are either Cains or Abels, the former proudly resisting God and His salvation, and the latter humbly confessing their sins and accepting His way of redemption. The Pharisees when our Lord was on earth were of the line of Cain, religious, but proud and hating God and His way.

13. "And prayed unto Him and He was entreated of him and heard his supplication and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the Lord He was God." Manasseh was evidently a true penitent, and God's ear is ever open to such. It is always true for such on God's part. "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out" (John vi, 37). It is written in I Chron. v, 20, concerning some of Israel that they cried to God in the battle and He was entreated of them, because they put their trust in Him. Ezra says in chapter viii, 23, "So we fasted and besought our God for this and He was entreated of us." As to the mercy which is with God for the greatest sinner who with true penitence turns to Him we need only consider the case of the penitent thief or of Saul of Tarsus. But who could be greater in sin than this son of Hezekiah?

14. "Now after this he built a wall without the city of David." The building of this wall and the placing of captains of war in the fenced cities does not imply any lack of trust in God, but is rather suggestive of keeping the Lord's property for the Lord.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Nov. 20—Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M.—Topic, Praise and Thanksgiving.

Scripture Reading.—Ps. ciii.—"Bless the Lord, all His works, in all places of His dominion! Bless the Lord, O my soul!"

To receive benefits and not express appreciation is universally condemned. The old adage "One good turn deserves another" shows the general sense of the people that a kindness given should be reciprocated. The obligation goes deeper than the mere outward act. As a deed of love outwardly expresses the inner feeling of affection, so the person receiving it should not only show outward signs of gratitude, but is under obligation to regard the benefactor with thankfulness and affection. Nothing so fully reveals an evil heart as ingratitude. It is the basest of sins and leads to the foulest crimes. Gratitude is the safeguard of the soul. One who finds himself lacking in real hearty gratitude for benefits received should be alarmed and set about correcting his condition. To receive attentions and gifts as a matter of course and right does not indicate a royal soul, as some seem to think, but does show the spirit of the pauper and perhaps the thief.

The person who chafes under the reception of gifts and is restless until an exact equivalent has been returned also exhibits a mean and essentially unthankful disposition. True nobility of nature finds joy in receiving attentions, gifts and expressions of regard, conscious that they are outward signs of inner friendliness. All genuine worthiness rejoices to receive tokens of regard, but finds greater pleasure in giving. It is natural, indeed inevitable, that a full fountain should overflow. So all generous natures spontaneously gush out with helpfulness to others, and are happiest when making others happy. So, when they receive from others they are pleased, because they recognized in others the same blessed springs of action they possess themselves and share in the happiness of mutual possession.

The devout soul sees God in all he has of goods and blessings. He recognizes the Divine One as everywhere present in the world in power and merciful kindness. He recognizes his obligation to the Lord for life and all its benefits. Gratitude springs up, and the more he knows of God in Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit the more freely does he come to believe in and trust the Father all holy, and in equal measure the inner life is filled with praise and the mouth is filled with thanksgiving.

At this season of the year the ingathering of harvests leads to formal expressions of gratitude to God the Giver. The public service is valuable. The national thanksgiving with all its time honored festivities should be kept, but personal gratitude should lead to more than this. It requires complete enlistment of all powers in the service of Him who is "the giver of every good and perfect gift."

City Road Chapel.

Beyond question the most noted church building in Methodism is the Wesley chapel, City Road, London. The parish church at Epworth is not now and never was the property of Methodists, but always belonged to the church of England. The "Old Foundry" was the first preaching house of the denomination in London, but has long since disappeared. At City Road chapel was the favorite residence of John Wesley. His house is still occupied by the superintendent of the circuit and by a museum of Wesley mementos recently collected there for preservation. The interior of the chapel remains in much the same condition as it was when Wesley preached there. It stands back quite a distance from the street. On the opposite side of the street is Bunhill Fields burying ground, where Susannah Wesley, the mother of John, lies buried. The body of John Wesley lies in a tomb behind the chapel. Ten others are buried in the same tomb, and 5,000 Methodists lie buried near their great leader.

CITY ROAD CHAPEL.

The Inscription.

For many hundreds of years the meaning of the picture writing on the obelisks and temple walls of Egypt was unknown. In the latter part of the last century the key to the mystery was found, and now the multitude can read the message of the monuments. One of the most ancient of inscriptions in the land is that written on the obelisk of On. The translation of it reads: "The Horus, the living from his birth; the king of upper and lower Egypt, Ra Kheper Ka; lord of the two diadems, son of the sun, Usertesen, the loved of the god of Heliopolis from his birth, ever living. The golden Horus, the good god, Ra Kheper Ka, to the celebration of the panegyry. He (has) made (this obelisk) the eternal generator."

More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of, wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain
If, knowing God, they lift not hands in prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friends?
For so the whole round world is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

—Henry Elliott Mott.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 20—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—"Praise the Lord."—Ps. cxlvii, 1-20. (A Thanksgiving meeting.)

It is probable that this psalm was an anthem written for use in the second tempie. It praises God for various attributes, but especially commemorates His goodness in bringing back His people from their captivity and rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem. "The Lord doth built up Jerusalem; He gathereth together the outcasts of Israel." This psalm suggests that we should—

1. Praise the Lord for spiritual blessings (verses 1-6). The greatest blessings that came as a result of the return from the captivity were the spiritual blessings, and the psalmist gives directly as a cause for praise to the Lord that "He healeth the broken in heart and bindeth up the wounds." God has given us great spiritual blessings in the past year, for which we should render thanks and praise unto Him. Skepticism and rationalism are on the decline, and an unusual interest is manifested in various ways in the highest and truest forms of spirituality. Today in the religious life of the world is pre-eminently the day of the Holy Ghost.

2. Praise the Lord for temporal blessings (verses 7-11). "Sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving * * * who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh the grass to grow upon the mountains. He giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens, which cry." God's providential care of both man and beast calls for our continual thanksgiving. Our country has been especially and wonderfully blessed in temporal blessing the past year. While some nations have suffered recently from failure of crops, our barns have been full and overflowing. This year has been no exception. Fruits abundant have been borne by our trees, and our fields have yielded unusual crops—causes of thanksgiving to God.

3. Praise the Lord for ecclesiastical blessings (verses 12-15). For protection, for blessing, for peace and plenty the church is called upon to praise the Lord. The church today richly and abundantly enjoys all these blessings. It has protection. It never was more secure from danger and harm. The children of the church have been abundantly blessed. The church has peace. It never had a more desirable peace. Ecclesiastical strifes and contentions have almost disappeared. It is the era of ecclesiastical good feeling, and Christian endeavor has done much to make it so.

4. Praise the Lord for national blessings (verse 20). "He hath not dealt so with any nation." The history of the past year again applies these words to our beloved nation. He hath given us a wonderful victory over our enemies at an unusually small cost, in an unexpectedly short time. For what greater blessings could we thank God as a nation than for decisive victory in war and a speedy peace?

Bible Readings. — Ps. xxxiv, 1-8; xlviii, 1; l, 14, 23; lxvi, 1, 2; lxxv, 1; lxxxi, 1-3; lxxxix, 1-7; xcii, 1-5; xcv, 1, 2; c, 1-5; ciii, 1-5; cvii, 1-8; II Cor. ix, 10-12; Phil. iv, 6; Col. ii, 6, 7; iv, 2; Rev. vii, 11, 12.

Not Under Control.

Sometimes at sea a ship is found flying the signal, "Not under control." That is a very terrible signal. So long as the machinery and rudder and the rigging are sound and the ship is under complete control she may weather the strongest gale, but now she lies helpless at the mercy of wind and wave. No rescuing ship even dare come very near, for "not under control" means that she is a menace to others as well as herself. So in life we find far too often a man whose conduct indicates that the forces of his life are not under control. That is a sad and dangerous condition, dangerous for himself and for those about him. Safely lies in keeping the elements of character so adjusted that they are always under control, that thus we may keep our manhood true to its divine course.—Universalist Leader.

Laziness of Mind.

There is a laziness of the mind as well as of the body. People loaf mentally as well as physically. One is to be despised quite as much as the other. The man or boy who sits about on street corners and in stores telling idle tales is no more a social nuisance than is he who dawdles over his studies or dreams away the hours wool gathering which should be employed in planning and thinking about the serious problems of life. The mind should be held quite as rigidly to discipline as the body, for an aimless, wandering, unappliable mind will destroy one's usefulness quite as much as a slothful, flabby, unskilled body.—Churchman.

Swearing.

General Washington, it is said, once uttered an oath, and his example is presented as an excuse for the profanity of other men, but with the statement General Washington's opinion of swearing should always be joined. He said, "This is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it."—Congregationalist.

Mistakes.

People who make mistakes are those who quarrel with one another before their children or who allow the latter to grow up in idleness, those who talk about their troubles before strangers, the father who tells his children to go the way he does not go himself and the young woman who does not make a confidant of her mother.—Lutheran Observer.

Only One Design.

A sculptor has many models from which he chisels various statues, though one may be his masterpiece, but when I come into the Lord's studio I find only one design—that we should be made in the likeness of Jesus Christ.—Bishop Baldwin.

Local-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Hier bestand einige Jahre ein „Institut für Realkredit- und Wechseldiskont," das sich angeblich mit Vermittelung von Hypotheken- und anderen Geldern befaßte. In Wahrheit hat es nur Geldsuchende in zahllosen Fällen um die zu zahlenden Gebühren betrogen, ohne daran zu denken, ihnen zu helfen. Die Betrogenen wohnen in allen Gauen des deutschen Reiches. Die Inhaber dieses Schwindelunternehmens, Alwin Guido Schmieder und Alfred Ewald Matschke, wurden zu je vier Jahren Gefängniß, 3000 Mark Geldstrafe und fünf Jahren Ehrverlust vom Landgericht in Dresden verurtheilt.

Chemnitz. Das hiesige Landgericht verurtheilte den 13 Jahre alten, bisher noch unbestraften Schulknaben Schulze aus Neudorf zu zwei Jahren Gefängniß! Der Knabe hat zweimal faustgroße Steine auf die Eisenbahnschienen gelegt und mit Steinen eine Warnungstafel der Bahn herabgeworfen. Die Steine wurden von der Lokomotive bei Seite geschoben.

Leipzig. Der hiesige Zoologische Garten, bisher unter großen Opfern durch Herrn Ernst Pinkert unterhalten, ist in eine Aktiengesellschaft umgewandelt worden, welcher im Interesse der Gemeinnützigkeit des Unternehmens durch die städtischen Behörden sehr große Vortheile gewährt wurden. Die Stadt behält sich nach Ablauf von 70 Jahren das Ankaufrecht vor.

Pirna. Dieser Tage wurden an der sächsisch-böhmischen Grenze in Bodenbach zwei Engländer verhaftet, von denen der eine vor mehreren Monaten einen größeren Diebstahl in einem englischen Bankhause, wo er angestellt war, verübt hatte. In Gemeinschaft mit einem Studenten sich der Beamte nach Deutschland. Im Besitz der Beiden wurden noch 500 Gulden vorgefunden; die unterschlagene Summe gibt der Beamte selbst mit 20,000 Mark an.

Thüringische Staaten.

Eisenach. Der hiesige Gemeinderath setzte die Lehrergehälter auf 1400 Mark Anfangsgehalt bis zu 3000 Mark Höchstgehalt nach 25 Dienstjahren steigend fest. Die hiesigen Lehrerstellen sind demnach die bestbesoldeten im Großherzogthum. Der Mehraufwand, welcher dem Stadtsäckel durch die vorgenommene Gehaltserhöhung erwächst, beziffert sich auf 16,300 Mark.

Jena. Der Verein für Feuerbestattung dahier hat seit der verhältnißmäßig kurzen Zeit von der Inbetriebsetzung seines Verbrennungsofens an, also etwa innerhalb acht Monaten, bereits 15 Leichenverbrennungen vorgenommen.

Koburg. Ein alter 95er Veteran von 1870, der nicht genannt sein will, hat für hilfsbedürftige Veteranen des dahier liegenden dritten Bataillons des 6. thüringischen Infanterie-Regiments Nr. 95 und für deren hilfsbedürftige Hinterbliebene eine Stiftung von 10,000 Mark gemacht. Die Vertheilung der Zinsen soll jährlich am Jahrestage der Schlacht bei Wörth erfolgen.

Freie Städte.

Hamburg. Der Senat hat bei der Bürgerschaft die Anlage eines neuen an die Hamburg-Amerikalinie zu verpachtenden Hafens auf Kuhwärder beantragt, dessen Kosten sich auf 20,500,000 Mark belaufen; die jährliche Pacht beläuft sich auf 800,000 Mark, die Pachtdauer auf 25 Jahre.

Bremen. Der aus Moabit entsprungene Raubmörder Schiffer Erpel ist in dem benachbarten Dorfe Hastedt durch einen Bremischen Landdragoner festgenommen worden. Erpel, der sehr heruntergekommen in seinem Aeußeren war, hatte sich dadurch verdächtig gemacht, daß er ein werthvolles neues Fahrrad zu veräußern suchte. Bei seiner Festnahme wurden viele Goldsachen in den Taschen seiner Kleidung gefunden.

Lübeck. Die Uebelthäter, die kürzlich das große Hünengrab bei Waldhusen stark verwüsteten und auf deren Ermittelung die Behörde eine Belohnung von 100 Mark aussetzte, sind jetzt ermittelt. Es sind drei Schüler des hiesigen Katharineums (höhere Lehranstalt) und ein Kaufmannslehrling, die einer strengen Bestrafung um so mehr entgegensehen, als die drei angehenden Studenten sich des Werthes des Alterthums bewußt sein mußten.

Oldenburg.

Sande. Bei der Wahl von fünf Kirchenvertretern wurden die Anhänger der sozialdemokratischen Partei sämmtlich gewählt. Der Grund für diese Wahl mag darin zu finden sein, daß in der letzten Zeit erhebliche Kosten für die neue Kirche und namentlich für ein neues Pfarrhaus bewilligt sind, die Gemeinde aber nicht reich ist.

CHAPTER III.

The audience, delighted with Cyrano's wit, roared with laughter, and the viscount turned his back and started to leave.

Cyrano doubled up as if seized with sudden cramps and called out, "Aie, aie!"

"What is he saying?" said the viscount, turning back.

"The cramp in my sword," said Cyrano. "It comes of leaving it in idleness; it is getting stiff, I vow."

"Good!" and the viscount drew his sword for answer, exclaiming contemptuously, "Poet!"

"In proof of which I'll compose a ballade while we fence," said Cyrano, and then he went on in a singsong voice as if he had been reciting a lesson, that a ballade should contain three eight verse couplets and an envoi of four lines. "I'll make one while we fight and touch you at the final line."

"No!" exclaimed the viscount.

"No?" said Cyrano, and he began to declaim:

"The duel in Hotel of Burgundy—fought by De Bergerac and a good for naught."

Marquises and officers mingled in the pit with the common people. Pages climbed on one another's shoulders, the ladies leaned over from the galleries to see the better. "Give room! Great sport!" called out the audience as a space was hastily cleared in the center.

Roxane, pale as a lily, leaned forward to watch her cousin and her suitor fight. Cyrano as he fought, composed, suiting every act to the word. And this was his ballade of the duel:

I gayly doff my beaver low,
And, freeing hand and heel,
My heavy mantle off I throw
And draw my polished steel.
Graceful as Phœbus, round I wheel,
Alert as Scaramouch.
A word in your ear, sir spark, I steal,
At the envoi's end, I touch!
[They engage.]

Better for you had you lain low.
Where skewer my cock? In the heel?
In the heart? Your ribbon blue below?
In the hip and make you kneel?
Ho for the music of clashing steel!
What now? A hit? Not much!
'Twill be in the paunch, the stroke I steal,
When, at the envoi's end, I touch!

You wriggle, starch white, my eel.
A rhyme, a rhyme! The white feather you show!
Jac, I parry the point of your steel!
The point you hoped I should feel!
I open the line, so now clutch
Your spit, sir scullion—show your zeal!
At the envoi's end, I touch!

He declaims solemnly:

Prince, pray heaven for your soul's weal!
I move a pace—lo, such and such!
Cut over—feint! [Thrusting] What ho, you reel?
[The viscount staggers. Cyrano salutes.]
At the envoi's end, I touch!

And with the word he pierced the viscount. All was confusion in an instant. Ragueneau danced about the hero of the hour. Cyrano's bosom friend, Le Bret, hovered near him, anxious in his happiness. Valvert's friends bore him away. Women applauded. Noblemen congratulated the fighter. Roxane's eyes looked down upon him. The buffet girl pressed the great man to eat.

"Ah," cried he, "I have no money!"

Blushing, she put all the contents of the buffet at his service.

"I could not take them from you, child," he said, "so keen is our Gascon pride. But fear of hurting you outweighs the pride. There, these few grapes, this water, a half a macaroon—and leave to kiss your hand for dessert."

Deeper grew the little maid's blushes.

"I thank you, sir," she said and courtesied out of sight.

"She admired you," said Le Bret.

"She? Ah! Admired me—but another does not. How could I hope it? Look you on my nose. Where'er I go it is still a quarter of a mile ahead of me—ridiculous, hideous. And I—of course I love the fairest, the most brilliant, most refined, most golden haired—a sweet perfumed rose, full of unconscious charms. Ah me!"

"Your cousin, Madeline?" cried Le Bret.

"My cousin Madeline, Roxane—the beauty and the wit—Roxane."

"She was death white the duel through."

"Pale at my danger? She?" cried Cyrano. And he himself grew pale at the thought. He trembled now.

And while he trembled and whitened the duenna of fair Roxane came gliding to his side.

"My lady goes to mass at St. Roch tomorrow," she whispered. "On the way there she craves speech with her most valiant cousin."

"My God, with me?" cried Cyrano, faint with rapture.

"Will you be there?"

"Will I be there? Oh, madame, without fail!"

He arranges a rendezvous at the pastry house of Ragueneau for 7 in the evening. In his ecstasy of delight Cyrano falls into Le Bret's arms and cries: "Le Bret, Le Bret! You heard what yonder departing lady said? Roxane, Roxane knows I live!"

"You are sad no more," jested Le Bret.

"Let the world go burn!" cried Cyrano in a passion of valor. "I've ten hearts in my breast now and a score of arms!"

Had Cyrano had time to dream, that night would have passed in ecstasy of hope, but there was other work cut out for him. He might not spend the hours of darkness tormenting himself with whimsical imaginings about his deformity and with golden anticipations roused by the beloved Roxane's message. His sword had work to do, and, though that work might lay him low and close his eyes forever before they rested on the face of his beloved, he must do it. A hundred men threatened Ligniere, the drunkard, the balladist, the man whose verse had stung the great De Guiche, the man whom Cyrano de Bergerac named friend.

RICHARD MANSFIELD AS CYRANO.

"But, prithee, why embroil yourself for him?" demanded Le Bret when Cyrano, forgetful of the roseate Roxane, had gripped his sword to use upon the hundred cutthroat hirelings of De Guiche. "He's but a wine cask at the best."

"He is my friend, and for this reason is he dear to me. His love was a lady of devout ways—and Ligniere, whom water poisons, saw her white fingers touch a font of holy water—little lilies ruffling a clear pond. Swiftly he seized the stoup and drained to the last drop the water her finger tips had sanctified. Was it not a pretty thing? Shall I not be proud to name him friend? And shall I not lead the charge upon those who seek to do him harm? Bear me no aid, I pray you, gentlemen, when I fall—fall upon them. Come you, if you will, but watchers be, not actors. Ahead of you at 20 paces I, all alone, shall dare them. Come on!"

They followed him to see the sport—those gay Parisians, to whom all things were but a spectacle. And the sight they witnessed drove them mad with delight. Cyrano bore down upon the thugs like an avalanche. Before his fury they fled away. Those who would have withstood him fell beneath his sword. There was no resisting him. The joy of battle against fearful odds was upon him. The message from Roxane sang itself in his heart. No man could hold his own against the strong son of Gascony.

How he escaped the crowd that pressed upon him, eager to touch his hand, eager to felicitate him, it is hard telling. But somehow he managed it. When the last flying form of his foes had sped through the nebulous moonlight, before the nobles and the officers who had witnessed the affair could seize Cyrano to bear him to his lodgings in triumph, he was gone. Hurrying to his house, they did not find him.

He walked deserted streets and quays while the moon traveled mistily down the sky and the sun rose up through a ruddy smoke in the east. A thousand times he addressed Roxane in fancy. The blood that rushed swiftly through his veins after the fight throbbed to her name now that battle was done. In lines that wove themselves together like the tendrils of a vine he addressed her. The lilt of birds' songs, the sobbing of the sea, colors like gems, perfumes as of flowers, all mingled in his senses as he framed the speech in which he would address her. Then, silhouetted on a gray wall, he would catch sight of his reflection. Grotesque, ungainly, monstrous, his nose was cut in the black shadow. His words took wing and his heart sank at the memory of that fatal nose.

Long before St. Roch's worshipers had left the chapel, he was at the pastry cook's. He paced up and down. His eyes took in the burnished brightness of the copper pans, the sputtering flames where from a fowl revolving on a spit a drop of grease would fall. He looked upon the plates high heaped with tarts and cakes. He saw a swaggering musketeer pay compliments to Lise, the buxom wife of Ragueneau. He saw Ragueneau, connoisseur of cakes and couplets, composer of tarts and triolets, adept at poetry and at pies, bustling about his shop, blind to the musketeer, keenly alive to the hungry poets whom he fed—at so many verses a meal.

CHAPTER IV.

But though Cyrano's eyes saw all the scene, but one thought filled his mind—Roxane. Would she never come? Would the slow minutes never drag themselves by? He whiled away the tedious time by writing her a love letter. Words ran like liquid fire from his pen, and, looking up, he saw that she had come. He bowed low to her duenna.

"Love von sweets, madame?" he asked. "Yes? Take then these cream cakes—see, I put them in a sonnet of M. Benserade, and here are little puffs—six of them, done up in a poem by St. Armant—and here are hot cakes. Go, I beg, and eat them and come not back until the last crumb is eaten."

Laden with her sweet spoils, the duenna withdrew.

"And now," said he, turning to Roxane and uncovering, "I bless the hour when you remembered that I lived. You come to tell me"—

"That I thank you first of all. Your brave blade yesterday at the play smote down the man a great lord seeks to make my husband.

"Aye—husband a la mode," said Cyrano. "I thank my destiny that I fought not for my ugliness alone, but for your beauty also."

"And—more than that have I to say. But be again my cousin of old days. Play we were once again two children frolicking at Bergerac. So shall I speak with better grace and surer courage. Your sword was then of reeds, and all I bade you do you did."

"Aye, for my cousin Madeline that's now Roxane the beauty."

"Was I fair then?"

"Not altogether ill to see."

"Remember you how all your scratches I would bind, but scold you, motherwise, at first? Give me your hand so, now. What, cousin! Here's a scratch indeed! When got you that?"

Cyrano tugged his hand away.

"A game last night," he answered. "I got it playing at the Porte de Nesle."

"Now I will bind your wounds again as in the old days there at Bergerac. With my own kerchief, see, I wipe away the blood. How many fought you?"

"Oh, a hundred!"

"Tell me true. You jest with me."

"Nay, what of that? Tell you what is the other thing you came to speak to me."

"Draw not your hand away, dear cousin. Be but the Cyrano I knew long since in Bergerac and I am bold to speak. Bend low and listen. I—I love."

"Ah!" breathed Cyrano.

"And he—knows not—guesses not!"

The room swam before Cyrano's eyes. He held his breath.

"He knows not yet, but soon he shall learn it. Bend lower. Listen. He—has loved me from afar. I saw. He dares not speak."

There was a cloud of rose and amethyst before Cyrano's dazzled eyes. He scarce could bear his happiness—his hand in hers, her words in his ear, her whisper on his cheek.

"Draw not your hand away, dear cousin. Hear me still. He—a chance—he is of your regiment—cadet of your own company!"

It was as though she rained spirit kisses on his lips. He half fainted with ecstasy.

"His brow," she went on—"his brow bears genius' stamp. He is noble, proud, valorous—and fair."

"Fair!" cried Cyrano, springing to his feet.

In a copper pan his face was reflected—misshapen. Cyrano had awakened from his dream.

"Why, cousin, what is it? What ails you?" begged Roxane.

"The—scratch—your hands had dressed, my gentle cousin. It stung again," he smiled. "But—tell me now his name. How can I serve you?"

"He is Baron Christian de Neuvillette. This day he joins the guards. I know he loves me. Eyes are eloquent—aye, and gossips, too."

"But you, my cousin, how know you that you love him? You delight in wit. Suppose his wit were slow? You love fancy. What were his fancy dull?"

"It is not. I know it is not!" cried Roxane, stamping her foot. Cyrano paused.

"How may I serve you?" he asked.

"Cousin, he joins your Gascon regiment, and I hear that you provoke all but pure Gascons who are admitted there. I trembled for him—till I saw you—invincible, all conquering. Then said I, 'If my cousin would' "—

"I will befriend your little baron," said Cyrano, the soul of generosity.

"You promise you'll do this for me? You'll be his friend? You'll let him fight no duels? They'll put no affront upon your protege?"

"I swear," said Cyrano.

Roxane paused. She took her veil, her mask.

"I've always held my cousin tenderly," she said. "How good you are!"

She blew him a kiss airily from her finger tips.

"Tell me of last night's fray?" she pressed him politely. "A hundred men, you said? You'll bid my Christian write? What odds against you, bravest coz? Another time you'll tell me all. How well you fought, how well!"

"I have fought better since," he answered and bowed low to let her pass. Roxane did not catch his meaning.

When she, veiled and masked again, had glided from the pastry cook's, Cyrano stood erect and stiff. Sorrow's shaft had transfixed him where he stood. He was blind and deaf to all about him for a few seconds. Then a door flung open. Pellmell a crowd rushed in.

"Cyrano!" cried voices.

"Hero!"

"Cyrano, Cyrano!"

Ragueneau, upset by the excitement, dashed hither and thither. Half of Cyrano's regiment crowded about him. Nobles and actors, poets and artists pushed and shoved to get nearer the hero of the last night's fray. The captain of the Gascon company, Carbon de Castel-Jaloux, was at the head of his men.

"They seek you, Cyrano, to call you brother, to embrace you, to hear"—

"I would not see—I am not—I desire not"— began Cyrano, sick at heart.

"The hero has the sulks, my Gascons!" cried Carbon. But, regardless of the feelings of the hero, the men crowded around, saluting and embracing their comrade. Nobles who the day before had not known the Gascon fighter begged to present him to fair and haughty dames who waited but to know him. Rich men tried to patronize him. The great De Guiche himself entered the pastry shop to congratulate the man who had overcome his own hirelings. Versifiers begged permission to make rhymes upon his exploit. Interviewers sought the privilege of writing of his exploit for The Court Gazette. But Cyrano to all was curt and spurned the flatteries.

De Guiche, whose manners were a little too fine to be good, expressed his admiration rather badly:

"So marvelous a feat I could not credit had I not heard these gentlemen swear they saw it. You are brave, sir. And you serve in that company of hotheads, the Gascons?"

"With the cadets," said Cyrano.

"My company is here assembled," said Carbon de Castel-Jaloux. "Cyrano, present them to the count, if you please."

TO BE CONTINUED.

COL. HAY'S LAWSUIT.

The New Secretary of State Fighting About Lake Sunapee.

John Hay, the new Secretary of State, is the leading plaintiff in an important case, the facts in which are now being ascertained by a referee appointed by the New Hampshire Supreme Court.

Legally associated with Mr. Hay are Professors John D. Quackenbush and William A. Dunning of New York, Colonel W. S. B. Hopkins of Worcester, Mass., and others.

These gentlemen have built summer homes on the shores of Lake Sunapee, the most beautiful jewel in New Hampshire's girdle of lacustrine gems. So far as variety of scenery, vigor of climate and ease of access are concerned, this lake is an ideal summer resort, and every succeeding year finds its charms more widely known and more warmly praised.

But for land owners upon its shores there is one black cloud in Sunapee's blue sky. By an old grant of the New Hampshire Legislature a corporation known as the Sunapee Dam Co. was given power to regulate the flow of the lake through its principal outlet, Sugar River. This stream furnishes water power for several large manufactories and the Sunapee Dam Company keeps the water in the lake at a convenient height for that purpose. The result is that the summer residents, whose boathouses, wharves and grounds line the lake shore, find their property submerged for a part of the time, and, again, separated from the water's edge by a stretch of unsightly beach.

In fact, the corporation has caused so much complaint that the inhabitants around the lake frequently transpose the first two words of the company's title, in referring to it.

Other means of redressing their grievances having been tried and found wanting, the summer residents decided to take their case into court. Its decision will establish an important legal principle as to the riparian rights throughout New Hampshire, and perhaps in other states as well.

The distinguished gentlemen named as plaintiffs think they have invested sufficient money on the shores of this New Hampshire lake to be justified in expecting to draw dividends of undisturbed enjoyment.

Secretary Hay's villa is commodious, comfortable and suited to its surroundings, though it would not look out of place if transported to Newport or Bar Harbor. Twenty-five miles across the country, at Holderness, is the summer home of John G. Nicolay, who was Colonel Hay's co-worker on the monumental life of Lincoln.

A little colony of musical, literary and theatrical personages make Sunapee their home of a summer season. It has had, however, no Whittier to sing its charms and no persistent railroad advertising to bring it into national notice and popularity. In the minds of Col. Hay and his companion plaintiffs, this freedom from publicity is one of the lake's chief charms.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

Golden Text.—If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.—1 John i: 9. Nov. 20, 1898.

9. "So Manasseh made Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to err and to do worse than the heathen whom the Lord had destroyed before the children of Israel." This is a summary of the previous part of this chapter concerning the sins of Manasseh, who began to reign when he was 12 years old and reigned 55 years in Jerusalem. He shed innocent blood very much until he had filled Jerusalem from one end to another (II Kings xxi, 16). He wrought much evil in the sight of the Lord to provoke Him to anger. Then think of the people of God acting worse than the heathen who knew not God, and even worshiping an idol, a carved image, in the house of God, where He had put His name and His glory! What a contrast to the conduct of his father, Hezekiah, who for the most part wrought good and right and truth before the Lord his God (chapter xxxi, 20). How could such a good father have such a bad son? But it is not an uncommon story. Consider the sons of Eli and of Samuel and of David. How could sinful King Ahaz, because of whose sins the Lord brought Judah low (chapter xxviii, 19), have such a good son as Hezekiah? His mother's name was Abi, the daughter of Zacharlah (II Kings, xviii, 2), and to her possibly much is due. But Manasseh's mother was Hephzibah (my delight is in her), and if there is anything in a name he, too, may have had a good mother (II Kings xxi, 1). Our heavenly Father knows what it is to have rebellious children (Isa. i, 2), and when He permits us to have rebellious children it is a ground of fellowship with Him.

10. "And the Lord spake to Manasseh, and to his people, but they would not hearken." Oh, how often the Lord has to say concerning those whom He would love to bless that they would not let Him, they would not listen to Him, they would not come to Him (Isa. xxx, 15; Math. xxiii, 37; John v, 40). If we only would receive His word with meekness, yield fully to Him and be willing and obedient, how much of heaven we might have upon the earth! How earnestly God cries to His people by His servants, the prophets, as, for example, in Jer. iii, 13, 14. "Only acknowledge thine iniquity; turn, O back-sliding children, saith the Lord, for I am married unto you." See also Ezek. xviii, 30-32; xxxiii, 11, etc.

11. "Wherefore the Lord brought upon them the captains of the host of the king of Assyria, which took Manasseh among the thorns and bound him with fetters and carried him to Babylon." Thus he found some reaping, for whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap, and they who sow the wind may reap the whirlwind (Gal. vi, 7; Hos. viii, 7). Affliction is often the best thing that can come to one who is wandering from God. God is not willing that any should perish, and if sinners will not listen to gracious words of love He will seek to win them by chastening, as He has said in Job xxxiii, 29, 30.

12. "And when he was in affliction he besought the Lord His God and humbled himself greatly before the God of His fathers." It is often the case that only in affliction will a soul turn to the Lord, even as it is written in Hos. v, 15, "In their affliction they will seek me early." It will be seen on a larger scale some day, for it is written in Isa. xxvi, 9, "When Thy judgments are in the earth, the inhabitants of the world will learn righteousness." Even the fearful judgments of Rev. ix and xvi are intended, if possible, to bring men to repentance. See Rev. ix, 20, 21; xvi, 9, 11. Pride and self will are born in us as the results of Adam's sin, the work of the devil, and all people are either Cains or Abels, the former proudly resisting God and His salvation, and the latter humbly confessing their sins and accepting His way of redemption. The Pharisees when our Lord was on earth were of the line of Cain, religious, but proud and hating God and His way.

13. "And prayed unto Him and He was entreated of him and heard his supplication and brought him again to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh knew that the Lord He was God." Manasseh was evidently a true penitent, and God's ear is ever open to such. It is always true for such on God's part. "Him that cometh unto me I will in no wise cast out" (John vi, 37). It is written in I Chron. v, 20, concerning some of Israel that they cried to God in the battle and He was entreated of them, because they put their trust in Him. Ezra says in chapter viii, 23, "So we fasted and besought our God for this and He was entreated of us." As to the mercy which is with God for the greatest sinner who with true penitence turns to Him we need only consider the case of the penitent thief or of Saul of Tarsus. But who could be greater in sin than this son of Hezekiah?

14. "Now after this he built a wall without the city of David." The building of this wall and the placing of captains of war in the fenced cities does not imply any lack of trust in God, but is rather suggestive of keeping the Lord's property for the Lord.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Lesson For the Week Beginning Nov. 20—Comment by Rev. W. J. Yates, A. M.—Topic, Praise and Thanksgiving.

Scripture Reading.—Ps. ciii.—"Bless the Lord, all His works, in all places of His dominion! Bless the Lord, O my soul!"

To receive benefits and not express appreciation is universally condemned. The old adage "One good turn deserves another" shows the general sense of the people that a kindness given should be reciprocated. The obligation goes deeper than the mere outward act. As a deed of love outwardly expresses the inner feeling of affection, so the person receiving it should not only show outward signs of gratitude, but is under obligation to regard the benefactor with thankfulness and affection. Nothing so fully reveals an evil heart as ingratitude. It is the basest of sins and leads to the foulest crimes. Gratitude is the safeguard of the soul. One who finds himself lacking in real hearty gratitude for benefits received should be alarmed and set about correcting his condition. To receive attentions and gifts as a matter of course and right does not indicate a royal soul, as some seem to think, but does show the spirit of the pauper and perhaps the thief.

The person who chafes under the reception of gifts and is restless until an exact equivalent has been returned also exhibits a mean and essentially unthankful disposition. True nobility of nature finds joy in receiving attentions, gifts and expressions of regard, conscious that they are outward signs of inner friendliness. All genuine worthiness rejoices to receive tokens of regard, but finds greater pleasure in giving. It is natural, indeed inevitable, that a full fountain should overflow. So all generous natures spontaneously gush out with helpfulness to others, and are happiest when making others happy. So, when they receive from others they are pleased, because they recognized in others the same blessed springs of action they possess themselves and share in the happiness of mutual posession.

The devout soul sees God in all he has of goods and blessings. He recognizes the Divine One as everywhere present in the world in power and merciful kindness. He recognizes his obligation to the Lord for life and all its benefits. Gratitude springs up, and the more he knows of God in Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit the more freely does he come to believe in and trust the Father all holy, and in equal measure the inner life is filled with praise and the mouth is filled with thanksgiving.

At this season of the year the ingathering of harvests leads to formal expressions of gratitude to God the Giver. The public service is valuable. The national thanksgiving with all its time honored festivities should be kept, but personal gratitude should lead to more than this. It requires complete enlistment of all powers in the service of Him who is "the giver of every good and perfect gift."

City Road Chapel.

Beyond question the most noted church building in Methodism is the Wesley chapel, City Road, London. The parish church at Epworth is not now and never was the property of Methodists, but always belonged to the church of England. The "Old Foundry" was the first preaching house of the denomination in London, but has long since disappeared. At City Road chapel was the favorite residence of John Wesley. His house is still occupied by the superintendent of the circuit and by a museum of Wesley mementos recently collected there for preservation. The interior of the chapel remains in much the same condition as it was when Wesley preached there. It stands back quite a distance from the street. On the opposite side of the street is Bunhill Fields burying ground, where Susannah Wesley, the mother of John, lies buried. The body of John Wesley lies in a tomb behind the chapel. Ten others are buried in the same tomb, and 5,000 Methodists lie buried near their great leader.

CITY ROAD CHAPEL.

The Inscription.

For many hundreds of years the meaning of the picture writing on the obelisks and temple walls of Egypt was unknown. In the latter part of the last century the key to the mystery was found, and now the multitude can read the message of the monuments. One of the most ancient of inscriptions in the land is that written on the obelisk of On. The translation of it reads: "The Horus, the living from his birth; the king of upper and lower Egypt, Ra Kheper Ka; lord of the two diadems, son of the sun, Usertesen, the loved of the god of Heliopolis from his birth, ever living. The golden Horus, the good god, Ra Kheper Ka, to the celebration of the panegyry. He (has) made (this obelisk) the eternal generator."

More things are wrought by prayer
Than this world dreams of, wherefore let thy voice
Rise like a fountain for me night and day.
For what are men better than sheep or goats
That nourish a blind life within the brain
If, knowing God, they lift not hands in prayer
Both for themselves and those who call them friends?
For so the whole round world is every way
Bound by gold chains about the feet of God.

—Henry Elliott Mott.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Topic For the Week Beginning Nov. 20—Comment by Rev. S. H. Doyle.

Topic.—"Praise the Lord."—Ps. cxlvii, 1-20. (A Thanksgiving meeting.)

It is probable that this psalm was an anthem written for use in the second temple. It praises God for various attributes, but especially commemorates His goodness in bringing back His people from their captivity and rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem. "The Lord doth built up Jerusalem; He gathereth together the outcasts of Israel." This psalm suggests that we should—

1. Praise the Lord for spiritual blessings (verses 1-6). The greatest blessings that came as a result of the return from the captivity were the spiritual blessings, and the psalmist gives directly as a cause for praise to the Lord that "He healeth the broken in heart and bindeth up the wounds." God has given us great spiritual blessings in the past year, for which we should render thanks and praise unto Him. Skepticism and rationalism are on the decline, and an unusual interest is manifested in various ways in the highest and truest forms of spirituality. Today in the religious life of the world is pre-eminently the day of the Holy Ghost.

2. Praise the Lord for temporal blessings (verses 7-11). "Sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving * * * who covereth the heaven with clouds, who prepareth rain for the earth, who maketh the grass to grow upon the mountains. He giveth to the beast his food, and to the young ravens, which cry." God's providential care of both man and beast calls for our continual thanksgiving. Our country has been especially and wonderfully blessed in temporal blessing the past year. While some nations have suffered recently from failure of crops, our barns have been full and overflowing. This year has been no exception. Fruits abundant have been borne by our trees, and our fields have yielded unusual crops—causes of thanksgiving to God.

3. Praise the Lord for ecclesiastical blessings (verses 12-15). For protection, for blessing, for peace and plenty the church is called upon to praise the Lord. The church today richly and abundantly enjoys all these blessings. It has protection. It never was more secure from danger and harm. The children of the church have been abundantly blessed. The church has peace. It never had a more desirable peace. Ecclesiastical strifes and contentions have almost disappeared. It is the era of ecclesiastical good feeling, and Christian endeavor has done much to make it so.

4. Praise the Lord for national blessings (verse 20). "He hath not dealt so with any nation." The history of the past year again applies these words to our beloved nation. He hath given us a wonderful victory over our enemies at an unusually small cost, in an unexpectedly short time. For what greater blessings could we thank God as a nation than for decisive victory in war and a speedy peace?

Bible Readings. — Ps. xxxiv, 1-8; xlviii, 1; l, 14, 23; lxvi, 1, 2; lxxv, 1; lxxxi, 1-3; lxxxix, 1-7; xcii, 1-5; xcv, 1, 2; c, 1-5; ciii, 1-5; cvii, 1-8; II Cor. ix, 10-12; Phil. iv, 6; Col. ii, 6, 7; iv, 2; Rev. vii, 11, 12.

Not Under Control.

Sometimes at sea a ship is found flying the signal, "Not under control." That is a very terrible signal. So long as the machinery and rudder and the rigging are sound and the ship is under complete control she may weather the strongest gale, but now she lies helpless at the mercy of wind and wave. No rescuing ship even dare come very near, for "not under control" means that she is a menace to others as well as herself. So in life we find far too often a man whose conduct indicates that the forces of his life are not under control. That is a sad and dangerous condition, dangerous for himself and for those about him. Safely lies in keeping the elements of character so adjusted that they are always under control, that thus we may keep our manhood true to its divine course.—Universalist Leader.

Laziness of Mind.

There is a laziness of the mind as well as of the body. People loaf mentally as well as physically. One is to be despised quite as much as the other. The man or boy who sits about on street corners and in stores telling idle tales is no more a social nuisance than is he who dawdles over his studies or dreams away the hours wool gathering which should be employed in planning and thinking about the serious problems of life. The mind should be held quite as rigidly to discipline as the body, for an aimless, wandering, unappliable mind will destroy one's usefulness quite as much as a slothful, flabby, unskilled body.—Churchman.

Swearing.

General Washington, it is said, once uttered an oath, and his example is presented as an excuse for the profanity of other men, but with the statement General Washington's opinion of swearing should always be joined. He said, "This is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it."—Congregationalist.

Mistakes.

People who make mistakes are those who quarrel with one another before their children or who allow the latter to grow up in idleness, those who talk about their troubles before strangers, the father who tells his children to go the way he does not go himself and the young woman who does not make a confidant of her mother.—Lutheran Observer.

Only One Design.

A sculptor has many models from which he chisels various statues, though one may be his masterpiece, but when I come into the Lord's studio I find only one design—that we should be made in the likeness of Jesus Christ.—Bishop Baldwin.

Local-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Sachsen.

Dresden. Hier bestand einige Jahre ein „Institut für Realkredit- und Wechseldiskont," das sich angeblich mit Vermittelung von Hypotheken- und anderen Geldern befaßte. In Wahrheit hat es nur Geldsuchende in zahllosen Fällen um die zu zahlenden Gebühren betrogen, ohne daran zu denken, ihnen zu helfen. Die Betrogenen wohnen in allen Gauen des deutschen Reiches. Die Inhaber dieses Schwindelunternehmens, Alwin Guido Schmieder und Alfred Ewald Matschke, wurden zu je vier Jahren Gefängniß, 3000 Mark Geldstrafe und fünf Jahren Ehrverlust vom Landgericht in Dresden verurtheilt.

Chemnitz. Das hiesige Landgericht verurtheilte den 13 Jahre alten, bisher noch unbestraften Schulknaben Schulze aus Neudorf zu zwei Jahren Gefängniß! Der Knabe hat zweimal faustgroße Steine auf die Eisenbahnschienen gelegt und mit Steinen eine Warnungstafel der Bahn herabgeworfen. Die Steine wurden von der Lokomotive bei Seite geschoben.

Leipzig. Der hiesige Zoologische Garten, bisher unter großen Opfern durch Herrn Ernst Pinkert unterhalten, ist in eine Aktiengesellschaft umgewandelt worden, welcher im Interesse der Gemeinnützigkeit des Unternehmens durch die städtischen Behörden sehr große Vortheile gewährt wurden. Die Stadt behält sich nach Ablauf von 70 Jahren das Ankaufrecht vor.

Pirna. Dieser Tage wurden an der sächsisch-böhmischen Grenze in Bodenbach zwei Engländer verhaftet, von denen der eine vor mehreren Monaten einen größeren Diebstahl in einem englischen Bankhause, wo er angestellt war, verübt hatte. In Gemeinschaft mit einem Studenten sich der Beamte nach Deutschland. Im Besitz der Beiden wurden noch 500 Gulden vorgefunden; die unterschlagene Summe gibt der Beamte selbst mit 20,000 Mark an.

Thüringische Staaten.

Eisenach. Der hiesige Gemeinderath setzte die Lehrerachälter auf 1400 Mark Anfangsgehalt bis zu 3000 Mark Höchstgehalt nach 25 Dienstjahren steigend fest. Die hiesigen Lehrerstellen sind demnach die bestbesoldeten im Großherzogthum. Der Mehraufwand, welcher dem Stadtsäckel durch die vorgenommene Gehaltserhöhung erwächst, beziffert sich auf 16,300 Mark.

Jena. Der Verein für Feuerbestattung dahier hat seit der verhältnißmäßig kurzen Zeit von der Inbetriebsetzung seines Verbrennungsofens an, also etwa innerhalb acht Monaten, bereits 15 Leichenverbrennungen vorgenommen.

Koburg. Ein alter 95er Veteran von 1870, der nicht genannt sein will, hat für hilfsbedürftige Veteranen des dahier liegenden dritten Bataillons des 6. thüringischen Infanterie-Regiments Nr. 95 und für deren hilfsbedürftige Hinterbliebene eine Stiftung von 10,000 Mark gemacht. Die Vertheilung der Zinsen soll jährlich am Jahrestage der Schlacht bei Wörth erfolgen.

Freie Städte.

Hamburg. Der Senat hat bei der Bürgerschaft die Anlage eines neuen an die Hamburg-Amerikalinie zu verpachtenden Hafens auf Kuhwärder beantragt, dessen Kosten sich auf 20,500,000 Mark belaufen; die jährliche Pacht beläuft sich auf 800,000 Mark, die Pachtdauer auf 25 Jahre.

Bremen. Der aus Moabit entsprungene Raubmörder Schiffer Erpel ist in dem benachbarten Dorfe Hastedt durch einen Bremischen Landdragoner festgenommen worden. Erpel, der sehr heruntergekommen in seinem Aeußeren war, hatte sich dadurch verdächtig gemacht, daß er ein werthvolles neues Fahrrad zu veräußern suchte. Bei seiner Festnahme wurden viele Goldsachen in den Taschen seiner Kleidung gefunden.

Lübeck. Die Uebelthäter, die kürzlich das große Hünengrab bei Waldhusen stark verwüsteten und auf deren Ermittelung die Behörde eine Belohnung von 100 Mark aussetzte, sind jetzt ermittelt. Es sind drei Schüler des hiesigen Katharineums (höhere Lehranstalt) und ein Kaufmannslehrling, die einer strengen Bestrafung um so mehr entgegensehen, als die drei angehenden Studenten sich des Werthes des Alterthums bewußt sein mußten.

Oldenburg.

Sande. Bei der Wahl von fünf Kirchenvertretern wurden die Anhänger der sozialdemokratischen Partei sämmtlich gewählt. Der Grund für diese Wahl mag darin zu finden sein, daß in der letzten Zeit erhebliche Kosten für die neue Kirche und namentlich für ein neues Pfarrhaus bewilligt sind, die Gemeinde aber nicht reich ist.

CHAPTER III.

The audience, delighted with Cyrano's wit, roared with laughter, and the viscount turned his back and started to leave.

Cyrano doubled up as if seized with sudden cramps and called out, "Aie, aie!"

"What is he saying?" said the viscount, turning back.

"The cramp in my sword," said Cyrano. "It comes of leaving it in idleness; it is getting stiff, I vow."

"Good!" and the viscount drew his sword for answer, exclaiming contemptuously, "Poet!"

"In proof of which I'll compose a ballade while we fence," said Cyrano, and then he went on in a singsong voice as if he had been reciting a lesson, that a ballade should contain three eight verse couplets and an envoi of four lines. "I'll make one while we fight and touch you at the final line."

"No!" exclaimed the viscount.

"No?" said Cyrano, and he began to declaim:

"The duel in Hotel of Burgundy—fought by De Bergerac and a good for naught."

Marquises and officers mingled in the pit with the common people. Pages climbed on one another's shoulders, the ladies leaned over from the galleries to see the better. "Give room! Great sport!" called out the audience as a space was hastily cleared in the center.

Roxane, pale as a lily, leaned forward to watch her cousin and her suitor fight. Cyrano as he fought, composed, suiting every act to the word. And this was his ballade of the duel:

I gayly doff my beaver low,
And, freeing hand and heel,
My heavy mantle off I throw
And draw my polished steel.
Graceful as Phœbus, round I wheel,
Alert as Scaramouch.
A word in your ear, sir spark, I steal,
At the envoi's end, I touch!
[They engage.]

Better for you had you lain low.
Where skewer my cock? In the heel?
In the heart? Your ribbon blue below?
In the hip and make you kneel?
Ho for the music of clashing steel!
What now? A hit? Not much!
'Twill be in the paunch, the stroke I steal,
When, at the envoi's end, I touch!

Oh, for a rhyme, for a rhyme in O!
You wriggle, starch white, my eel.
A rhyme, a rhyme! The white feather you show!
Jac, I parry the point of your steel!
The point you hoped I should feel!
I open the line, so now clutch
Your spit, sir scullion—show your zeal!
At the envoi's end, I touch!

He declaims solemnly:

Prince, pray heaven for your soul's weal!
I move a pace—lo, such and such!
Cut over—feint! [Thrusting] What ho, you reel?
[The viscount staggers. Cyrano salutes.]
At the envoi's end, I touch!

And with the word he pierced the viscount. All was confusion in an instant. Ragueneau danced about the hero of the hour. Cyrano's bosom friend, Le Bret, hovered near him, anxious in his happiness. Valvert's friends bore him away. Women applauded. Noblemen congratulated the fighter. Roxane's eyes looked down upon him. The buffet girl pressed the great man to eat.

"Ah," cried he, "I have no money!"

Blushing, she put all the contents of the buffet at his service.

"I could not take them from you, child," he said, "so keen is our Gascon pride. But fear of hurting you outweighs the pride. There, these few grapes, this water, a half a macaroon—and leave to kiss your hand for dessert."

Deeper grew the little maid's blushes.

"I thank you, sir," she said and courtesied out of sight.

"She admired you," said Le Bret.

"She? Ah! Admired me—but another does not. How could I hope it? Look you on my nose. Where'er I go it is still a quarter of a mile ahead of me—ridiculous, hideous. And I—of course I love the fairest, the most brilliant, most refined, most golden haired—a sweet perfumed rose, full of unconscious charms. Ah me!"

"Your cousin, Madeline?" cried Le Bret.

"My cousin Madeline, Roxane—the beauty and the wit—Roxane."

"She was death white the duel through."

"Pale at my danger? She?" cried Cyrano. And he himself grew pale at the thought. He trembled now.

And while he trembled and whitened the duenna of fair Roxane came gliding to his side.

"My lady goes to mass at St. Roch tomorrow," she whispered. "On the way there she craves speech with her most valiant cousin."

"My God, with me?" cried Cyrano, faint with rapture.

"Will you be there?"

"Will I be there? Oh, madame, without fail!"

He arranges a rendezvous at the pastry house of Ragueneau for 7 in the evening. In his ecstasy of delight Cyrano falls into Le Bret's arms and cries: "Le Bret, Le Bret! You heard what yonder departing lady said? Roxane, Roxane knows I live!"

"You are sad no more," jested Le Bret.

"Let the world go burn!" cried Cyrano in a passion of valor. "I've ten hearts in my breast now and a score of arms!"

Had Cyrano had time to dream, that night would have passed in ecstasy of hope, but there was other work cut out for him. He might not spend the hours of darkness tormenting himself with whimsical imaginings about his deformity and with golden anticipations roused by the beloved Roxane's message. His sword had work to do, and, though that work might lay him low and close his eyes forever before they rested on the face of his beloved, he must do it. A hundred men threatened Ligniere, the drunkard, the balladist, the man whose verse had stung the great De Guiche, the man whom Cyrano de Bergerac named friend.

RICHARD MANSFIELD AS CYRANO.

"But, prithee, why embroil yourself for him?" demanded Le Bret when Cyrano, forgetful of the roseate Roxane, had gripped his sword to use upon the hundred cutthroat hirelings of De Guiche. "He's but a wine cask at the best."

"He is my friend, and for this reason is he dear to me. His love was a lady of devout ways—and Ligniere, whom water poisons, saw her white fingers touch a font of holy water—little lilies ruffling a clear pond. Swiftly he seized the stoup and drained to the last drop the water her finger tips had sanctified. Was it not a pretty thing? Shall I not be proud to name him friend? And shall I not lead the charge upon those who seek to do him harm? Bear me no aid, I pray you, gentlemen, when I fall—fall upon them. Come you, if you will, but watchers be, not actors. Ahead of you at 20 paces I, all alone, shall dare them. Come on!"

They followed him to see the sport—those gay Parisians, to whom all things were but a spectacle. And the sight they witnessed drove them mad with delight. Cyrano bore down upon the thugs like an avalanche. Before his fury they fled away. Those who would have withstood him fell beneath his sword. There was no resisting him. The joy of battle against fearful odds was upon him. The message from Roxane sang itself in his heart. No man could hold his own against the strong son of Gascony.

How he escaped the crowd that pressed upon him, eager to touch his hand, eager to felicitate him, it is hard telling. But somehow he managed it. When the last flying form of his foes had sped through the nebulous moonlight, before the nobles and the officers who had witnessed the affair could seize Cyrano to bear him to his lodgings in triumph, he was gone. Hurrying to his house, they did not find him.

He walked deserted streets and quays while the moon traveled mistily down the sky and the sun rose up through a ruddy smoke in the east. A thousand times he addressed Roxane in fancy. The blood that rushed swiftly through his veins after the fight throbbed to her name now that battle was done. In lines that wove themselves together like the tendrils of a vine he addressed her. The lilt of birds' songs, the sobbing of the sea, colors like gems, perfumes as of flowers, all mingled in his senses as he framed the speech in which he would address her. Then, silhouetted on a gray wall, he would catch sight of his reflection. Grotesque, ungainly, monstrous, his nose was cut in the black shadow. His words took wing and his heart sank at the memory of that fatal nose.

Long before St. Roch's worshipers had left the chapel, he was at the pastry cook's. He paced up and down. His eyes took in the burnished brightness of the copper pans, the sputtering flames where from a fowl revolving on a spit a drop of grease would fall. He looked upon the plates high heaped with tarts and cakes. He saw a swaggering musketeer pay compliments to Lise, the buxom wife of Ragueneau. He saw Ragueneau, connoisseur of cakes and couplets, composer of tarts and triolets, adept at poetry and at pies, bustling about his shop, blind to the musketeer, keenly alive to the hungry poets whom he fed—at so many verses a meal.

CHAPTER IV.

But though Cyrano's eyes saw all the scene, but one thought filled his mind—Roxane. Would she never come? Would the slow minutes never drag themselves by? He whiled away the tedious time by writing her a love letter. Words ran like liquid fire from his pen, and, looking up, he saw that she had come. He bowed low to her duenna.

"Love you sweets, madame?" he asked. "Yes? Take then these cream cakes—see, I put them in a sonnet of M. Benserade, and here are little puffs—six of them, done up in a poem by St. Armant—and here are hot cakes. Go, I beg, and eat them and come not back until the last crumb is eaten."

Laden with her sweet spoils, the duenna withdrew.

"And now," said he, turning to Roxane and uncovering, "I bless the hour when you remembered that I lived. You come to tell me"—

"That I thank you first of all. Your brave blade yesterday at the play smote down the man a great lord seeks to make my husband.

"Aye—husband a la mode," said Cyrano. "I thank my destiny that I fought not for my ugliness alone, but for your beauty also."

"And—more than that have I to say. But be again my cousin of old days. Play we were once again two children frolicking at Bergerac. So shall I speak with better grace and surer courage. Your sword was then of reeds, and all I bade you do you did."

"Aye, for my cousin Madeline that's now Roxane the beauty."

"Was I fair then?"

"Not altogether ill to see."

"Remember you how all your scratches I would bind, but scold you, motherwise, at first? Give me your hand so, now. What, cousin! Here's a scratch indeed! When got you that?"

Cyrano tugged his hand away.

"A game last night," he answered. "I got it playing at the Porte de Nesle."

"Now I will bind your wounds again as in the old days there at Bergerac. With my own kerchief, see, I wipe away the blood. How many fought you?"

"Oh, a hundred!"

"Tell me true. You jest with me."

"Nay, what of that? Tell you what is the other thing you came to speak to me."

"Draw not your hand away, dear cousin. Be but the Cyrano I knew long since in Bergerac and I am bold to speak. Bend low and listen. I—I love."

"Ah!" breathed Cyrano.

"And he—knows not—guesses not!"

The room swam before Cyrano's eyes. He held his breath.

"He knows not yet, but soon he shall learn it. Bend lower. Listen. He—has loved me from afar. I saw. He dares not speak."

There was a cloud of rose and amethyst before Cyrano's dazzled eyes. He scarce could bear his happiness—his hand in hers, her words in his ear, her whisper on his cheek.

"Draw not your hand away, dear cousin. Hear me still. He—a chance—he is of your regiment—cadet of your own company!"

It was as though she rained spirit kisses on his lips. He half fainted with ecstasy.

"His brow," she went on—"his brow bears genius' stamp. He is noble, proud, valorous—and fair."

"Fair!" cried Cyrano, springing to his feet.

In a copper pan his face was reflected—misshapen. Cyrano had awakened from his dream.

"Why, cousin, what is it? What ails you?" begged Roxane.

"The—scratch—your hands had dressed, my gentle cousin. It stung again," he smiled. "But—tell me now his name. How can I serve you?"

"He is Baron Christian de Neuvillette. This day he joins the guards. I know he loves me. Eyes are eloquent—aye, and gossips, too."

"But you, my cousin, how know you that you love him? You delight in wit. Suppose his wit were slow? You love fancy. What were his fancy dull?"

"It is not. I know it is not!" cried Roxane, stamping her foot. Cyrano paused.

"How may I serve you?" he asked.

"Cousin, he joins your Gascon regiment, and I hear that you provoke all but pure Gascons who are admitted there. I trembled for him—till I saw you—invincible, all conquering. Then said I, 'If my cousin would'"—

"I will befriend your little baron," said Cyrano, the soul of generosity.

"You promise you'll do this for me? You'll be his friend? You'll let him fight no duels? They'll put no affront upon your protege?"

"I swear," said Cyrano.

Roxane paused. She took her veil, her mask.

"I've always held my cousin tenderly," she said. "How good you are!"

She blew him a kiss airily from her finger tips.

"Tell me of last night's fray?" she pressed him politely. "A hundred men, you said? You'll bid my Christian write? What odds against you, bravest coz? Another time you'll tell me all. How well you fought, how well!"

"I have fought better since," he answered and bowed low to let her pass. Roxane did not catch his meaning.

When she, veiled and masked again, had glided from the pastry cook's, Cyrano stood erect and stiff. Sorrow's shaft had transfixed him where he stood. He was blind and deaf to all about him for a few seconds. Then a door flung open. Pellmell a crowd rushed in.

"Cyrano!" cried voices.

"Hero!"

"Cyrano, Cyrano!"

Ragueneau, upset by the excitement, dashed hither and thither. Half of Cyrano's regiment crowded about him. Nobles and actors, poets and artists pushed and shoved to get nearer the hero of the last night's fray. The captain of the Gascon company, Carbon de Castel-Jaloux, was at the head of his men.

"They seek you, Cyrano, to call you brother, to embrace you, to hear"—

"I would not see—I am not—I desire not"— began Cyrano, sick at heart.

"The hero has the sulks, my Gascons!" cried Carbon. But, regardless of the feelings of the hero, the men crowded around, saluting and embracing their comrade. Nobles who the day before had not known the Gascon fighter begged to present him to fair and haughty dames who waited but to know him. Rich men tried to patronize him. The great De Guiche himself entered the pastry shop to congratulate the man who had overcome his own hirelings. Versifiers begged permission to make rhymes upon his exploit. Interviewers sought the privilege of writing of his exploit for The Court Gazette. But Cyrano to all was curt and spurned the flatteries.

De Guiche, whose manners were a little too fine to be good, expressed his admiration rather badly:

"So marvelous a feat I could not credit had I not heard these gentlemen swear they saw it. You are brave, sir. And you serve in that company of hotheads, the Gascons?"

"With the cadets," said Cyrano.

"My company is here assembled," said Carbon de Castel-Jaloux. "Cyrano, present them to the count, if you please."

TO BE CONTINUED

COL. HAY'S LAWSUIT.

The New Secretary of State Fighting About Lake Sunapee.

John Hay, the new Secretary of State, is the leading plaintiff in an important case, the facts in which are now being ascertained by a referee appointed by the New Hampshire Supreme Court.

Legally associated with Mr. Hay are Professors John D. Quackenbush and William A. Dunning, of New York, Colonel W. S. B. Hopkins of Worcester, Mass., and others.

These gentlemen have built summer homes on the shores of Lake Sunapee, the most beautiful jewel in New Hampshire's girdle of lacustrine gems. So far as variety of scenery, vigor of climate and ease of access are concerned, this lake is an ideal summer resort, and every succeeding year finds its charms more widely known and more warmly praised.

But for land owners upon its shores there is one black cloud in Sunapee's blue sky. By an old grant of the New Hampshire Legislature a corporation known as the Sunapee Dam Co. was given power to regulate the flow of the lake through its principal outlet, Sugar River. This stream furnishes water power for several large manufactories and the Sunapee Dam Company keeps the water in the lake at a convenient height for that purpose. The result is that the summer residents, whose boathouses, wharves and grounds line the lake shore, find their property submerged for a part of the time, and, again, separated from the water's edge by a stretch of unsightly beach.

In fact, the corporation has caused so much complaint that the inhabitants around the lake frequently transpose the first two words of the company's title, in referring to it.

Other means of redressing their grievances having been tried and found wanting, the summer residents decided to take their case into court. Its decision will establish an important legal principle as to the riparian rights throughout New Hampshire, and perhaps in other states as well.

The distinguished gentlemen named as plaintiffs think they have invested sufficient money on the shores of this New Hampshire lake to be justified in expecting to draw dividends of undisturbed enjoyment.

Secretary Hay's villa is commodious, comfortable and suited to its surroundings, though it would not look out of place if transported to Newport or Bar Harbor. Twenty-five miles across the country, at Holderness, is the summer home of John G. Nicolay, who was Colonel Hay's co-worker on the monumental life of Lincoln.

A little colony of musical, literary and theatrical personages make Sunapee their home of a summer season. It has had, however, no Whittier to sing its charms and no persistent railroad advertising to bring it into national notice and popularity. In the minds of Col. Hay and his companion plaintiffs, this freedom from publicity is one of the lake's chief charms.

LET US ARM YOU!

It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

SPORTING.

BASKET BALL.

Monday evening the local basket ball team will go to Brooklyn to play the team of the Eastern District of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. The game will be played in the latter's gymnasium.

Ray Carroll seems a success on the Plainfield team. He played for the first time Monday evening and made an excellent showing. He showed better endurance than Bonney, in whose place he played. He was quick, kept his head and played more like a veteran than a new man.

Tonight the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team will go to Brooklyn and play the Greenpoint team. A return game will be played in the gymnasium here later in the season. The "Rubber Five," by which the team is known, is one of the strongest teams in the vicinity of New York and will make the Plainfield boys hustle.

PERSONAL MENTION OF INTEREST TO PRESS READERS.

Some Come to Enjoy Pleasures of Plainfield, Others Journey to Either Mountain or Shore for Recreation.

Mrs. Wm. A. Wilson, of Grove street, is reported as being about the same.

Dr. Zeglio, of Somerset street, is improved from his recent slight illness.

Edward Duck, of West Fifth street, has accepted a position with William G. DeMeza as law student.

H. F. Woolston, of Fairview avenue, is suffering with a burned hand which he is obliged to carry in a sling.

Former Chief Green, of the Long Branch Fire Department, is visiting J. P. Emmons, of Washington avenue.

No change is reported in the condition of J. W. Yates, of Seventh street. He is still unconscious and very critical.

Mr. and Mrs. George Ulrich, of New Haven, Conn., are spending a few days at the hsme of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. St. John, of West Front street.

Frank Fulton, formerly apothecary on the Badger, is in town today on a furlough. He is now located in Brooklyn, and has not yet been discharged from the esrvice.

Halsey DeCamp and Edward Nolan, two bright young men from Chester, Morris county, rode their wheels to Plainfield yesterday and today are enjoying a visit with friends in the borough. They will return home tomorrow.

zens' movement men were not enrolled this motion raised further lively discussion, and after a time it was decided to take the votes by the uplifting of hands. The amendment was carried by about a two-thirds vote and afterwards the resolutions as amended were carried by about the same vote. That ended the attempt of putting up a straight ticket.

A motion was immediately made that a recess of ten minutes be taken for the enrollment of names. This was carried and a large number of Democrats then came forward and enrolled themselves.

After the meeting was called to order again discussion was indulged in and some acrimonious remarks were made by the Democrats, who were disgusted at the outcome. The meeting then adjourned.

AN ABSENT-MINDED OFFICIAL.

His Death Solved the Mystery of Lost Important Documents.

The discovery of the bundles of postal orders and bank checks tucked away in the pigeonholes of Mr. Spofford's desk and on the shelves of the old Congressional Library reminds me of a similar disclosure after the death of Robert W. Taylor, who was for many years Comptroller of the Treasury. He and Mr. Spofford had many characteristics in common. They were both very absent-minded men and habitually careless about their belongings. Mr. Taylor's desk was a curiosity. The clerks used to open the door of his office a crack so as to let their friends have a peep at it. It was covered with a pile of papers about eighteen inches thick, the accumulation of several years of official life, which grew higher every month as new documents were added to the accumulation. It was one of Mr. Taylor's peculiarities that he would never allow his desk to be dusted, and he would discharge a clerk or messenger who disturbed a single paper upon it. He claimed to know every document in the collection and insisted that he was able to find it in case it was wanted. He preferred to spread things out upon his desk in that way rather than file them away in pigeonholes. Every afternoon when the old gentleman left the office, the janitor would cover his precious pile with a big calico spread to protect it from the dust.

After Mr. Taylor died, his deputy, who undertook to examine and file away the documents and manuscripts that had accumulated upon the desk during the twenty-five or thirty years he was in office, made some important discoveries. Important papers that had mysteriously disappeared, and for which the Department had been searched over and over again, were brought to light, and, among other things, a United States bond for several thousand dollars, that had been held up as irregular several years before and referred to the Comptroller for an opinion as to its genuineness. The bond mysteriously disappeared and was forgotten until the owner had written to the Department seventeen or eighteen times demanding its return. Then, as the officials could find no trace of it, he brought suit in the Court of Claims to recover its value from the Government, holding the Secretary of the Treasury as responsible for its preservation. When the missing bond was found among Mr. Taylor's literary remains the Attorney General was notified and arranged a settlement with the owner, under which the Government paid his attorney's fees and the costs of the suit.—W. E. Curtis, in Chicago Record.

Bootblacks in London.

The force of American demand is being once more exemplified in London by the placing at all important railroad stations of chairs in connection with the bootblack brigade. This work is undertaken by the Central Shoeblack Society. There is already such accommodation provided at Viaduct Station. It appears that American gentlemen visiting London express surprise that they are expected to stand while they have their boots blacked, as they are accustomed to sit during the operation at home.

The society has sixty boys who are lodged, taught and partially boarded on the premises of the institution, and there is an ingenious allotment of their earnings into three parts after an allowance for food required out of doors, one-third being their own, another third the society's, and the remaining third going to their bank account, on which they can draw for special purposes.

PROTECTING ROYALTY.

Wilhelm of Germany Has 1,500 Men Guarding Him.

Fifteen hundred persons are lying awake nights in Berlin and its neighborhood to protect the kaiser's life and health, and to see that his path runs smoothly. These 1,500 are servants of all degrees; some are styled "Excellency," and others are mere bootblacks of fortune. Yet despite this host of watch dogs, the kaiser feels secure nowhere but in Potsdam, where the castle is guarded by 500 picked men in barracks connected with the palace, and where the royal park is patrolled by numerous sentinels, who have orders to shoot at any suspicious person who cannot, or will not, give an account of himself.

Those Potsdam arrangements for guarding the royal person are observed at all the courts of Europe. In his palace, at least, a monarch seems to be reasonably protected against unpleasant surprise. The dangerous part of the king business is in outings, ceremonies and exercises of all sorts. At the beginning of his reign the kaiser magnanimously decided to dispense with the public police service. Next day the president of police and the entire officers' corps resigned. "If we are not allowed to watch over your majesty in our own way we cannot be responsible for your safety," they said. The Prussian court has abandoned body guards, except for ceremonious occasions, but the kaiser keeps an elite corps of 350 mounted men about his person all the time. They are called body gendarmes, and, like the Feldjaegers, are really nothing more nor less than royal footmen, paid out of the people's instead of out of the kaiser's treasury. When the kaiser goes riding two body gendarmes, one or two adjutants and two grooms, accompany him, but a hundred or more gendarmes or Feldjaegers in citizen's dress traverse the park in all directions to look for suspicious characters and be at hand when necessary.

The King of Italy loves his wife, and will not drive out with the queen for fear that a bullet, or a dagger thrust, intended for him, may strike her. But Crispi went further. Out of a half hundred banditti marked for the galleys he selected one, Pietro by name, and placed before him the alternative of dragging a ball and chain for the rest of his life or of living in luxury and keeping his dagger and fists ready for regicides.

During the last five years Pietro has shadowed the king by day and night. He attends him in the council chamber and to mass; he sleeps on the threshold of their majesties' bedroom. When the king is about to drive out Pietro examines the horses and the carriage. He takes a bite or a spoonful out of every dish before it is placed on Umberto's and Marguerite's table. Disguised as a military attache, this lusty ex-cutthroat, who has a record as a throttler, sits to his majesty's left in the royal coach, with a dagger up his sleeve, or rides by his side at parades and reviews.

The czar is surrounded by half a hundred men of the Pietro stamp, the pick of the Don-Cossacks. Splendid barbarians they are, and the minister of police sees to it that the influences of civilization do not touch them beyond the soap point. They must keep clean, must, indeed, be paragons of cleanliness, but reading and writing, even the Russian language are closed books to them. Knowledge might mar their supreme self-confidence; it might interfere with discipline; if they spoke any language beside their vernacular it might lay them open to foreign influences. The members of the imperial family order the Cossacks about by signs; they are permitted to speak only to their direct superiors. The arrangement works well enough indoors, but for public occasions there's another. When the czar rides or drives or walks anywhere outside of his own apartments, he is surrounded by a veritable cluster of dignitaries and guards dressed to give them the appearance of superior rank. And Nicholas, being a small man, completely disappears in the sea of humanity engulfing him. To hit him, an assassin would have to hurl a missile from above, and then it's ten to one he would kill some nobody, or half a dozen of them. Officially the personal safety of the czar is entrusted to the master of police, who is again controlled by a general chosen by the czar for a longer or shorter period, or for different localities, as the case may be.

The presidents, or masters of police, at St. Petersburg, Berlin, Vienna, Rome and of all the capitals of Europe report daily to their sovereigns, their business having precedence over any other affairs of state. William, Nicholas, Francis Joseph, and even Leopold, would sooner think of dispensing with the ancient custom of holding a morning confab with their cooks than begrudge the time allotted for the interview with the chief of mouchards.

The Emperor of Austria, who is a pious man, employs few precautionary measures, save the military ones peculiar to his position as the head of a great army. Of course his civil cabinet is always on the lookout for Czech, Magyar, Croat and Polish malcontents, but Francis Joseph takes little interest in the matter. At the same time he does not believe in encouraging attempts upon his life. A would-be conspirator or regicide who falls into the hands of the Austrian police is sure to suffer the full penalty of the law, or even a little more than the law allows. When the emperor travels, secret service men precede and accompany him. "I have met his majesty several times when abroad," said a diplomat, "and on one or two of these occasions the late Empress Elizabeth was with him. The imperial couple, when leaving the hotel, was always escorted by detectives in plain clothes, a measure particularly distasteful to her majesty.

A Novel Exhibition

The New York business man, walking down town to his office this month, finds his steps impeded, at Fifth avenue and Twenty-sixth street, by a crowd of men, women and children in front of two huge show windows at the upper corner, wherein is displayed a striking collection of books, pictures, manuscripts, and mementos of the Spanish American war. One of the windows is given up to the new books issued by The Century Co.—Dr. Weir Mitchell's "Francois," Mrs Burton Harrison's "Good Americans," etc. The other is devoted to The Century, especially the November number, in which is begun a remarkable series of papers on the late war. Here are Miss Cecilia Beaux's portraits, from life, of Admiral Sampson and Lieutenant Hobson, and the originals of other illustrations by well-known artists; the flag and pennant of the captain's gig of the Maine, loaned by Captain Sigsbee; a part of the manuscript of Hobson's account of the sinking of the Merrimac; sign-boards, etc., from Porto Rico; and Grasset's "Alexander the Great" magazine cover design. Eight large windows, running along Twenty-sixth street toward Broadway, are given up to different publications of the same house; the first to St. Nicholas; the next to the Century Dictionary, Cyclopedia, and Atlas; the third to Timothy Cole's engravings from the Old Masters, surrounding Wyatt Eaton's oil portrait of the engraver; and the fourth to the Civil War Series, authorized "Life of Lincoln," "Memoirs" of General Grant, etc., with the bronze death mask of Lincoln, autographs of Grant, McClellan, Mosby, etc., and the manuscript of "We are Coming, Father Abraham!" and of Stedman's Lincoln poem. The fifth window is bright with the red morocco covers of Sloane's monumental "Napoleon Bonaparte," flanked by the water-color paintings made to illustrate it. The other windows are filled with children's books, original designs for posters, diplomas from the Paris and Chicago expositions, views of The Century office, etc. To secure the windows alone it was necessary to lease the entire shop at the corner next above Delmonico's Madison Square restaurant; but the general attention it has attracted shows how keenly the public appreciates an exhibition which appeals only to the cultivated." Changes will be made from time to time, during the months of November and December, in the objects displayed in this unique gallery of art and literature.

—There will be a housewarming at the new home of Rev. and Mrs W. C. O'Donnell, of West Fourth street, next Tuesday evening.

DRAYTON, KEELEY AND CO. ATTACKED.

An Attempt to Defeat Them In Second Ward.

REPUBLICANS DISSATISFIED

T. A. CUMING AND C. S. FOOTE RIVAL CANDIDATES.

Cuming Will Head An "Anti-Ring" Ticket, While Foote is the Choice of the Republican Leaders in the Ward—To Fight It Out at Primary Monday Night—"Ring" Professes Contempt.

The Second Ward Republicans have a jolly time in prospect for Monday night when the primary is to be held at which the delegates to the city convention and three members of the Republican city committee will be elected and the nominations for ward Councilman, justice of the peace and constable made. The drift of political affairs there has not tended to lead to harmony and good feeling and the result is a substantial "kick" that is to come to the surface Monday night.

At present, the Second ward is represented in the city executive committee of the Republican party by William N. Runyon, W. H. Drayton and John Keeley, who have risen, of late, to an active part in ward politics. A wish has grown in the hearts of many Republicans of the ward that that section of the city might be otherwise represented in the governing body of the Republican party in Plainfield.

The trio has been facetiously termed the "ring" as it has controlled the ward since the election of Councilman Runyon to office. The "ring" has worked hard at each election and gotten out the Republican voters to the polls, urged the unenthusiastic ones to vote, driven the sick and tired to the polling places and did the rest of the work that usually falls to the share of the politician.

Somehow, there has been a rising feeling of discontent against the "ring" and their friends which finally reached a head at the approach of the municipal election when every Republican realized that there was a hard fight before them.

Last year the "ring" was beaten at the polls by a combination of Republicans, Democrats and independent voters. This time an attempt is being made to down Keeley, Drayton and Company at the primaries by placing an "anti-ring" ticket before the Republicans of the ward. No attempt has been made to extend the issue outside the ward and defeat W. N. Runyon's candidacy for the City Judgeship nomination. It is merely to defeat the present leaders in the Second ward and such candidates as they may put up

Two names have been presented in the Second ward for Councilman, C. S. Foote and Thomas A. Cuming. Mr. Foote is the choice of the "ring," who believe him a strong candidate. He resides on Putnam avenue and has lived there for eight years. He is a lawyer by profession, with an office in New York. He has been popular with his acquaintances, but never took any active part in politics until this last year.

Mr. Cuming is the candidate of the "anti-ring" faction. He is a property-owner and also resides on Putnam avenue. Although a young man he has held the responsible position of manager for the Eldridge Bicycle Company, besides having other business experience in New York and through this State. He is the local consul of the L. A. W. in Plainfield and a prominent wheelman.

Each faction will have a complete ticket with delegates and city committee-men on it and will make a lively fight for ascendancy in the ward.

"The "ringsters" profess to have complete contempt for the opposition and say they will have no trouble in defeating the ticket headed by Mr. Cuming.

In speaking of the affairs in the Second ward, W. H. Drayton told a Press reporter that he and Mr. Runyon had decided not to run for the city executive committee this year. They could be elected easily if they wanted to, he said, but they thought that they would give somebody else a chance. Mr. Keeley, he said, would go back to the committee. There was not any doubt of the result in his mind according to his statements.

Dr. Richardson Preached.

The pulpit in the Seventh Day Baptist church was occupied this morning by Rev. J. W. Richardson, of the Park Avenue Baptist church. Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis and Rev. A. E. Main both being in attendance at the annual meeting at Shiloh.

A SWINDLER CAUGHT.

IMPORTANT CAPTURE MADE BY ELIZABETH POLICE.

Dr. Bondy, Who Has Duped Several Plainfielders by His Clever Ways, Taken Into Custody and Now Rests in Jail.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, November 19.—The police of Elizabeth made what they claim is an important arrest last evening in the person of Dr. Bondy, of Bayonne, who is wanted all along the Central and Pennsylvania Railroads from New York to Trenton for swindling various people out of money on worthless checks. Dr. Bondy was arrested about 9 o'clock as he alighted from a Pennsylvania train at the depot by Detectives McGrail and Decker, of Elizabeth, and was later taken to Bayonne by Detective Foley, of Jersey City.

Dr. Bondy is well-know in Plainfield, where he swindled two Plainfielders, Robert Guttridge, the Nethe wood butcher, and John Keely, the liveryman, out of money. Guttridge was euchred out of $50 and Keely out of $24. A Mr. Allen, of Westfield, also gave up $16.

Bondy's method of working his victims was bold. In each case the party swindled cashed a worthless check. To Keely, for instance, Bondy made himself known one day, and was such an affable, friendly sort of a fellow that the two struck up quite a friendship. A day or two after they became acquainted Bondy came to Keely with a check for $24, which he asked him to cash. The check was drawn on a New York bank and was signed by some one whom Keely had never heard of, but Bondy seemed such a respectable fellow, and the last man in the world to pass off a worthless check, that Keely cashed it. A few days later it came back marked "no good."

Bondy is a small, slight fellow, dark, with a remarkably high forehead, and is a man of education and culture. Before he took to this alleged swindling he had quite a practice in Bayonne, his home.

NEW SERIES STARTED.

Plainfield Building and Loan Association is Flourishing.

At the directors meeting of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association Thursday evening the matter of issuing a new series was taken up and favorable discussed. Many of Plainfield's citizens have tried National and other associations and are thoroughly dissatisfied with them and their methods of doing business, and would be glad to get their money back.

The Plainfield Building and Loan Association is managed by business men of our own town, economically run, and the investments are made on first mortgage on properties in and about Plainfield. The State reports show that the Plainfield Building and Loan Association is one of the first of the State, the last series which expired having run only ten years and five months. Hence the demand for stock in the association. The directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association are: L. E. Barkalew, Henry Liefke, W. R. Codington B. F. Coriell, Louis Klein, Jacob Voehl, James P. Homan, W. A. Woodruff, C. H. Rugg, J. E. Flannery, E. W. Titsworth and John Hickey.

A Birthday Celebration

The relatives and friends of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Overland, of West Fourth street, celebrated the birthday anniversary of Mr. Overland's mother last evening, at their home. Mrs. Overland has reached the age of sixty-eight years, and is hale and hearty. She received a large number of presents from her many friends. The evening was spent in a social manner and Mrs. Overland received hearty congratulations. Among those present were Mrs. Elizabeth Overland, George Overland, C. Overland, of Springdale; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Overland, of New Market; Mr. and Mrs. Herman Smith, Mr. and Mrs. John Alberts, Mr. and Mrs. William Alberts, Miss Kittie Alberts, Herbert Alberts, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barton, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Overland and family.

A Thanksgiving Service.

Miss Ella C. Benedict, chairman of the prayer-meeting committee of the Trinity Reformed church Christian Endeavor Society, is making a special effort to secure a large attendance at the regular meeting to be held next Monday evening. It will be a Thanksgiving service and it is the desire of the above committee that all members, both present and former, attend. If anyone cannot attend they are urged to send a note to be read at the meeting.

The evening of November 30th Mr. and Mrs. W. E Bolce, of the borough, will celebrate their wedding anniversary.

MAY FORCE RUNYON TO RUN FOR MAYOR.

Rumors of a Big Change in Republican Slate.

WM. NEWCORN'S STRENGTH.

IT HAS DEVELOPED SO RAPIDLY THAT LEADERS FEAR RUNYON.

So, Rumor Says, the Nomination for City Judge Will be Given to Justice Newcorn and Runyon Will be Placed at the Head of the Ticket—Rockfellow Not Particular About the Nomination.

Out from the portals of the Republican camp where the leaders gather, there comes a rumor, apparently clad in all the garb of truth, that threatens to turn upsidedown the present slate for the city election.

There is trouble in the Republican camp, the rumor says. Nothing serious that is likely to play any part in the victory or defeat of the ticket but rather trouble that will affect the proper distribution of spoils. The substance of the rumor is simply this.

It was generally supposed that Councilman William N. Runyon would secure the nomination for City Judge without any great effort. Justice Newcorn has stepped into the race, however, and has shown such strength that the leaders are in doubt as to which one would win were the the contest allowed to go on. Both have been very active workers for the party and are therefore entitled to recognition.

According to the rumor, the party leaders have decided that Runyon must not be allowed to be defeated in the city convention. Neither must the formidable support behind Justice Newcorn be antagonized. There is only one solution and rumor has it that such action is to be taken. Runyon will withdraw from the race for City Judge and become the Rupublican candidate for Mayor. Mr. Rockfellow, they say, is not particularly anxious for the nomination, only if the Republicans want him to run he will.

Just how much truth there is in the rumor it is impossible to say. Time will show. It is well-known, however, that the contests in the Republican party are almost always settled before the city convention meets, through some compromise made by the party leaders.

A SOLLIER'S SURPRISE.

Party Given Last Evening to Corporal Bowden, of Delaware.

A surprise party was given last evening to Corporal John Bowden, of the First Delaware Regiment, who is at present enjoying a thirty days' furlough with relatives in this city. The surprise was complete in every particular. It was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. David Bowden, on Grant avenue. Although the storm was the means of preventing a goodly number of invited guests from being present, nevertheless those who were in attendance spent a very pleasant evening.

The hours passed away in listening to a few well-rendered Scotch ballads, and now and then the dancing of a few old fashioned Scotch reels, music being furnished by William Wilson. At midnight refreshments were served and it was two o'clock this morning when all joined in the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and then departed for home, wishing the Corporal many happy returns of the day.

Union County Teachers' Institute.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, November 19.—The annual meeting of the Union County Teachers' Institute will be held in Public School, No. 1, Friday, December 2d. Professor Shearer, county superintendent of public schools, will preside, and there will be addresses by State Superintendent Baxter, J. M. Green, principal of the State Normal School; Francis Redway and Dr. E. E. White. The latter will also deliver a lecture in the evening, his subject to be "Duty of the Hour."

Union County's Election Bill.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Elizabeth, Nov. 19.—The Union County Board of Freeholders held a special meeting yesterday afternoon for the purpose of settling up the election bills, which this year amount to over $11,000. Of this sum $9,000 was ordered paid and the balance will be disposed of next month. The election bills this year are not so large as last year, the constitutional amendment special election last year causing much additional expense.

Engine Broke Down.

The engine of the train due in this city from New York at 8:16 a. m. broke down this morning at Westfield and the train was nearly one hour late in this city.

A SILVER WEDDING.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN H. ROSS CELEBRATED 25TH ANNIVERSARY.

The Affair was Arranged as a Surprise to Them by Their Children—Held at Their Home On Prospect Place—Many Present.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ross, of 45 Prospect place, gathered at their home last evening in honor of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding. The affair was gotten up by their children and proved to be a complete surprise.

In spite of the disagreeable weather about fifty of their relatives and friends gathered at their home, and the evening was spent in a pleasurable manner.

Miss Charlotte Messersmith and Miss Nellie Winckler rendered several beautiful selections. Dancing and games were also features of the evening. About midnight refreshments in abundance were served.

The guests present were from Jersey City, Somerville, South Branch, Willow Grove and this city and borough.

There was a large table filled with beautiful and useful presents of silver and bric-a brac, the gifts from their relatives and friends.

FOR AN ACTIVE CONTEST.

FIRST WARD CITIZENS' COMMITTEE APPOINTED LAST NIGHT.

W. T. Banks Chairman of the Meeting—Every Effort Will Be Made to Stir Up Interest Among the City Voters.

An interesting meeting of Citizens' of the First ward was held last evening in the office of Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman for the purpose of still further formulating plans for the coming city election. W. T. Banks was chairman of the meeting, and Lawyer Irving L. Brady was the secretary. Plans were discussed and suggestions were made as to how the campaign should be conducted.

The following persons were appointed on a committee to confer with similar committees from the other wards for the purpose of nominating a Citizens' ticket: Democrats—Walter L. Hetfield, George Wyckoff, W. T. Banks, John Angleman, J. C. Blimm; Republicans—John Hope, I. L. Brady, Louis Peterson, W. H. Scribner and T. J. Hovell. It is quite likely that the committees will come together early next week and select candidates for the ticket to be placed in the field.

There was an attempt made last evening to hold a Citizens' caucus of Third ward and Second ward residents in Morgan Bird's mill on Fourth street. There were about eight persons that responded to the call, and it was considered hardly enough to carry on a meeting. The customary committees will be appointed, however, to confer with the other committees.

The Citizens' are certainly quite active in more ways than one. It has been decided by the Citizens' from the different wards to hold meetings in all of the wards the week before election, and to wind up the campaign with a rousing mass meeting in Music Hall on the eve of election. Good speakers will be present and an enthusiastic meeting will be held. Many of the bad features in connection with the present administration will be ventilated and it is the intention of those in charge to present facts and figures to show that the present city government is not one that has worked for the best interests of the city at large.

MUSIC AND STORY TELLING.

An Entertainment Given in the Boys' Club Last Night.

An entertainment was given last night in the Boys' Club, consisting of an informal programme of vocal and instrumental music and story telling. The boys were out in full force, and there were also several visitors, who braved the storm to give encouragement to the managers by their presence.

Those who took part were Miss Rosa Schroder, Dr. E. W. Hedges, Councilman Will N. Runyon and Fred VanEps. Miss Schroeder sang several times accompanied on the piano by Miss VanBoskirk. Dr. Hedges told some good stories, and Councilman Runyon kept them all in a roar of laughter with his songs. Mr. VanEps entertained with banjo solos, and all responded to several encores. This was the regular fall entertainment and will be followed in the spring by another.

The members of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders are in session today at Somerville for the purpose of awarding the contract for the building of a macadam road in Bernards township. The road is seven miles in length and runs in the direction of Somerville.

CHANGE IN G. O. P. CITY COMMITTEE.

Younger Members Must Retire For Men of More Experience.

THE MATTER OF DELEGATES.

THE CITY JUDGESHIP NOMINATION PUZZLES THE LEADERS.

The Older Leaders of the Party Think That it is Time That They Took an Active Part in the Management of the Affairs of the Party—Third Ward Will Probably Secure Another Delegate To Convention.

While the Citizens in the city have been busily engaged in formulating plans for the placing of a ticket in the field for the city election, the Republican leaders have not been quiet Several meetings have been held and some radical changes are proposed, it is said. One great change spoke of is a change in the Republican city committee. It is intimated that some of the younger members are to be relieved and that ex-city officials will be elected in their place. This, it is claimed, is for the best interest of the party.

It cannot be said that there is perfect harmony in the ranks of the G. O. P. There is a breach and it is quite noticeable. At a recent meeting of the city executive committee there was an apportionment of delegates made from the different wards that does not please some of the workers. The First ward was allowed five, the Second ward six, the Third ward seven, and the Fourth ward nine. This apportionment makes it possible for the Third ward to secure an extra delegate, if he is is needed, and it will be easier to get one or two than four or five, as would be the case if the apportionment had been made on the basis of the vote that Councilman Buckle received at the last election.

Regarding the contest in the G. O. P. for City Judge between William Newcorn and William N. Runyon, there is considerable excitement. As far back as two years ago it was intimated that when Mr. Newcorn desired to run for the judgeship he should have the support of the party, and inasmuch as he declared his intention of securing the nomination this year, it is thought by Mr. Newcorn's friends that Mr. Runyon should withdraw in his favor. Mr. Runyon did not declare himself until after Mr. Newcorn came out with his announcement. The question that is now perplexing the minds of the leaders is how to satisfy both aspirants for the office. Several conferences have been held this week, but the breach apparently has not been closed.

New Timetable.

A new timetable goes into effect on the Central Railroad and all its branches tomorrow. There will be two or three important changes to Plainfielders. Two new New York and Washington trains will be put on, which will leave New York and Washington each day at 3 o'clock. The trains are now in the yards at Jersey City on exhibition. They will make the run in just five hours. Another local train to New York will leave Dunellen at 9:08 o'clock each day.

An Error Corrected.

In the short sketch of the political career of George W. Rockfellow, who is prominently mentioned for the Republican nomination Mayor, as appeared in yesterday's Press, a small error was made. Mr. Rockfellow was elected Mayor on the Democratic ticket, as was stated, defeating F. E. Marsh. When his term expired, Mr. Rockfellow was urged to run on the Republican ticket, but withdrew in favor of Job Male.

Not Held in City Court.

Oscar TenEyck, colored, was arraigned before City Judge this morning on the charge of being drunk and disorderly on complaint of J. M. Hetfield. The case was laid over indefinitely. After court, he was immediately arrested on a complaint from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to animals, the warrant being issued by Justice Nash before whom he will have a hearing next week.

Sons of Veterans Fair.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

MARTIN HOLMES MUST ANSWER TO THE ASSAULT CHARGE.

Justice Mattison Declined to Dismiss the Case, But on Motion of Holmes' Lawyer Held Him for Grand Jury

Last evening before Justice Mattison, of the borough, a hearing was given in the case of the State against Martin Holmes, on a charge of assault and battery preferred by John Barrick, an employe of George Wise, of the borough. The hearing was held simply for the purpose of determining whether Holmes could be held for the Grand Jury when he had already served a sentence on a similar charge. Holmes was represented by Lawyer Wm. DeMeza, while Lawyer Frank Blatz represented the State. The witnesses sworn included George Wise, while the plaintiff and defendant were allowed to testify in their own behalf.

At the conclusion of the hearing Mr. DeMeza asked that his client be committeed to await the action of the Grand Jury. This Justice Mattison agreed to do. The main point made by the defendant's lawyer was that Justice Mattison had no right to try Holmes, as he had already been tried by Recorder Long. The Justice stated that he was simply giving a hearing, and over-ruled Mr. DeMeza's motion to have the case dismissed. Mr. Blatz defended the State in the hearin an able manner.

ACCUSED OF CRUELTY TO HORSE.

Colored Man Alleged to Have Abused a Horse He Borrowed

Oscar TenEyck, colored, was arraigned before Justice Nash this morning on a charge of cruelty to animals preferred by the agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, W. N. Pangborn. TenEyck was held in $100 bail for his appearance for an examination Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. W. G. DeMeza is his counsel.

A couple of weeks ago TenEyck borrowed a horse belonging to Hetfield & Gallup, to drive "just around the corner," it is alleged he said. Instead of that he drove the horse to Irvington, it is said, and loaded the wagon so heavily that the horse was exhausted when he returned and could hardly stand.

Hetfield & Gallup made a complaint before the City Judge at first, but this morning the complaint was withdrawn and a new one, with Pangborn as the complaining witness, made before Justice Nash.

GANGRENE SET IN.

Burn on the Hand Developed Into a Serious Sore.

L. B. Woolston, of Fairview avenue, now carries his hand in a sling and is suffering much pain as the result of a little accident that occurred the first of the week. He was caring for the furnace at his home and burned his hand. The injury in itself was not a very severe one, but gangrene has set in and the results may be very unpleasant. The flesh on the fingers has been affected and has had to be cut away. It was feared that Mr. Woolston would loose a finger but the present treatment promises to save it.

Little Street Work.

There is very little being done on the streets now, as work for the winter has practically stopped. Street Commissioner Gavett had two men out yesterday afternoon and last night, and part of this morning sweeping and raking out the gutters and making the free passage of the water possible. In several places the men found the gutters stopped with leaves and debris.

Spencer Conway Exonerated.

Spencer Conway is once more breathing the fresh air without any fear of a visitation to a prison cell. This morning, in the City Court, he was completely exonerated on the charge of reckless driving, and Patrolman Cash, who made the arrest, was severely censured by City Judge DeMeza.

S. C. Peck's Mother Dead.

Mrs. S. C. Peck, of Milford, Conn., mother of S. C. Peck, Jr., of West Front street, died a few days ago at the age of ninety years. Mrs. S. C. Peck, Jr., left Thursday for Milford, and Mr. Peck will leave tomorrow morning. The funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon.

A Pleasant Social Affair.

Last evening at the home of W. H. Scribner, on Washington street, a pleasant social gathering took place which was arranged by Mrs. Scribner and her daughter. There were twenty-five people present, and dancing was the feature of the evening. Eugene O'Reilly furnished the music.

R. F. MURRAY OPPOSES WATKINS FOR SPEAKER

Gives His Reasons in Interview With Press Reporter.

MAY CAUSE COMPLICATIONS.

WOULD FAVOR SOME OTHER MAN OF EQUAL ABILITY.

According to Ruling of Attorney General, Mr. Murray Says That Acting Governor Will Hold Office Until Inauguration Whether He is Elected or Not—Would Make Things Decidedly Complicated.

The Jersey Republicans are now quite interested in the question as to who will be the next Speaker of the Assembly. Acting Governor David O Watkins has been talked of prominently but among those who have announced that they are not in favor of him is Assemblyman Roger F. Murray, of this city.

Mr. Murray was interviewed this morning by a Press reporter on the subject and declared that he did not believe that Mr. Watkins would be the next speaker of the lower House. He gave the following as the reasons for his opinion.

The Attorney General in his opinion, said that Mr. Murray, holds that whenever the duties of the Governor fall to the Speaker of the House, he performs those duties until the next Governor is elected and qualifies. If Mr. Watkins had not been re-elected to the Assembly, he would have performed the duties of acting Governor until the third Tuesday in January although his term of office would have expired on the second Tuesday of that month. The facts of his being re elected Speaker would have nothing to do with his retaining the office of Acting Governor.

Should Mr. Watkins be re-elected Speaker, Mr. Murray continued, it would complicate matters very materially. When the Sentate and Assembly organize, they will appoint committees to wait on the acting-Governor and notify him of the organization of the Senate and lower House and inform him of the officers elected. How could the committee of the Senate, asked Mr. Murray, notify the acting-Governor when he would be in the Speaker's chair in the other branch of the Legislature and how could he appoint a committee to notify himself of the organization and election in the House?

These facts, said Mr. Murray, are enough to convince anyone that it would be useless to thus complicate matters when, by the election of a new man to the Speaker's position, all these complications would be avoided. The reason why the leading Republicans advised Mr. Voorhees to resign at once upon receiving the nomination for Governor, was to avoid complications, and Mr. Murray said that he believed the same argument would hold good in the case of Acting Governor Watkins.

"Mr. Watkins," remarked the Assemblyman, "made one of the best Speakers New Jersey ever had and my only reason for opposing his re-election is that I believe if there is another equally as good man in the House who desires the office, he has a prior claim to Mr. Watkins. If that man does not appear then I am for Mr. Watkins."

A Golf Dance.

On Thanksgiving evening there will be a "Golf Dance" in the Park Club house, and everyone who attends will be supposed to wear a golfing costume of some description. The colors of the Park Golf Club are red and white, and those who attend are urged to bear this in mind in arranging their dress. The patronesses for the affair include Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Edwin T. Douglass, Mrs. Chas. A. Reed and Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen.

Will Try to Release Baldwin.

Attorney William G. DeMeza went to Newark today to obtain the release of Augustus Baldwin, the West Fourth street haycarter who is in jail there on a charge of tampering with a way bill, and getting paid for 1,600 pounds more of hay than he had on his wagon.

SPANIARDS WILL YIELD

Sagasta Instructs the Commission to Make Best Possible Terms.

WASHINGTON IS CONFIDENT

Spanish Reply Cabled in Cipher. An Ultimatum Will Not Be Delivered To-day but the Reply to Spain Will Leave No Doubt as to Consequence of Further Delay.

Madrid, Nov. 19, via Biarritz, France.—Duke Almodovar del Rio, minister of foreign affairs, visited Premier Sagasta yesterday and read to him telegrams from Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish peace commission at Paris saying that although the Americans defer replying to the Spanish proposal until Saturday, they will certainly at the next joint meeting, on that day, refuse to refer the matter of possession of the Philippine archipelago to arbitration.

Senor Sagasta's instructions to the Spanish commission are to obtain the best possible advantages in winding up matters.

There is every probability of the Sagasta government resigning after the signing of the protocol of peace in Paris.

It is reported that news has been received by the government from General Rios, governor of the Visayas islands, at Iloilo, that he is besieged by the Tagalos, and fears the butchery of the Spanish garrison by the insurgents.

Fashington, D. C., Nov. 19.—Just before the cabinet met yesterday morning the reply of the Spanish peace cimmission to the demands of the American commission, submitted last Wednesday, began to arrive at the state department in cipher by cable. Secretary Hay said that several hours would be consumed in deciphering the message, so that the full note could not be laid before the cabinet meeting.

The president and the secretary were well aware of its contents, however and the discussion in the cabinet room proceeded as intelligently as if the document had been fully translated.

The cabinet meeting developed nothing new concerning the situation at Paris, except a very hopeful feeling, based on unofficial advices that have been received from Paris, that a treaty of peace would be the outcome of the negotiations.

Two cabinet officers expressed the opinion that in the present propitious aspect of affairs they would not be surprised if the commissioners concluded their labors within a week, and it was evident from their reference to the matter that this news did not find contradiction in the cabinet session.

Secretary Hay informed the cabinet that Mr. Day's dispatch containing the substance of the Spanish answer had begun coming in over the wires just before he left the state department for the White House.

The Spanish note was delivered to the American commissioners at two o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, or about 9 a. m. Washington time.

The government's instructions to the commissioners covered every point that the Spaniards were expected to bring forward, and these are considered sufficient to guide Mr. Day and his colleagues in formulating their answer to the Spanish representatives.

An authoritative statement was obtained yesterday that the American commissioners will not deliver an ultimatum to the Spaniards to-day, but their communication will be emphatic enough to leave their opponents no reason to suppose that the United States will tolerate any further delay.

To-day's meeting will be the last at which the question of Spanish sovereignty in the Philippine archipelago will be a topic of discussion.

If, at the succeeding session, an attempt is made by Spain's representatives to continue their policy of manana, the negotiations will end abruptly.

John W. Keely Dead.

Philadelphia, Nov. 19.—John F. Keely, the inventor of the so-called Keely motor, died yesterday at his home in this city from pneumonia.

He was taken ill on Saturday last and continued to grow worse steadily until his death.

Mr. Keely was 61 years old and leaves a widow.

Few men have lived in the realm of accepted or pseudo science of as strange and peculiar personality as John W. Keely—for while his baptismal name was John Ernest Morrel Keely, he was known in all legal documents as John W., and under that name he made contracts with the shrewdest of investors, the most calculating of fortune hunters, and the clearest headed lawyers in a city famed for a bar of extraordinary legal acumen.

He not only confounded scientists with an undoubted and thoroughly demonstrated force in mechanics, but he possessed sufficient personal magnetism to induce and and every man with whom he came in contact to believe in his theory that the mechanical device which he called a vibratory motor was the genesis of an absolutely new principle, and the more intelligent his listener the more confident the belief.

None of these visions materialized into reality and when Keely died his wonderful motor, so far as known, was as far from completion as it was the first day he discovered the mysterious molecular force.

Sues Dr. Swallow for $50,000.

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 18.—Congressman Josiah D. Hicks of Altoona, has begun a civil suit for libel in the Dauphin county court against the Rev. Dr Silas C. Swallow, the late "Thou shalt not steal" candidate for governor claiming $50,000 damages.

French Story of a Treaty.

Paris, Nov. 19.—La Patrie says "Lord Chamberlain has returned from America with the draft of a treaty with the United States concealed in his pockets."

THE WAR INVESTIGATION.

Affairs at Camps Alger and Wikoff as Told by Dr. Greenleaf.

New York, Nov. 19.—The war department investigation commission convened in parlor D R of the Fifth Avenue Hotel at ten o'clock yesterday morning to continue the examination of witnesses who desire to give testimony on matters conducted with the conduct of the late war.

The full commission, with the exception of Colonel Charles Denby, Secretary Weightman and Major Mills, who remained in Washington to hold sessions, were in attendance when General Dodge called the meeting to order.

It is expected that one hundred or more persons, including Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, the governor-elect, will testify.

When the meeting opened Dr. Chas. R. Greenleaf, chief surgeon of the troops in the field, on General Miles's staff, was the only one present.

Dr. Greenleaf took the stand after having subscribed to the usual oath. In response to questions in cross examination by Dr. Phineas S. Conner, as to the fitness of Camp Alger as a camping place for troops, he said that in some respects it was a very good camp.

It was a good camp for a small body of men, but there were many drawbacks. The water supply was poor and the region was known to be highly malarious.

There was a deficiency of privates in the hospital corps and of medical officers, and at times of medical supplies.

The best interests of the sick, Dr. Greenleaf said, were not seriously imperilled, but the efforts of the surgeons were generally embarrassed.

Questioned as to the condition of affairs on the transports, Dr. Greenleaf said that he did not personally inspect the transports at Cuba, but those leaving Porto Rico under his personal direction were well found in all respects.

Camp Montauk Dr. Greenleaf considered an ideal camp for its purpose. Lack of train service he considered a petty discomfort.

No complaints of any moment were submitted to him, and the small grumblings he heard he investigated and found without justification.

Questioned as to the discomforts endured by the furlough men, who, sick and weak, were compelled to loiter about the railway station awaiting fares and furloughs, he said that all that trouble might have been avoided by the establishment of a quartermaster office at the hospital. That was a matter of detail that did not occur to the officers in charge at first. Later a hospital station was established as an annex to the railroad station.

General Dodge asked of the conditions of the transports leaving Tampa for Cuba, and Dr. Greenleaf said they were dreadfully overcrowded.

He told ex-Governor Woodbury that he could not say that the overcrowding was not a military necessity, but he was certain it was wrong from a sanitary point of view.

David J. Goss, a private of the Seventy-first Regiment, who acted as cook for his company at Camp Black, said:

"It was all pretty rough. Nothing went right. It was some one's incompetency, but I don't know where."

Henry Hauck, an assistant foreman in the fire department, spoke highly of the courtesy and attention of the surgeons and said that he had no complaint at all to make of the treatment he received while in the service of the government.

TROOPS FOR CUBA.

War Department Officials Believe Fewer Will Be Needed.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 19.—Adjutant General Corbin says that there is no intention at present to send the Sixth Massachusetts or any other regiments recently returned from Porto Rico to Cuba.

The men were given sixty days' furlough, but were not ordered mustered out because it was thought they might be needed later.

If they are not needed they will not be recalled from their furlough, but will be mustered out.

At the war department it is believed that not nearly so many troops will be needed in Cuba as were designated in the recent general order.

Then three corps were named and their stations determined upon. Three regiments were to be sent to the province of Cienfuegos, but now it seems likely that not more than one regiment will go there.

Other points where large garrisons were expected will not have the quota assigned to them, and perhaps not more than half of the troops first selected will go to the island.

Athens Cheers Prince George.

Athens, Nov. 19.—Prince George of Greece received an enthusiastic welcome here and at Piraeus yesterday. Crowds of Cretans, with banners, surrounded his carriage and cheered him vociferously.

A grand demonstration is in preparation to celebrate the prince's official appointment as the ruler of the island of Crete.

King George said yesterday that he expected the official notification of the appointment of Prince George as governor of Crete to arrive within three or four days.

Europe Gobbles S. P. Bonds.

London, Nov. 19.—The London banking house of Speyer Brothers has issued $10,000,000 of $1,000 five per cent. bonds of the Southern Pacific Railroad Company of California at 105, or two hundred and ten pounds per bond.

The issue was subscribed six times over, thus:

Twenty million dollars in London, $25,000,000 in Amsterdam and $20,000,000 in Germany.

A Big Lobster.

Montreal, Nov. 19.—A big lobster is on exhibition on Beaver Hall Hill. It weighs twenty-five pounds and measures forty-two inches from tip to tip, with claws twenty inches long and seven inches wide.

The lobster was captured off Grand Manan island, in the Bay of Fundy, and its captor says that but one other as large as this is known to have been caught there.

Thrilling Experience of Passenger and Crew on Disabled Ship.

ALL HANDS WERE RESCUED

Eighteen Taken Off Wreck by Lifeboats from the Peconic. The Vessel Abandoned, Then Reboarded After Storm Moderated, as Boats Were Not Seaworthy.

New York, Nov. 19.—The British steamer Peconic, which arrived at quarantine yesterday, brought into port eighteen shipwrecked mariners, who were taken out of the Dutch bark Johanna, which was found in a sinking condition.

The Peconic was running along at her usual speed, bound from Mediterranean fruit ports for New York, when, at 11 p. m., of November 11, distress signals were sighted to the north. The steamer's course was changed and she bore down to the distressed vessel, which was found to be the Dutch bark Johanna, from New York for Honolulu, in a sinking condition.

Life boats were launched and eighteen men, all told, were rescued.

The Johanna sailed from New York on October 31, with a full general cargo, for Honolulu. Fine weather was experienced until November 9, when a terrific gale set in from the northwest, accompanied by enormous seas, which flooded the decks and pounded the vessel violently.

The midship bulwarks were smashed in, and tons of water fell continuously on the decks.

The main hatch was smashed in, the deck beams were broken and the vessel began to take in water at an alarming rate.

Soon it was found by sounding that eight feet of water was in the hold, and the ship was seen to weave and buckle like a basket. Many of the beams of the main deck were found to weaken, and it was feared that the vessel would break in two amidships. Captain Maars believing the vessel doomed, ordered out the boats, intending to steer for Bermuda.

The first boat was thrown overboard only to be dashed to pieces against the side of the wreck.

After considerable delay the second boat was successfully launched and contained the whole crew of eighteen persons.

The wind had in the meantime shifted to the northeast and increased the fury of the terrible seas.

The small boat, overladen with her large number of unfortunates and overweighted with stores and water, was found to be in a dangerous condition.

The boat had become damaged in the effort to launch it from the wreck and in consequence great judgment and care were necessary in order to keep it afloat.

In this damaged small boat, which required constant bailing, the eighteen unfortunate seamen spent two days in the vicinity of the Johanna, as they had determined to return to the derelict when the weather subsided.

The small boat was considered unsafe for the long trip to Bermuda.

During these two days the bark was kept in sight, every time the boat falling into the hollow of the sea it was thought the wreck had gone down forever.

Finally, on November 11, the wind and sea went down and the men clambered on board of the wreck and set distress signals. At 11 p. m. a steamer was seen approaching and life boats shortly afterward came to their rescue.

The rescued men were Captain Maars, and sixteen men, the crew of the Johanna, and B. D. Douglass of Orange, N. J., a passenger.

More Trouble in Pana.

Pana, Ill., Nov. 19.—There was more trouble between the striking miners, the deputy sheriffs and the imported negroes here last night.

Several men were wounded, some seriously.

Sid Wats of Taylorville, a deputy, lost his right arm.

On account of the trouble yesterday Wats had been engaged all day in sweaoring in deputies for use at the Springside mine. He was in a buggy, on his way to the mine, and when passing McCarthy's store, was fired upon. As many as thirteen shots were fired at him.

Wats responded with what weapons he had, but had to desist when badly wounded. He got to the mine, and was then brought back to the city, where his arm was amputated.

An attack was made on the home of Sheriff-elect Downey, who favors the strikers. The union has protected him from the threats of the blacks and kept a guard around the house.

These men were fired upon. They fought the attack off without being injured.

There was another exchange of shots near the Eastside school. In fact there is occasional shooting in all parts of the town.

LET US ARM YOU!
It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and yours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

DUN'S WEEKLY REPORT.

Slight Changes in Cotton and Woolen Goods. Iron Trade Brisk.

New York, Nov. 19.—The situation is clearer, and the improvement in business which was expected after the election, has begun.

Payments through clearing houses are far the largest ever known, for the week 37.3 per cent. larger than last year, and 33.0 per cent. larger than in 1892, and for the month the daily average has been $254,422,000, 20.7 per cent. larger than last year and 18.9 per cent. larger than in 1892.

Stocks have advanced steadily in the face of heavy realizing by European holders and domestic speculators, rising an average of 86 cents for the week, though trusts slightly declined.

The glassworkers have resumed, the anthracite coal output is heavy and much beyond the present capacity of markets, the troubles in Illinois coal mines have been settled, and the new strike of shoeworkers in Marlboro, Mass., is now the only labor hindrance of consequence.

It is noteworthy that in spite of all changes the price of spot wheat has but slightly changed. The exports for the week, flour included, have been 3,968,768 bushels from Atlantic ports against 3,237,344 last year, and from Pacific ports 988,093 bushels against 2,191,344 last year, making in all for two weeks of November 9,312,331 bushels, against 9,939,804 last year.

Corn exports also exceed last year's amounting for the week to 2,993,720 bushels, against 2,722,457 last year.

Fere it possible, it would be gratifying to say that a little stronger demand for cotton, making the price 5.37 cents against 5.31 a week ago, had a solid basis, but southern markets recognize the fact that the closing of many mills here and abroad, owing to excessive stocks of goods on hand, does not offer bright promise.

Crop prospects appear so good that, even at the extreme low prices quoted there is little encouragement for advance in view of the heavy stocks held here and abroad.

The woolen manufacture has gained in orders for the coming season which justifies the heavy buying of materials recently seen, and there are also better orders for speedy delivery, but the demand is not large, and much machinery is still waiting idly.

There is similar difficulty about the prices of boots and shoes, for manufacturers do not want to contract at present quotations for leather, and leather manufacturers show themselves unready to buy hides at current quotations, and while the prices of hides have yielded a little at Chicago, they are still relatively high.

Iron is in bigger demand all the time, and yet production steadily increases, and at Pittsburg, Bessemer pig is slightly lower at $10.10, the new association being undersold.

Orders for plates are beyond all precedent, including material for cars, bridges, vessels, and work of all sorts.

Imports for October were a little larger than last year, but the excess of exports over imports was more than $66,000,000, no other month excepting last December having ever shown as large an excess.

Failures in two weeks of November have been $3,468,657, against $5,600,424 last year.

Louisiana-Purchase Anniversary.

Denver, Col., Nov. 19.—William C. Ferrill, curator of the State Historical and Natural History Society of Colorado, has sent a letter to the board of directors of the Louisiana Purchase Centennial, St. Louis, Mo., suggesting that the board request the governors of those states that, as a whole, or in considerable part, were established from the Louisiana purchase, issue proclamations appointing December 20 next to be observed as Louisiana Purchase Flag Day in honor of the raising of the flag on that day, 1803, when the transfer of title was officially made to the United States.

Bits of News.

H. H. Meier, the founder of the North German Lloyd steamship line, died yesterday.

The Trans-Mississippi and International Exposition is to be repeated at Omaha next year on a more elaborate scale.

The London Saturday Review was sold on Wednesday, the property passing under an absolutely new proprietorship.

The German emperor and empress will probably land at Pola to-day and proceed at once for Berlin by the way of Munich.

The territorial capitol site commission of Arizona has adopted plans for a capitol building to cost one hundred thousand dollars. Bids for construction will be advertised for at once.

Before leaving Des Moines, Osborn Deignan, one of the crew of the Merrimac, presented to the Grant Club of that city the whistle used by Lieutenant Hobson in giving the signal for the sinking of that vessel.

Mills Hotel No. 1, in New York city according to the manager, proved a financial success in its first year, just closed, the profits equaling three per cent. on the investment after providing for depreciation and replacements.

The court of claims at Washington yesterday rendered a judgment of $1,961,400 in favor of the New York Indians who entered suit against the United States to recover the value of certain lands donated to them in Kansas and subsequently disposed of by the United States.

The steamship Campania, from New York, November 12, which arrived at Queenstown yesterday, was delayed three hours on her passage in affecting the rescue of John Karisen, a Swedish steerage passenger, who jumped overboard on the morning of November 13. Karisen died later from exhaustion.

Telephonic communication has been established between a number of farms in Australia by means of wire fences. The Australian Agriculturist publishes a note from a correspondent writing from a station near Cobar, stating that it was easy to converse with friends at a station eight miles distant with instruments connected on the wire fences, and the same kind of communication was established over a distance of thirteen miles.

TWELVE MEN KILLED

FOG AND SMOKE TO BLAME

Five Others Seriously Injured. The Foreman's Escape. Stepped from One Track Directly in Front of Approaching Passenger Train.

Jersey City, Nov. 19.—Twelve men were killed, one probably fatally injured, and four seriously hurt, by being run down by the Millstone local train of the Pennsylvania road, on the Hackensack Meadows, just west of the Hackensack river, at 8.15 o'clock yesterday morning.

The men were laborers at work repairing the railroad traks on the outskirts of the town of Harrison.

William Quirk, No. 182 Steuben street, Jersey City, the foreman in charge of the men, escaped injury, but nearly everybody else in the gang was either killed outright or injured.

The laborers were at work on the west bound track, when a freight train came along, with the locomotive puffing out thick clouds of black smoke. There was also a fog hanging over the meadows at the time.

The Millstone local train, filled with commuters, and in charge of John Van Nostrand, the engineer, was racing over the Hackensack meadows towards Jersey City, trying to make up lost time.

The gang had crossed over to the east bound track to get out of the way of the freight train, when the Millstone local was rushing along, the smoke and fog obscuring the engineer's view. The laborers were also prevented from seeing the approaching train.

Before the engineer knew of the presence of the laborers his locomotive had mowed them down. The foreman, Quirk, had a hairbreadth escape. All about him mangled bodies and pieces of flesh were hurled.

The engineer, Van Nostrand, heard the cries of the wounded and dying, and at the same moment the smoke lifted and a horrible scene presented itself.

When the train was brought to a standstill the tracks were strewn with blood and fragments of bodies. Many of the passengers in the train became sick at the sight. Van Nostrand wept like a child when he saw what had happened.

As quickly as possible those of the laborers not already dead were put in the freight car of the Millstone local and taken to Jersey City where all the ambulances and morgue wagons in town and two dozen surgeons were ready to lend assistance.

The dead were mostly from Jersey City. The bodies were frightfully mangled, some of them having to be collected with a shovel. All were taken to the Jersey City morgue.

Michael Lawless, the outpost whose duty it was to warn the laborers of approaching trains from the west, was hurled ninety feet and cut almost in two.

There were harrowing scenes when the bodies reached the Pennsylvania railroad yards in Jersey City. Many of the wives and relatives of the dead were beside themselves with grief.

Half a dozen women were overcome and had to be taken home by the police.

The engineer, Van Nostrand, made this statement:

"I felt sure that the track was clear, and had no idea that in that cloud of smoke and fog just ahead of me were twenty laborers who did not know of my on-coming. I got within one hundred yards of the gang when my locomotive struck the outpost, Michael Lawless. I put on the brakes at once, but in another second I was upon the main gang and my locomotive cut them down before I could stop the train."

The case will be thoroughly investigated by the railroad company.

Superviser Gerald Holsman of its track repairing department summoned the section foreman, William Quirk, after his arrival in Jersey City, and secured his story.

Mr. Holsman, after a hasty investigation, said:

"Nobody was to blame except the fog and smoke. I do not believe Van Nostrand or any other official is to blame. It was one of those deplorable accidents that cannot be charged up against any human being."

Disorder in Porto Rico.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 19.—The cabinet session yesterday was devoted largely to consideration of complaints that have reached the war department, alleging that a state of practical anarchy prevails in Porto Rico.

These complaints assert that the lawless elements in Porto Rico are committing depredations of the gravest character, and that the seriousness of the situation is increased by the fact that United States troops, stationed in the island, likewise have been guilty of misconduct.

Secretary Alger, at the instance of the president, has cabled to General Brooke, inquiring as to the accuracy of the complaints.

Return of the Buffalo.

New York, Nov. 19.—The United States cruiser Buffalo, from Newport, R. I., in tow of the government tug Wampatuck, passed in at City island yesterday morning.

The Buffalo was taken to the Brooklyn navy yard for repairs, having put into Newport with machinery out of order, after starting from here for the Philippines.

It is said that the repairs which are required are confined to the condensers and sea valves.

Large Sales of Print Goods.

Fall River, Mass., Nov. 19.—The sale of goods in the print cloth market during the week has been the largest of any week in two months or more.

No definite report of the amount of goods sold is given out, but the total is believed to be at least up to four hundred thousand pieces. The market is very firm at two cents.

FIRST SPANISH WAR PENSION.

Seventeen Dollars a Month for F. C. Gates an Injured Artilleryman.

Washingtin, Nov. 19.—The first pension claim of the Spanish war was granted yesterday; $17 a month to Francis C. Gates, Second United States Artillery, who was struck in a fight before Santiago, on July 2, by a shot from a machine gun, which broke his upper jaw, tore away his lips and knolked six teeth out.

The president took great interest in having the case promptly adjudicated and an effort will be made to get a special act through Congress raising the amount of the man's pension.

It now appears that much of the work of examining volunteers at their enlistment was done in a slipshod manner, but new physicians were employed at the mustering out, with the result that numberless cases of disease or organic trouble are found which undoubtedly date back of the war.

Nearly two thousand claims for pensions from the Spanish war have been filed already for the army, and about two hundred and fifty for the navy, exclusive of the victims of the Maine disaster.

The best estimates are that the Spanish war pension ist will add $20,000,000 to the present annual budget, and the bulk of the pensions will be for disease and not for wounds.

Such troubles as lesion of the heart and dysentery are most frequently the cause.

RELICS FROM THE MARIA TERESA.

To Be Exhibited at the National Museum at Washington.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 19.—Captain McCalla, in charge of the repair ship Vulcan, now at Cat island, has cabled Commandant Farquhar that Lieutenant Hobson with the Vulcan and Potomac would arrive here about December 1.

As the navy department permitted Captain McCalla to use his own judgment at the Infanta Maria Teresa wreck, it is presumed that the cruiser is to be stripped of everything that would likely prove a relic, including the 11-inch gun which was mounted aft.

These relics will, it is said, be placed on exhibition in the National Museum at Washington.

A large number of the Teresa's guns are already here, and also the Colon's safe, which will be opened at this navy yard.

The flagship New York has distributed copies, printed aboard, of the original log of the Colon, which tells of her movements from the time she left Cadiz to the hour of sailing out of Santiago harbor.

Used Wrong Emblem.

Buffalo, N. Y., Nov. 19.—It has been discovered that the emblem printed at the head of the Republican column on the ballots for Erie county was not the official emblem.

In the one used there is a clearly defined circle in the ballot box under the eagle, which is claimed cost the Republicans many votes, as the voter made the cross in this circle instead of in the circle below. The irregular cut was used in 1895.

County Clerk Wende says that he has all the Republican votes thrown out because of the X in the ballot box, and has no doubt that the court will order them to be counted for the Republican candidates, as the intention of the voters was clear.

Bold Attempt to Break Jail.

Columbus, O., Nov. 19.—A desperate attempt was made by two convicts to escape from the penitentiary at about eight o'clock yesterday morning, as a result of which Charles B. Lauterbaugh of Mount Vernon, a guard, was shot and killed, while two convicts, O'Neil and Atkinson, received injuries of a serious nature, and both are now in the prison hospital.

The two convicts, who are serving fifteen years each for robbery, committed in Ceveland, obtained possession of firearms and attempted to escape by terrorizing the guards.

To Strengthen Wei-Hai-Wei.

London, Nov. 19.—The Evening News says that the government has sent an engineer to Wei-hai-Wei to construct breakwaters, build six powerful forts and dredge the harbor, so as to permit warships to lie inside.

Thes eworks will obviate the necessity which would otherwise exist, in case of hostilities, of warships putting to sea each night in order to avoid torpedo attacks.

Orders have been issued for the enrolment of a battalion of Chinese for service at Wei-Hai-Wei.

Dreyfus Hears the Good News.

Paris, Nov. 19.—Ex-Captain Dreyfus was yesterday officially informed of the decision of the court of cassation to order a revision of his trial.

The telegram stating that Dreyfus had been officially notified of the action of the court of cassation in the matter of the revision of his trial came from the governor of French Guiana.

No particulars were given in the telegraphic dispatch as to how the prisoner received the news.

Rhodes May Soon Be Premier.

Cape Town, Nov. 19.—The government and the opposition have practically settled upon the terms of a compromise, and a bill for redistribution of the seats in the Assembly will be introduced which will be satisfactory to the Progressives.

The early resumption of the premiership by Cecil Rhodes is generally regarded as possible.

Tornado Near Tunis.

London, Nov. 19.—Advices received from Tunis say that a tornado has swept over the bay of Bizerta, driving vessels ashore, destroying buildings and raving the country for miles around.

Several persons were killed and many others injured.

Ship Lost With 28 Men.

Newport, Oregon, Nov. 19.—News has just been received from Alsea Bay, sixteen miles below here, that the sailing vessel Atlantic is ashore.

She had a crew of thirty men on board and of that number only two got ashore alive.

Interesting to Commuters.

Judge Lambert, of Newark, has given a decision in a case that is of great importance to a large part of the population of Plainfield in view of the fact that they are such frequent patrons of railroads. Some time ago two South Orange commuters boarded a Delaware, Lackawanna and Western train, but were unable to obtain seats. Until provided with seats they declined to show their tickets or pay their fares. At the next station an officer "forcibly" ejected them from the train by laying his hands upon their shoulders and piloting them gracefully from the train.

Thereupon they carried their case into court. The commuters maintained that when the railroad company accepted their money they virtually agreed to not only provide transit but also to provide seats for them between the points they had paid to be carried. The Judge disagreed with the contention, however, and claimed that the company agreed only to carry them between two points and it was not obliged to furnish seats. Whether the dissatisfied commuters will carry the case to a highter court remains to be seen.

Mr. Hetfield's Position.

Councilman Walter Hetfield, who is displaying such an active interest in the Citizens' movement and its chances for success, is a candidate for the City Judgeship nomination on that ticket. In the event of Mr. Hetfield's nomination and election to that office he would naturally have to resign his seat in the Common Council.

If the election should result in a close vote in the Common Council between Republicans and Citizens, and Mr. Hetfield was forced to resign in order to assume the duties of City Judge, the opposition might have the pleasure of electing his successor.

Mr. Hetfield's nomination on a Citizens' ticket for City Judge would therefore jeopardize the chances of the Citizens' controlling the next Council, and if he is honest and consistent in his arguments and professions of devotion to the public welfare of the city as a whole it is his duty to remain in the Council till his present term expires.

The Nicaragua Canal.

There seems to be no ground or fear that the new Nicaragua canal concession made by President Zelaya on the eve of Nicaragua's absorption into the United States of Central America will seriously complicate canal affairs. Granted to a group of Chicago and New York men, it only becomes good on the lapse of the old concession one year hence. Mr. W. R. Grace, the New York capitalist, who is interested in the project, states that the main purpose was to provide against contingencies and make assurance doubly sure that the waterway would be built in any event. He denies that there is any hidden motive to interfere with the action of congress, and expresses the hearty wish to co-operate with all effective movement toward the desired end.

Religious Bigotry.

The outbreaks of religious bigotry which shock attention occasionally, even under the mild and wholesome influence of the modern religious spirit, show what perverse horrors lurk potentially in the human heart. Now it is a modern Abraham who would offer up his son in bloody sacrifice, and, again, a case comes to light which recalls the horrors of Moloch worship. The latest example is that of a Catholic woman in the city of New York who had married a Hebrew and lived a happy life with him for a number of years. Finally her remorse awakens and under the influence of some strange perversity of conscience she is convicted of the sense of deadly sin in having contracted such a union. To expiate the crime she drenches her garments with kerosene and makes herself a living funeral pyre in the presence of her shrieking children. Human nature is so constituted that in some cases religious excitement stimulates dangerous traits entirely at odds with the spirit and principles of religion. And so the very light of heaven seems to beget darkness, madness, fanaticism and despair. Many of the most wholesome herbs and fruits can be made to yield the deadliest poisons.

State Superintendent of Schools Baxter has decided that no teacher can withdraw from the retirement fund while holding a position as a teacher. It seems that a number of teachers who signed the agreement to pay one per cent. of their salaries for the benefit of the fund now wish to get out of that duty. Of course, they are willing to forego any of the benefits if allowed to withdraw, but Mr. Baxter decides that they have no right to do. The only way of getting out of the assessment is by resigning their positions. This decision, however, is not considered likely to cause any vacancies among the school teachers.

Acting Governor Watkins has appointed the State Board of Canvassers to meet at the State House Tuesday, November 29th, and canvass the vote of the recent State election. The board consists of five Senators. Three are Republicans and two Democrats. The Republicans are E. C. Stokes, Cumberland; William M. Johnson, Bergen, and Charles A. Reed, Somerset. The Democrats are James H. VanCleef, Middlesex and Lewis J. Martin, Sussex.

Jersey City's last horse car was abandoned yesterday, the trolley substituting the plodding gait of the raw-boned equine as motive power. That is practically the end of the horse car in Jersey. And yet New York, with its citizens compelled to use scores of these ancient facilities for transit about the city, has the audacity to try to make Jerseymen appear as laggards as compared with the swiftness of the metropolis.

There are 30,863 men rendering service on the railroads in New Jersey, and the amount paid them in wages during the last fiscal year was $17,409,098.73. The Pennsylvania heads the list. Of its 12,344 employes rendering service in New Jersey, 10,862 are wholly employed in this State.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The finance committee of Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, has made an appeal to the people for assistance in providing for the expenses of the coming year. Citizens of Bound Brook are always cared for in this institution and now is the time for our benevolent citizens to tender contributions toward its support.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

The Case Broke Down.

When the late Neal Dow was a young man he was chief of the volunteer fire department of Portland, Maine. His activity in temperance reform made him unpopular with the liquor sellers, and they tried to get him removed.

At a hearing on the matter, one witness testified that Mr. Dow was arbitrary and reckless of the lives of the men. By way of illustration, he said that he was ordered by the chief to take the pipe which he was holding into a place where he refused to go, telling the chief that no man could live there.

On cross-examination, he was asked: "What did Mr. Dow do then?"

"Snatched the pipe from my hands and told me to clear out."

"What else?"

"He took it into the fire himself."

At that point the case against the chief broke down.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

SILENCE IS GOLDEN.

Much obliged for what you haven't said,
For words sometimes are like envenomed darts;
And, interspersed between the lines, I've read,
Unwritten words—a balm for wounded hearts.

Much obliged for what you haven't said;
"I told you so" would rankle now like sin;
If eyes could kill I should be lying dead.
If lips should ope the de'il would walk in.

Much obliged for what you haven't said;
Unspoken words are words that I extol.
If once let loose to fall like molten lead,
They sear and burn deep scars unto one's soul.

"A word that's fitly spoken" (I have read).
"Falls like sweet dew upon the wounded breast;"
But silence is so rare and after all is done and said,
There's nothing half so good as giving one a rest.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The Burrill Comedy Company, supporting the ever-popular actress Laura Hulbert, will open a week's engagement at Stillman Music Hall Monday, November 21st. The company is first-class in every respect, and will present a number of famous plays, changing the programme at every performance. The opening presentation Monday night will be that powerful play "Infatuation." Special scenery and elegant costumes are used. Among the specialty artists are Nellie DeVan, champion buck and wing dancer; the Spauldings, sketch artists; Paul Hudson, the well-known baritone singer; Marie Blair, chanteuse-international, singing in five different languages, and Birdie Bortram, comedienne. The prices of admission are 10, 20 and 30 cents during the evenings, and 10 cents for children and 20 cents for adults during the matinees. The matinees, which will be given daily, commencing Tuesday.

* * * * *

The management of Music Hall offers a genuine novelty for next month when Marie Wainwright will appear in Jacob Litt's production of the latest London and New York success, "Shall We Forgive Her?" The play is full of heart-interest, and succeeds in eliciting the sympathy of the audience, without resort to the lurid sensationalism usually found in the English domestic-drama. It treats of the social question in an entirely original and unique manner. Miss Wainwright will, of course, appear as the central figure of the story. It is a sympathetic and highly dramatic role and one peculiarly fitted to Miss Wainwright's versatile talents.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The combined committees from the various wards supporting the Citizens' ticket will probably meet early next week and make nominations for the coming election.

—Neat signs have been placed on the Plainfield trolley cars telling the people the names of places which can be reached, including Dunellen, Lincoln, Bound Brook, Somerville, Raritan and New Brunswick.

—Rev. Dr. Morgan, the corresponding secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, will deliver an address in the First Baptist church, Sunday, Nov. 20th. His hearers may expect some very startling statements.

—A district meeting of the Patriotic Order Sons of America will be held at Bound Brook Monday night. All members of Camp No. 30 are requested to meet at their rooms that night in order to take the 6:45 o'clock trolley car.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 19—The Dunellen football team have arranged a game with a team from the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., to be played Thanksgiving Day on the Lincoln avenue grounds. The Plainfield team is a heavier team than the team here, but the Dunellen team have had more practice than their opponents, and the game is apt to be an interesting one.

Rev. E. S. Jamison, of the Methodist church, has invited the members of the Daughters of Liberty and the Jr. O. U. A. M. to attend services in his church tomorrow night. The members of the order will meet at Apgar's Hall and proceed in a body to the church.

A little pug dog gives the motormen on the cars considerable trouble by running out and barking at them as they go by, and keeping so close to the cars that the dog is in imminent danger of being run over.

Alfred Randolph and Adam Dealaman are on a hunting trip through Warren county. They are expected back with enough game to supply all Dunellen with Thanksgiving dinners.

Because of the fair which is in progress under the auspices of the Epworth League, there was no class meeting held in the Methodist church last night.

Mrs. James Dunham and daughters, Miss Ella and Miss Lizzie Dunham, are spending two weeks with the Misses Fields, of New Brunswick.

Captain Thompson, of Cranford, who has taken up his residence on the old Ryder place, is confined to his house by illness.

Miss Mabel Jamison will sing at the entertainment to be given in Friendship Hall, New Market, next week.

Mr. Harold, of Plainfield, a former postmaster here, is dangerously ill at his home with rheumatism.

There will be a meeting of the board of stewards of the Methodist Episcopal church Monday night.

Robert Humpston was made a member of Court Dunellen, I. O. F., at their last meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Terry have returned from a visit in Hunterdon county.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Taylor have returned from a visit with Paterson relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Taylor and Miss Keely are visiting in New Brunswick.

Mrs. J. G. Taylor has been entertaining company from out of town.

Mr. Lindabury, of Plainfield, was a visitor in town Thursday night.

Work on the new freighthouse will be commenced shortly.

The Daughters of Liberty will meet Monday night.

Edison Brown has gone to Bristol, Conn., to live.

John Herbert is enjoying a short vacation.

NEW MARKET.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

New Market, Nov. 19.—A special service of song will be held in the Baptist church tomorrow night at which out of town talent will be present.

All the members of Friendship Council are requested to meet at Apgar's Hall, Dunellen, tomorrow night, to attend services in the Methodist church.

Fred C. Ward has moved into the Eiseman house on the Bound Brook road.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 19.—Constable Walpole and W. R. Stanbery went to New York Thurday to recover Mr. Stanbery's jewelry, stolen by Metz, the alleged piano tuner. Metz had turned over pawn tickets for all to Mr. Stanbery, so there was no trouble recovering the property.

The adjourned hearing of the seven boys accussed of breaking and entering the public school building on Hallow 'een night came up before Judge Clark's court last evening. The Board of Education failed to appear so Judge Clark dismissed the youthful offenders, as the evidence presented by the board did not warrant a conviction.

Rev. Mr. Woodruff, of the Methodist church will preach a patriotic sermon Sunday morning, taking for his subject, "The Bible and the Flag." Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., will attend the services in a body. In the evening he will continue his sermons on popular subjects, taking for his text, "Wanted—a Man."

A Sunday school rally will be held in the Baptist church Sunday evening. An interesting programme has been arranged. Several short addresses will be made by prominent Sunday-school workers. The services begins at 7:30 o'clock.

Rev. J. S. Braker and George E Hall have returned from a three days' stay in Paterson, where they have been atttending the State Sunday-school convention.

A meeting of the young men of the villiage will probably be called some evening next week and a chance given those who desire to join the Y. M. C. A. to do so.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 19—Next Saturday evening there will be a lecture and entertainment given in the Westfield Club hall for the benefit of the Westfield boys who went to Cuba with the Seventy-first New York Regiment. Among the speakers announced for the evening are Major Keck, the officer who led the Third B Battalion up the hill at San Juan, and Private W. B. Clark, of Company B, who was shot through the head, the bullet entering the back of the head and coming out of the mouth, taking with it several teeth.

The following new officers have been elected by the members of the Westfield Firemen's Relief Association: President, C. W. Harden; vice-president, A. Wilcox; recording secretary, F R. Pennington; financial secretary; C. D. Reese; treasurer, I.H. Lambert; board of trustees, Isaac Seeley, A. Wilcox, A. B. Smith, J. N. Wilcox and James English.

—Great dissatisfaction is being expressed by Plainfield commuters over the fact that the 8:37 a. m. train to New York is most always late, and it does not get them into New York some mornings much before 10 o'clock.

Thanks for the Foundation.

An old itinerant colored preacher while conducting services at a protracted meeting was interrupted by a messenger, who rushed in and exclaimed excitedly:

"Parson, de lightnin' struck yo' house en burned it ter de groun'!"

The congregation expected to see the parson collapse under this information, but he did not.

"Burned de house down, did it?"

"Yes, suh!"

"Well, did it hurt de land what de house wuz on?"

"No, suh!"

"Thank de Lord fer dat!" exclaimed the parson. "Thank de Lord de land's lef! En now we'll sing on page 227, 'How Firm a Foundation.' Thank some brother fer de tune!"—Atlanta Constitution.

Wouldn't Go Contrary to Her Belief.

Rather than violate her religious convictions, Miss Josephine Moore, vocal instructor in the public schools of Macon, Ga., at a salary of $70 a month, resigned her position.

The Board of Education, in order to check the spread of smallpox, ordered compulsory vaccination a short time ago, and only Miss Moore declined to be inoculated.

She regarded such practices as inimical to her faith as a Christian Scientist, and deprived herself of her means of support rather than accept orders which conflicted with her religious opinions.—New York Press.

STALKING BIG GAME.

How the Four Day Hunting Season is Spent on Long Island.

The Long Island deer season is a peculiar affair. It is but four days long, covering the four Wednesdays in November. Although the country in which the deer are found in the interior of the island is heavily wooded, it presents no difficulties to the starting of the game from cover with hounds. As the south shore which skirts the so-called wilderness is thickly settled, a host of sportsmen is on the hunting ground by dawn of the first day of hunting. There are a hundred men with guns ready to pour a hail of buckshot in the direction of the fleeing deer. Rifles are not used, because the hunter could not pull a trigger without bringing down some fellow sportsman within range of the bullet. On Tuesday night before the first Wednesday in November, Sayville, Patchogue, Bay Shore, Smithtown and other places on the south shore and to the north of the Ronkonkoma Woods are in a feverish state of preparation for the opening of the deer season with the first light. The sun has just tipped the horizon when the "wilderness," the tracks of the Long Island railroad running through it and the roads bounding it resound with the report of shotguns. The battle is on.

The Long Island chase has developed a peculiar kind of deerslayer, the like of whom is not known in other countries. He is called a track hunter, because he takes his stand on the ties of the Long Island railroad where they run through the woods. The bay of hounds at once calls the track-hunters by hundreds to the steel rails. Often they are to be seen as thick as mosquitoes in Jersey. The deer breaks and dashes for the track to escape the hounds. Then a mighty fusilade wakes the echoes. The nimrods within sight of the animal have filled the air with lead. Of course, the deer falls, and the sportsmen swarm around its dying form like crows about a carcass. The question of who shall have the antlers if it be a buck, who shall have the hide, and among how many the meat shall be divided are rarely settled except after a riot. Any one who can squint along a barrel and press a trigger may be a track-hunt. The utmost woodcraft is required to locate the Long Island railroad in the "wilderness."

All the Long Island deer hunters are not of the grotesque type described, however. Fair sport may be had on any of the preserves of some of the clubs; sport that requires a good eye and a quick hand and some degree of skill. It is not to be compared with deer hunting in the Adirondacks or the Maine wilderness, but it gives the deer a running chance for its life, and men may engage in it without a loss of self-respect.

From Waverly on the south, nearly to Wading River on the north and east, and Smithtown on the west, the deer abound in great numbers. This territory embraces Lake Ronkonkoma, where the Indians used to lie in wait for their game. The country is flat, and covered with scrub oak and underbrush, through which even the guides sometimes have trouble in pushing their way.

From Oakdale north, and embracing a strip about two miles wide and five miles long, is the preserve of the Southside club, an organization of wealthy gentlemen, who, by observing the law themselves and compelling its enforcement by others, have succeeded in increasing the number of deer to such an extent that the farmers have good cause for complaint. The latter argue the injustice of allowing the deer to destroy their crops while the law protects the deer from being shot.

The change in the game laws distributing the season over four weeks, is generally regarded by sportsmen as a wise move. Previously four consecutive days were set aside and then the woods fairly broke loose into a pandemonium.

For four days there would be a scene of carnage, not limited alone to the deer. Stray shots found resting places in human targets. The lust for the chase became wild. All else was forgotten. Private preserves were invaded and despoiled

The game keepers were in open warfare with the less scrupulous huntsmen, who respected neither the law nor the proprieties of sport and fair play. But a great change has been wrought. Last year the gunning was followed with equal zest, but the one day of each week set apart and the six days intervening had a tendency to check any attempt at lawlessness.

And the game that was killed! On the opening day of the season it was estimated that no less than 150 deer succumbed to the hunters' prowess. Next day the trains on the Long Island railroad fairly groaned under their weight of venison. Others of the sportsmen carried their trophies away by wagon, and still others, bound for the ducks of Great South Bay, had recourse to boats.

To Keep Flowers Fresh.

Flowers trailing singly over the cloth is one form of decoration in more or less use at special functions. Hostesses find frequently, however, that the roses and other blossoms do not last through a long meal, and every one knows that trailing faded flowers are not an attractive sight. To obviate this, a florist says that if a bit of moss is dipped in water and then shaken nearly free of it, the cut end of the rose may be wrapped in this and tied on with a bit of sewing silk, and this will keep the flowers fresh. It is easy to conceal such treatment by bending a leaf over the end.

THE NEW DEFENDER.

It is To Be Constructed Under Lock and Key in the Herreshoff Yards.

The new cup defender will of course, be built under lock and key, the usual method of the procedure that is adopted at the Herreshoff works, and little beyond the statement that she will be of the bulb-fin type and that her lines generally will not depart radically from those of the Defender, could be learned.

While the Herreshoff family is large, it looks upon "Nat" as its genius. At the age of ten he could sail a boat with consummate skill and judgment. When seventeen he became a student in the Institute of Technology, in Boston, where he still further developed his taste for physics as particularly applied to steam engineering and naval architecture. In 1870, when twenty-two years old, he became connected with the well known Corlis Steam Engine Company, of Providence, R. I., and with the famous George Corlis gained great practical knowledge in engineering and the application of steam power. During his stay at the Corlis works he designed the engines and all the naval construction at the Herreshoff's.

When he left the Corlis company he joined the Herreshoffs as part owner, designer and superintendent, and there, by his work, he has become deservedly famous.

The Gloriana, owned by E. D. Morgan, N. Y. Y. C., was the first vessel to snow Nat Herreshoff's fully developed theory, but its value was demonstrated in the Pelican, a much smaller vessel, built several months before the Gloriana was designed. The theory was subsequently carried to its perfection in the sloop Wasp, which has been, and is, perhaps, the most successful boat ever built at Bristol.

The development of cup defending models was really begun in 1892, with the centreboard sloop Navahoe, built for Mr Royal Phelps Carroll, N. Y. Y. C., which became famous in British as well as American waters. This vessel was built in the south shop at Bristol.

The cup candidate Colonia, a keel boat, followed, being set up in the south shops late in February, 1893, immediately after the Navahoe was launched. Previous to that time the centreboard Vigilant, the victorious cup defender, was started in the north shop. The Colonia was launched in May, and the Vigilant in June, 1893. The Vigilant was the first vessel of any size ever painted with bronze, and her record here and abroad need not be recalled.

The Defender was commenced in February, 1895, in the south shop, and was finished and overboard the following July. The new defender, the yacht that will meet the Shamrock, will be built in the south shop, where the Navahoe, Colonia and Defender were constructed, and will probably in form closely resemble the victorious craft of 1895, as there may be danger in making too abrupt a departure from her successful design. The study of the Defender by N. G. Herreshoff did not cease with her races. For three years he has had her in mind, pondering over her form and her performances, which were unhappily too meagre to satisfy the multitude of exacting yachtsmen. And this continued thought must result in further improvement, if such is possible.

Voting in 1864.

One of the most interesting features of the stirring war election of '64, when Abraham Lincoln ran a second time for the presidency of the United States and was opposed by General George B. McClellan, was the voting of the soldiers. For nearly four years these gallant men had marched and fought, periling their lives willingly on a hundred bloody battlefields and knowing no laws but the commands of their superior officers. Now they were again to exercise their rights as sovereign citizens; some at their homes, where they had gone on furloughs, and many in their far off camps.

Extraordinary precautions were taken to secure the untrammeled vote of the men fighting at the front and to guard against corruption. Some of the states had made provisions, before the war broke out, for taking the vote of soldiers absent from their respective states with the army; and the other states had adopted similar provisions as soon as the necessity became apparent.

At this time General McClellan was supposed to be very popular with the soldiers, and many of the political prophets of the day predicted that the soldiers' vote would be cast almost solidly for "Little Mac," as he was sometimes affectionately called. But the boys in blue carried their own thinking machines along with them, and these did not permit of their forgetting "Father" Abraham. The subjoined table gives the army votes, which were counted in canvassing the returns for electors.

States	Lincoln.	McClellan.
Maine	4,174	741
New Hampshire	2,066	690
Vermont	243	49
Pennsylvania	26,712	12,349
Maryland	2,800	321
Kentucky	1,194	2,823
Ohio	41,146	9,753
Michigan	9,402	2,959
Iowa	15,178	1,364
Wisconsin	11,372	2,458
California	2,600	237

This table does not give the vote of all the soldiers. Many were at their homes on furloughs; and no separate acocunt of their votes could be kept; but it is sufficient to show the warm place Abraham Lincoln held in the hearts and brains of the privates of '64.

Mrs. Taddella: "Let's see! Susie Dimpling is about twenty years old, isn't she?"

Mrs. Wiffles: "Susie Dimpling twenty! Susie Dimpling will never see twenty again if she lives to be eighty."

A CITY UNDER WATER.

Old Port Royal Can Be Seen on a Clear Day. Destroyed in 1692.

The traveller who visits the capital of Jamaica should pray for clear weather without wind, that he may see the sunken city of Port Royal. When the water of the harbor is ruffled by breezes the city is obscured from view. But on a cloudless, still day, when the surface of the sea is perfectly smooth, the ruins of the phantom city may be plainly seen in the depths of the transparent water.

The spire of the old cathedral is the most prominent object. In the clear water you can see the fishes, lazily swimming in and out among the ruined turrets, more suggestive of owls and bats than of the finny inhabitants of the sea. Occasionally glimpses can be had of the ruins of other buildings—buildings which for more than two centuries have kept their ghastly secrets and will keep them until the end of time.

Down there, in that peaceful depth, lie the bones of three thousand men, women and children, carried down into the sea with their homes on that awful day in 1692. An earthquake, suddenly and without warning, smote the profligate city of Port Royal, which slid into the sea. The waters opened and swallowed it up, and there, beneath the silent waves, was hidden the wickedness and debauchery of a community described by historians as being almost without parallel.

From the richest city of its time it has dwindled into insignificance, until now it is a most wretched place, used only as a naval station. Disaster after disaster has overtaken it.

After the earthquake the town was rebuilt, only to be completely destroyed by fire in 1703. On August 22, 1722, it was swept into the sea by a hurricane. It was once more reconstructed, but again, in 1815, it was reduced to ashes, and as recently as 1880 it was visited by another hurricane. Every disaster was attended by great loss of life.

The city of Port Royal was originally built upon a narrow strip of land extending out into the sea, which accounts for its strange disappearance at the time of the earthquake. Like the house of the foolish man of Biblical lore, which was builded upon the sand, it literally slid into the water when the earthquake shock came.

Previous to that fateful seventh day of June, 1692, Port Royal had been known as "the finest town in the West Indies, and the richest spot in the world." It was, as it now is, a British colony, but there was little either in its government or its customs of British morally. We are told that it was a place of luxurious debauchery; that in their excesses the colonists rivalled the profligates of ancient Rome.—New York Herald.

Character in the Pitch of Voices.

T. H. Brand, of Chicago, thinks he has discovered in his occupation of "voice building" that human beings are individualized or made known to each other by the pitch of their voices, and says it is a fact that the disposition of an individual is indicated by the key tone of the voice, just the same as the tone of an E-flat cornet or any other musical instrument enenables people to identify the instrument with which the sound is produced. It will be found that persons whose voices are pitched in the key of "C" are of a social nature, and their whole make-up is amiable. "D" voices indicate hopefulness and cheerfulness; "E" indicates a sanguine temperament. Those whose voices are pitched in "F" are earnest and sincere; those in "G" are egotistical and domineering; those in "A" are fretful, nervous and pathetic, while those in "B" are timid and apprehensive and lack confidence and self-control. The semi-tones are similarly distributed, but we give the diatonic scale as a sample. With this key any one can judge of the qualifications and the disposition of those with whom he comes in contact.

Arabian Sheep Without Wool.

The principal kind of meat consumed by the people of Arabia, both native and foreign, is the mutton of the Somali, or black-head sheep, and, no matter by whom eaten, all pronounce it the best mutton ever tasted. This sheep, as its name indicates, is from the Somali county, on the African coast. These sheep have no wool, but short, fine hair, similar to that of a dog. The most peculiar thing about them is that they have a large lump of pure fat growing right at the root of the tail, and this fat varies in size and weight according to the conditions of the sheep. A medium-sized lump of this fat weighs about four pounds. Such a sheep, which weighs from thirty-five to forty pounds, is sold at from four to five rupees (85 cents to $1.05). The skins, when sun-dried, are exported, and large quantities of them go every year to the New York market, where they are known as "mocha skins," but, like the "mocha coffee" of commerce this is merely a term and nothing else.—New York Press.

An American actress and singer who still shines in comic opera after twenty-three years of work on the stage was asked for her Ponce de Leon secret. Her response was: "Lots of air, lots of exercise, lots of sleep, lots of water, lots of friends, lots of enthusiasm, very little wine, and very little worry." The recipe deserves consideration.

CHAPTER V.

The band of famous daredevils looked insolently at De Guiche as they range themselves beside Cyrano. He had overcome his sadness and had thrown himself into the task of showing a cheerful Gascon face to the rabble of flatterers. Now at his captain's command he stepped forward toward De Guiche and, waving his hand toward his comrades in arms, broke into a ready rhythmic introduction:

"My lord, Gascon cadets are they.
Of Carbon of Castel-Jaloux;
Boasters, swaggers, bold and gay.
Cadets of Gascony are they

"Their pride, their daring race, alway.
Their blood, than oldest blood more blue.
Cadets of Gascony are they.
Of Carbon of Castel-Jaloux.

"Spindle shanks and eagle eyes—
Bristling beard and wolfish teeth!
They charge the rabble. The rabble flies.
See, their plumes! Guess what lies
Hidden under? Holes are beneath.

"Spindle shanks and eagle eyes—
Bristling beard and wolfish teeth"—

"A poet, too, as well as a warrior," half sneered De Guiche. "Ah, well, it is the fashion! Will you be mine?"

"Not yours or any man's."

"Last night your quips did please my uncle, Richelieu. A word from me would do you service there. Shall I not say it? He is a patron of letters, and you, I'll wager, have written five acts or so in rhyme? Ah, I see you have! Take your play to him. I'll speak to him."

Cyrano wavered. There was a play he longed to see upon the stage.

"I would gladly," he began.

"My uncle is a critic skilled. A line or two he may change, but no more," said De Guiche.

"He will not change so much," retorted Cyrano. "He shall not see the play."

"You're proud."

"Ah, have you noticed that?"

The cadets came laughing to Cyrano. They bore a pile of hats.

"See what your enemies left as they fled," they cried; "their hats."

"Sooth, it must be a sore day for him who laid that snare for Ligniere," said one.

"Who was it, think you?"

"'Twas I myself, gentlemen," broke in De Guiche. "It was not work for my sword to punish a drunken rhymester. I hired those your comrade routed."

A silence fell. The cadet who had piled the hats into Cyrano's arms stood ill at ease.

"What shall I do with them?" he asked.

"My lord will render them unto his friends again," said Cyrano, dropping them at De Guiche's feet.

The nobleman looked furiously at the Gascon.

"My chair!" he cried. "And you, good sir, I counsel you to read your 'Don Quixote.' He battled with a windmill. Who battles thus against one"—

"Who shifts with every wind," said Cyrano coolly, bowing low.

"May find himself swept low into the mire."

"Or upward to the stars," said Cyrano as the great man stepped into the chair.

"So!" cried his friend Le Bret in a passion of disappointment. "So! Each chance that fate has offered you this morning you have flung away. What fool's idea is this, to raise an enemy at every step?"

"Ah, friend," said the whimsical Cyrano, "I step more surely when eyes send forth upon me shot of hostile looks. I embrace hatred, and she gives me the ruff that holds my head up high; each enemy's another fold to bind the more and add a ray of glory. For hatred, like the ruff of Spanish pattern, grips like a vice, but is an aureole."

At last Le Bret realizes the source of Cyrano's waywardness.

"So say aloud. Be proud and bitter," said Le Bret. "But whisper me just this, she does not love you."

Scarcely had Le Bret's guess hit its mark when the door swung open, and in came Cyrano's successful rival, the young Baron de Neuvilette. He made his way quietly to a table, but the Gascons, inflamed by the victory of their brother in arms, were not minded to let him be quiet. They taunted him with being a northern greenhorn, a sickly apprentice at the art of war. They dared him to try Cyrano.

"There's one among us," boasted a cadet, "to whom you no more dare say 'somewhat' than cry 'rope' at him whose father died dangling at a noose's end."

Then he proceeded to elucidate.

"Scoff—nay—suggest a comment of Cyrano's nose, and your life is done," said he.

"Ah, so?" queried Christian.

Whereupon there was enacted the strangest drama the bold cadets of Gascony had ever seen. Cyrano began to tell the story of his fight. At every second he was interrupted by the new recruit from Touraine with courteously insolent queries about his nose and with surmises as to the part it had taken in the fray. The Gascons looked for the stranger's annihilation. But Cyrano, though the veins in his face were whipcords with suppressed rage, still let young Christian live and even forced himself on with his tale. Finally the stranger's insolence could no longer be brooked.

"Leave me! Leave me with him!" cried Cyrano to his friends, and they passed out, believing that the end had come for Christian.

But the promise to Roxane was all that dwelt in Cyrano's memory.

"Embrace me!" he said to Christian when the room was cleared. "Embrace me! I am her brother—her cousin brother, and she loves you!"

They talked together, the two men who loved Roxane. They planned for her. Christian admitted all his dullness. He was a soldier, he said, and before women was tongue tied. Cyrano promises to tutor him in wit.

"I'll daily teach your tongue," said he. "Only remember and repeat to her the things I bid. So shall she never have a disillusion. Alone you fear to chill her heart. Take then my words—and so you shall win her! Wed them to your lips. It will amuse me. It is a good experience for a poet. Will you not do it?"

The cadets come in, and, to their disgust, find the once swaggering Cyrano embracing Christian. A musketeer mockingly laughs at the scene, whereupon Cyrano cuffs his head, and the cadets turn somersaults for joy to see that all the old spirit is not dead.

The wooing of Roxane began. Daily the lover, who could think and feel and mold his thoughts to beauty, taught the lover who was dumb. Daily Roxane, hearing Cyrano's impassioned speeches through Christian's chiseled lips, was borne deeper and deeper into the ecstasy of love. Daily Roxane told her cousin of her lover's wit and fancy. She read Cyrano verses he had written, and when he seemed scarce enthusiastic over them she taunted him with being jealous of a better poet than himself. Then Cyrano's eyes would flash with merriment, and over his mismated face a smile would run. He was not altogether sad in those days.

But Roxane's love for Christian was confessed more freely to Cyrano than to Christian himself, and as for the rest of the world she hid it completely, fearing the vengeance of the disappointed De Guiche, who still pursued her with attentions. He had been made commander of the army. He had it in his power to send her lover to death. She beguiled him a little now and then, and when finally the orders came that the French forces should proceed to Arras she arranged with him that the company of Cyrano should be left behind—and in that company was Christian, of whom the lord commander had not heard.

"So you will be revenged upon my cousin for his mockery of your patronage and his insolence to you," she said. "He is a very fire eater! How he will gnash his teeth to be, with all his cadets, left at home when there is fighting afield!"

"Who but a woman would be subtle enough to plan such a revenge?" cried the admiring De Guiche.

It was at this time that Christian was pleased to indulge in a fit of the sulks. He would have none of Cyrano's aid. He would be loved for himself and not for Cyrano's fine speeches. He would woo Roxane in his own fashion. And he did—to such effect that Roxane, bored, dismissed him till such time as he should have his wits again. Christian, properly repentant, overtook his tutor in the art of love beneath Roxane's balcony.

The wall that ran about the sweet green garden had benches set against it. The balcony of Roxane's window overhung the quiet little street. Dew heavy vines fell from it, veiling all the wall in beauty.

"Oh, I shall die, Cyrano! Help me! Teach me! She has sent me away!" wailed Christian.

In the latticed window above the greenery a light flitted.

"Ssh!" cautioned Cyrano, drawing Christian back beneath the screen of vines and into the black shadow of the wall. "Ssh! She's there, and all may be repaired. Call to her, then speak as I shall bid you speak."

GRANT'S CUBAN POLICY.

He Had Seen War's Terrors and Guided the Nation out of a Renewal.

The action of President Grant in regard to Cuba is so frequently referred to in certain quarters as a correct precedent to follow, that some reference to the circumstances of that time cannot fail to be interesting at the present juncture.

In 1873 the Virginius, an American steamer, was engaged in ordinary commerce between this country and Cuba. She was purchased by some American citizens who were anxious to wrest the "Pearl of the Antilles" from the power of Spain. While engaged in heading with a mixed cargo of passengers and supplies for Cuba, the Virginius was pursued, overtaken and captured off the shores of Jamaica.

Those on board were taken to Havana, being starved and insulted on the voyage back, and then subjected to a mock trial such as Spain mercifully provides for military offenders of the worst sort. Conviction followed without even the show of decorum that accompanies the ordinary drumhead court-martial, and the prisoners were sentenced to be shot. The crew and passengers shared equally the chivalry of Spain. The whole proceeding was carried out with that fierce spirit of brutality, that celerity of despatch which the annals of Torquemada emblaim in the pages of European history.

From one end of this country to the other a wave of popular indignation swept when the people heard of the executions and the heroic spirit, which bore up the nation's hopes at Vicksburg and at Lookout Mountain, cried to Washington to have the flag of Castille and Arragon share the fate that had so lately befallen the Empire of Maximilian.

The nation's excitement was quite as intense as in the case of the Maine's bluejackets. Blue and gray alike joined in the demand that the honor of the United States could not be atoned for by an apology and could only be satisfied by prompt and effective measures of retaliation. Caleb Cushing was then the American Minister to Madrid. Hamilton Fish was Secretary of State. Cushing was the son-in-law of the Secretary who did so much to make Grant's second term the prelude to a third. Fish was an able man but in a crisis like this he was a weak man. He was the representative also of New York's interests in the Cabinet, and New York was then the pivotal state of the Union; and in contra-distinction to the great virile and unspoiled West, New York then also represented much the same forces as it does to-day.

Grant with the true instincts of a brave soldier ordered the Navy to be put on a war footing when the Virginius affair had stirred the hearts of the American people. The President made undoubted preparation to vindicate the honor of the country and to punish Spain. Accordingly Fish was instructed to tell the Dons that they would have to let the Cuban people go. There ensued a long diplomatic correspondence, and meantime the still small voice of Wall street passed the word along to keep cool about the Virginius affair; to do nothing rash and to act with the requisite prudence as well as with the requisite energy. Such was the gawky phrasing of the period. While Grant was a firm and patriotic American he was also the most tender and humane of men. He had quelled the greatest rebellion in all history, and was not anxious to subject a nation which he had raised erect and upon its feet, so soon again to the dread hazard of war. The era of resumption and of reconstruction was in full swing; and if Spain made suitable reparation and compensation to the families of those butchered to make a Spanish holiday it was said to be savoring of cruelty to smash Spain in her distant colony at a time when Serrano and his extemporized Cabinet were earnestly seeking to bring the Spanish Monarchy into the great family of republics. Serrano was represented as the saviour of the Spanish people, and as a great soldier himself, and as a Marshal in the Spanish Army he could toady "the tenderest part," the heart of another great soldier, then too the President of a sister republic in that new civilization which Spain had formerly given to the world.

There was a sublime pathos in the situation that was artfully turned to account in the case of a man whose fame was linked with that of Caeser, Cyrus and Napoleon, and who could not do a small, petty or inhuman thing even if he tried to. Grant erred by not punishing Spain then and by listening to the influences to which he was subjected, but he erred on mercy's side. Thus the vacillations and sudden changes of policy of that time furnish a painful precedent if a precedent at all for those of which they remind us in 1898. The questions then as now were questions of intervention, of independence and of recognition of the Cubans in arms.

The President's sympathy like that of the vast body of the people was with Cuba. But the casuistry of Spanish diplomacy and the fine hand of Fish provided a wealth and coping of argument on the other side that the straight and simple mind of Grant was unable to resist. Accordingly having actually written a message in favor of Cuba as the dickey birds of the White House say, the President was induced to change it at the last moment, and so the precedent as it stands, is the very reverse of what it might have been had the hero of Appomattox been left to his own instincts and to his unbiased judgment. This is history but history that has yet to be written.

WAR INDEMNITIES.

The Penalties Imposed By Nations Upon Their Conquered Foes.

Perhaps the most onerous terms ever imposed by a conqueror upon his defeated foe were those to which Germany subjected France in 1871, at the close of the historic conflict that culminated in the capitulation of Paris. They consisted of the cession of the major portion of Alsace and of Lorraine, including the great fortresses of Strasburg and of Metz, and the payment of war indemnity amounting to the colossal sum of $1,000,000,000. The entire civilized world was startled by the magnitude of the sum, and very widespread doubts were expressed as to whether poor France, which was believed to be crushed beyond recovery, would ever be able to pay. But these apprehensions proved to be unfounded, and the billion of dollars was paid with such rapidity and with so little apparent effort that Prince Bismarck and the German authorities, past and present, have never ceased to lament ever since that they did not stipulate for double the amount. This indemnity is worthy of especial notice, for the reason that it greatly exceeded the actual expense to which Germany was put by the war, and was therefore a punitive or "moral and intellectual damage" indemnity, to some extent, such as "Oom" Paul Kruger wanted to collect from England for the Jameson raid. In the war of 1870-71, the time was twenty-eight weeks from the entrance of German troops into French territory to the surrender of Belfort. The German troops engaged may be taken, for practical purposes, as an even million, the official figures of the active forces being 781,000 at the commencement of the war and 937,000 at its close. The total German losses are placed at 128,000, the killed alone numbering 29,000.

Germany therefore received in cash $35 a week for each man's services, or $8,000 for each man lost; on the whole pretty good pay. But Germany—or Prussia—has a habit that way. Only four years before the war with France she took $41,750,000 from Austria and her allies, beside $3,750,000 requisitioned during the campaign. This war lasted only a month. Prussia had 437,000 men in the field, and lost 11,000. The indemnity gave her $25 a week for each man's services, or $4,250 for each man lost. However, it was an enormously expensive war for Prussia, costing her some $115,000,000, so that the indemnity did not make her balance good.

It is thanks to the intervention of Russia that Japan was prevented from exacting an indemnity of analogous proportions at the close of her war with China. She was forced to content herself with a mere bagatelle of $185,000,000, receiving in addition thereto the island of Formosa and the Pescadores, neither of which had ever been of any use, either financial or political, to China, and which will make necessary the expenditure of much treasure and life before Japan can derive any profit therefrom. The war lasted about nine months and 80,000 troops were engaged on Japan's side. The indemnity paid, therefore, $60 a week for each man.

The Turko-Russian war of 1877 came to a close with the treaty of San Stefano, the terms of which were revised in 1878 by the congress of Berlin. They comprised, among other things, the surrender of the sultan's protectorate over Roumania and Servia, the practical abandonment to Austria of Herzegovina and Bosnia, the grant of independence to Bulgaria and of autonomy to Rumelia, the Prince of Bulgaria remaining, however, subject to the suzerainty of the sultan. The treaty likewise provided for the cession of a strip of Turkish territory to Greece, but this clause was never enforced, and finally the Sublime Porte was compelled to pay a war indemnity to Russia amounting to the sum of $160,000,000. Russia demanded a much larger indemnity than that, however. For costs of the war she demanded $450,000,000, and for losses to Russian subjects and Russian commerce $251,000,000, a total of $701,000,000. The indemnity finally awarded to her in cash and land, amounts to $6,25 a week for each soldier engaged in the war.

Great Britain has received two indemnities of considerable amount from China. The first was one of $20,000,000 altogether, but part of it went to compensate merchants for opium delivered up to the Chinese government, and the portion specifically claimed on account of the expenses of the expedition just equalled the vote of credit. The second indemnity, of $60, was about $10,000,000, or less than one-third of the vote of credit for the war. The settlement of Canada's claim for indemnity for the Fenian raids from this country is noteworthy. By the first raid Canada lost six men killed and thirty-one wounded; she had to call 20,000 volunteers to arms; she had to guard the frontier with 17,000 regulars and volunteers, as well as several gunboats on the rivers and lakes. Her farmers lost heavily, as the raid occurred at a busy time of the year; and she had to pay away a lot of money in pensions and gratuities. Yet the United States did not pay a farthing compensation! When Canada pressed the matter on the home government she was assured that it was not worth while making a claim, as "the amount of compensation would be so small."

No indemnity was exacted from Denmark at the close of the war of 1864, neither was any money exacted at the close of the war of 1859 between Austria on one side and Italy and France on the other. In fact, the exaction of war indemnities may be regarded as a practice of relatively modern origin, the victors in former times having contented themselves with the surrender of territory on the part of the defeated foe.

MASTER'S SALE. IN CHANCERY OF NEW JERSEY. Between Mary A. Day, complainant, and William F. Lang, et ux., defendant—Fi fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House in Somerville, county of Somerset and State of New Jersey, on at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all those tracts or parcels of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being partly in the township of Warren, in the county of Somerset and State of New Jersey, and partly in the township of New Providence, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey, bounded as follows: The first tract being Lot No. 3 in the division of the real estate late of George Townley, deceased, and begins in the road running from the Union village to Thomas Couns', at a corner of (No. 2) Enos B. Townley's lot, at a point sixteen links westerly from the centre of the well, and four links southerly from the corner of (No. 1) the Headly lot; thence in said road north forty-four degrees west on a line of the Widow Townley's dower lot, four chains and sixty six links; thence on a line of (No. 4) formerly belonging to Benjamin Moore, north fifty-five and a half degrees west, two chains and thirty links; thence on the same, in said road, north forty-seven and a half degrees west, passing close to the northeast side of two hickory trees near the river, six chains and fifty-five links to the bank of the Passaic river; thence up the bank of said river south sixty-seven degrees west three chains and seventy links to Lines Tucker's corner; thence on his line south one degree east fifteen chains and thirty links to a stake at a corner of said Enos B. Townley's lot; thence on his line north fifty-nine and three-quarter degrees east, a hickory tree being in this line seven chains and forty-four links from said stake in said Tucker's line, fourteen chains and eighty-five links to the place of beginning. Containing twelve acres and twenty-eight hundredths of an acre of land, strict measure. Being the same premises conveyed by Squire Parrot and wife and Daniel Runyon and wife to Christopher Zuckschwert by deed dated July 5th, 1845, and recorded in the Clerk's office in the county of Somerset, July 14th, 1845, in Book B. 2, page 549, etc.

The Second Tract, being lot No. 2, of the division of the farm late of George Townley, deceased, and which was set off in the said division to the said Enos B. Townley and begins in the road leading from Union Village to Thomas Couns, opposite the middle of the well and sixteen links distant from the centre of it; thence running south fifty-nine and three-quarter degrees west, a hickory tree being in this line, fourteen chains and eighty-five links to a stake in Lines Tucker's line; thence on his line south one degree east eight chains and seven links to a basswood tree in William Titus' line; thence on his line and others, north eighty-eight degrees east twenty-seven chains and seventy links to a stake in said road; thence in said road on the line of lot (No. 1) set off to the heirs of Johanna Headley, north fifty-four and a half degrees west five chains; thence north forty-five degrees west six chains; thence still in said road on the line of lot (No. 1) north forty-two and a half degrees west nine chains and eighty links to the place of beginning. Containing twenty-five acres of land, strict measure. Being the same premises conveyed to Christopher Zuchschwert by Enos B. Townley by deed dated March 28th, 1846, and recorded in the Clerk's office of Somerset county, in Book C, No. 2, pages 160, etc.

The Third Tract, situate, lying and being in the townships of Warren and New Providence, in the counties of Union and Somerset, beginning in the middle of the road leading from Union Village at a corner of lands of David A. French, and from thence running south eighty-eight degrees, west two chains and fifty links to the middle of the mouth of the road leading to Townley's bridge over the Passaic River, at a corner of lands of said Christopher Zuckshwert; thence on his line (2) north forty-five and a half degrees west in said last named road five chains; thence (3) north forty-five degrees west six chains; thence (4) north forty-two and a half degrees west nine chains and eighty-four links to a point sixteen links distant from the middle of the well; thence (5) in the middle of said road and still on said line late of said Zuckschwert north forty-four degrees west four chains and sixty-two links to a point at a corner of a lot formerly of Benjamin Moore's in the road opposite the middle of the cider house; thence on his line to the middle of the cider house north thirty-eight and a half degrees east ninety-one links to the easternmost side of said cider house; thence (7) north sixty-two and a half degrees east, passing close to the north side of an Elm tree, marked, on this lot, twenty-one chains and fifty-two links on a line formerly of said Moore to line now or formerly of Ezra Wilcox, at a small birch bush; thence on lines now or formerly of said Wilcox and said David A. French, south two degrees east twenty-eight chains and thirty-four links to the place of beginning. Containing thirty-two and one-tenth acres of land. Being the same premises conveyed by Squier Parrot and wife, and Daniel Runyon and wife, to Christopher Zuckschwert, by deed dated May 17th, 1850, and recorded in the Clerk's office of the county of Somerset in Book R, No. 2, pages 264, etc.

The Fourth Tract, situate in Warren township in the county of Somerset. Beginning at a stone at the edge of the Passaic River at a corner of a lot, now or formerly, belonging to Squier Parrot, and Daniel Runyon, on corner of Essex, now Union and Somerset; thence south nine degrees east on the line of said Parrot and Runyon, the Headley woodlot, and E. G. Townley's lot, fifteen chains and thirty-five links to a stake in the line of the dower of the Widow Townley; thence on her line south sixty-two and a half degrees west fourteen chains and fifty-two links to the middle post of the northeast side of formerly the cider house; thence still on the line of said Widow's dower lot south thirty-eight and a half degrees west ninety-one links to the line in the road of another lot, formerly of said Parrot and Runyon; thence in said road on their line north fifty-five and a half degrees west two chains and thirty links; thence on same north forty-seven and a half degrees west six chains and fifty-five links to the bank of said river; thence down the said river the several courses to the place of beginning. Containing seventeen acres of land more or less.

Fifth tract, situated in the townships of Warren and New Providence in the counties of Essex, now Union and Somerset, being No. 5 in the division of the real estate of George T. Townley, deceased, and set off to E. B. Townley, and begins at a small beach bush in line now or formerly of R. Griffing, at a corner of Widow Elizabeth Townley's dower lot; thence on its line south sixty-two and a half degrees west seven chains to a stake a corner of land late of Benjamin Moore; thence on his line north nine degrees west five chains and seventy links to a stake a corner of lot (No. 6) set off in said division to the heirs of Johanna Headley; thence on its line north sixty-two and a half degrees east seven chains and seventy links to a stake in said Griffing's line; thence on his line south two degrees east six chains and three links to the place of beginning. Containing four acres of land strict measure.

Sixth tract, situated in the township and counties aforesaid described as follows: beginning at a stone in the edge of the Passaic River at the corner of Moore's land, it being the point where the line between the counties of Essex now Union and Somerset strikes the river; thence running on said Moore's line south nine degrees east nine chains and sixty five links to a corner of C. Zuckschwert; thence on his line north sixty-two and a half degrees east seven chains and seventy links to Ezra Wilcox's line; thence on his line north one and a half degrees west ten chains and fifteen links to the edge of said river; thence up the said river the several courses thereof to the place of beginning. Containing eight acres of land more or less.

The last three described tracts being the same premises conveyed by John R. Burnett and wife to Christopher Zuckschwert by deed dated October 6th, 1864, and recorded in the Clerk's office of the county of Somerset in Book Q, No. 3, of deeds for said county, on pages 304, etc. Excepting a tract of land twenty-five feet in width conveyed by William E. Lang and Julia Lang his wife, to Robert Cornish, by deed dated September 6th, 1892, and recorded in County Clerk's office at Somerville, Somerset county, December 6th, 1892, in Book of Deeds L, No. 7, page 55, etc.

FOOTBALL NOTES OF PARTICULAR LOCAL INTEREST.

Gossip and Points About Those Who Seek the Gridiron to Have Their Sport at This Time of the Year.

The second Alis team will go to Bayonne on Thanksgiving Day afternoon and play the Bergen Field Club on the gridiron of the New Jersey Athletic Club.

The second Alis team will play the Astor eleven of New York on the Martine Field this afternoon. The New York boys have quite a strong team and will make things lively for the Plainfield contingent.

The candidates for the Plainfield eleven will meet at the Westervelt avenue grounds Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings for practice for the Thanksgiving Day game against the San Remos.

STRIKES AND SPARES.

Next Monday evening the bowling team from the Plainfield Catholic Club will go to Bound Brook and play the third and deciding game in the series of three games.

The first games of the Central Journal Bowling League were rolled at Roselle Thursday evening, when the crack five of the Elizabeth Club met the Roselle Casino bowlers. Chamberlain, Vandeveer and Pope, the well-known veterans of the now defunct E. A. C., rolled for the Elizabeth Club. The Roselle men were rolling in good form and won the three games by the following scores: 824-761, 797-769, 827-786.

The Parks will roll their first game in the Central Journal League at Elizabeth Monday night in the alleys of the Elizabeth Club. A delegation of seven will probably represent the Parks in the three games. They will be "Doc" C. R. Thiers, Laurence H. VanBuren, H. D. Hibbard, Arthur Murphy, Percy Sandford, F. H. Ball and F. C. Ball, the captain of the team.

GOLF.

If weather permits there will be golf playing this afternoon on the Park Golf Club grounds.

There will be no special events this afternoon on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds.

Next Thursday morning on the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club grounds there will be mixed foursome play for the Gilbert cup. The last event of the season will take place November 26th, when at 10 a. m. there will be play for the Fisk cup, and at 2:30 p. m. the men's foursomes will be played.

ROD AND GUN.

J. A. Smith, of this city, returned last Thursday evening from the south where he has been enjoying himself hunting game.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Horsely Barker, of Grove street, has returned from a pleasant visit with friends in New York.

Stephen A. Krom, of Madison avenue, is attending the Yale-Harvard football game at New Haven today.

TEDDY ROOSEVELT'S STEW.

How the Colonel Cheered His Men at a Critical Time.

An incident illustrating Colonel Roosevelt's devotion to the men of his regiment was told by Trooper Burkholder, who was all through the active campaign with the rough riders.

"Only us few men who were with him," said Burkholder, "know how considerate he was at all times. There was one case in particular that illustrates this better than any that I can recall. It happened after the fight at La Quasimas. The men were tired with the hard march and the fighting, and hunger was gnawing at every stomach. Besides, we had our first men killed there, and taking it all in all, we were in an ugly humor.

"Well, things hadn't improved a bit, in fact, were getting worse along toward meal time, when the Colonel began to move about among the men, speaking encouragingly to each group. I guess he saw something was up, and no doubt he made up his mind then and there to improve at least the humor of the men. There's an old saying that a man can best be reached through his stomach, and I guess he believes in that maxim. Shortly afterward we saw the colonel, his cook, and two of the troopers of company I strike out along the narrow road toward the town, and we wondered what was up. It was probably an hour or so after this, and during a little resting spell in our work of clearing around and making things a little camplike, that the savory and almost forgotten oder of beef stew began to sweep through the clearing. Men who were working stopped short and began to sniff, and those who had stopped work for a breathing spell forgot to breathe for a second. Soon they joined in the sniffling, and I'll wager every one of us was sniffling as hard as he knew how. Oh, but didn't that smell fine! We weren't sure that it was for us, but we had a smell of it anyway. Quickly drooping spirits revived, and as the fumes of the boiling stew became stronger the humor of the men improved.

"We were finally summoned to feed, and then you can imagine our surprise. There was a big boiler and beside it a crowd of messtent men dishing out real beef stew! We could hardly believe our eyes, and I had to taste mine first to make sure it wasn't a dream. You should have seen the expressions on the faces of the men as they gulped down their stew, and we all laughed when one man yelled:

"'An it's got real onions in it, too.'

"After we had loaded up we began to wonder where it all came from and then the two troop I men told how the colonel had purchased the potatoes and onions while his own cook secured the meat from Siboney.

"You probably won't believe it, but the bushel of potatoes cost colonel Roosevelt almost $60, and he had to pay thirty-odd good American dollars to get the onions, but then he knew what his men wanted, and it was always his men first with him. There was a rush to his tent when we learned this, and if you ever heard the cheering, I'm sure you wouldn't wonder why the rough riders all love their colonel.

"I see," said Burkholder, "that in his address to his men in Camp Wykoff the colonel told how he had to hurry at the San Juan hill fight to save himself from being run over by the men. That's just like him to say that; but he probably never ran so fast before and never will again as they had to run to keep up with him. If Colonel Roosevelt lived in Arizona we would give him any office he wanted without any election nonsense."

FEW DRESSES

or wraps are really worn out. They fade a little or get spotted and rusty looking—color goes out of style, maybe—and the dress is discarded. It's a woeful waste In nine cases out of ten a couple of dollars spent for cleaning or dyeing will give you a new garment, especially if the material was good in the first place.

What a Woman Wants.

To the Editor of The Daily Press.—The time is approaching when it becomes the privilege to elect new city officers. In the year just passed we have had ample opportunity to see where improvements are needed. Plainfield is advertised far and wide as a city of homes. Then let us at the coming election see to it that such rulers are elected who will consider the best interests of these homes. A fine architectural structure handsomely appointed fails to be a home without a pure family to enjoy it.

MR. BARROWS ON THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

Declares That Much Criticism of it is Unjust.

HE QUOTES SOME FIGURES.

SAYS THAT TAX RATES IS LOW CONSIDERING IMPROVEMENTS.

Quotes Figures Which Show That in Two Years the Fourth Ward Has Received $3,000 More in Street Improvements Than the Third Word—An Answer to Councilman Liefke's Statement

To the Editor of The Daily Press.—An article headed "Hot Shot About the City Government," in which Lawyer Angleman scores the present administration, had a prominent place in your issue of Nov. 15th.

If this meeting was correctly reported it would seem that the speakers were careless about facts, and if the platform for the coming campaign is to be based on such remarks it is well that the citizens, irrespective of politics, should know how far they are right.

Such matters touched upon as the Mayor's appointments, actions of the "Board of Assessors" and "Health Board," I shall not take up, but confine myself to the Council, in which I have the honor to be Plainfield's servant.

This Council, elected as a reform one, consists of six straight Republicans, two Citizens and three Democrats. Geographically it is well distributed, and contains but four commuters against seven local business men.

On all questions of ordinances, street work and finance, the Council has practically voted unanimously, and no more harmonious Council ever served the city of Plainfield.

Lawyer Angleman states that the Council has "forced the citizens to connect with the sewer." The facts are that the Board of Health some two months ago were requested by the Council to discontinue ordering any more connections. Further, relative to the sewer beds and Mr. Frost, the latter's connection with the same is now past history. The system and beds were put in at a cost of thirty per cent. lower than similiar work averages. Whether it should have been carried to tide-water is a matter of opinion upon which there are many differences, but we have it, and must run it until such time as the people wish to make a change. Engineer Gavett and consulting engineers believe that with the additional two beds put in this fall and stoppage of ground water now being worked at, that the system will be sufficient for many years. And it hardly seems possible that the taxpayers of Plainfield would abandon this plant and run to tide water at an expense of not less than $100,000.

As regards street improvements on West Third street, etc., no new macadamizing was ever done in the past without a petition from property owners and their willingness to pay their proportions of the same.

Early in the present season the street committee gave notice that "any street wishing to macadamize could have same done by depositing with the city treasurer the cost of same less 10 cents per running foot for sixteen feet width, or 15 cents from curb to curb and intersection," this making the cost about two-thirds to property-owners and one-third to the city-at-large. Under these conditions Stelle avenue, Madison avenue from Ninth street to Stelle avenue, and Woodland avenue from south to LaGrande avenue was macadamized; East Ninth street from Park avenue to Watchung avenue, East Sixth street from Watchung avenue to Richmond street, and Franklin place from LaGrande avenue to Fifth street, failing to agree among themselves, a majority of the property-owners requested the city to have it done and put on commissioners to assess benefits, which will probably be on the basis above stated. This work will soon commence. West Third street or any other street in the city could have applied under one of the above methods, and have it done, but not a citizen of that street has appeared before the "Street Committee" relative to same.

Taking up Mr. Laing's remarks, we find the statement that more money has been spent on street work in the "Third Ward" than "Fourth Ward." From the Commissioner's books we find the street money distributed for the past two years as follows:

	1897.	1898.	Total
Third Ward	$3,579 00	$4,257.00	$7,836.00
Fourth Ward	$4,017.00	$6,217.00	$10,234.00

These figures include all work, new

RESIGNATION OF PASTOR.

REV. J. S. BRAKER WILL LEAVE SCOTCH PLAINS BAPTISTS.

He Has Accepted a Call to Waltham, Mass., Where He Goes the First of the New Year—His Work at the Plains.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 21—Rev. J. S. Braker, pastor of the Baptist church, surprised his congregation at the close of his sermon yesterday morning by tendering his resignation as pastor of the church, the resignation to take effect the last Sunday in December. Mr. Braker said his decision was final as he felt that his work in the village had been accomplished and he had accepted a call to a larger field in Waltham, Mass., and he felt it his duty to go.

Rev. Mr. Braker's pastorate dates back nearly five years, he having come to the church in April, 1894. In that time the church work has been built up, new societies formed and the work has been carried on in a progressive manner.

Mr. Braker's work as a Sunday-school worker was also justly recognized in 1897, when he was honored with the presidency of the Union County Sunday-school Association, and at the last county convention was honored with a re election.

Soon after taking charge of the church he formed a Junior Christian Endeavor Society, which has been a success and is a thriving young branch of the church. A home department of the Sunday-school was formed and today numbers over 40 members.

By personal solicitation he has increased the contributions of the church nearly double what they were when he came.

Nearly a year ago he was instrumental in making it possible to have an Italian mission established and services are held every Sunday afternoon in the old school building, the services being in charge of an Italian missionary, who is making this part of the church work a success in every way.

For yearly three years Mr. Braker has been interested in trying to form a Y. M. C. A. for the young men of the village and he has had the pleasure of realizing his hopes before ending his pastorate of the church. Mr. Braker has many friends in the church and village, who regret his resignation.

REMEMBER THE POOR.

Relief Association's Annual Appeal for Thanksgiving Dinners.

The Relief Association makes its annual appeal to the people of Plainfield for Thanksgiving dinners to be given to its beneficiaries. Contributions of money, poultry, vegetables and groceries, will be most gratefully received. In the way of poultry, small turkeys and chickens are most acceptable.

To avoid duplication it is earnestly requested that the churches and King's Daughters circles send their lists of beneficiaries to Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, 544 West Front street. These names will be held in confidence. If the donations can be sent to the rooms, 544 West Front street, Tuesday, so far as possible, or early Wednesday morning, it will be greatly appreciated by the association.

Marion S. Dumont,
Secretary.

A Grand Sermon.

"Our Thanksgiving" was the subject of Rev. Dr. Schenck's Thanksgiving sermon yesterday morning in Trinity Reformed church, and he received the congratulations of many of his congregation for the exceedingly interesting discourse, which was packed full of useful data, touching the growth of our beloved country, and much interesting information regarding our army and navy in the late war with Spain. While the discourse bristled with patriotic eulogy at the success of our arms yet to God he gave the glory of it all, according to the text selected, "Now, Therefore, Our God, We Thank Thee, and Praise Thy Glorious Name."—1 Ch. 24, 13.

An Endeavor Service.

The Plainfield Local Union of the Christian Endeavor will hold a Thanksgiving service Thursday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the Trinity Reformed church which will be led by L. H. Biglow, Jr., president of the First Baptist Christian Endeavor Society. The service promises to be a helpful one, and a cordial invitation is extended to all, whether Endeavorers or not, to be present.

Thanksgiving Service.

The meeting of the Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church tonight promises to be very interesting. It will be a special Thanksgiving service, and a large attendance of members is expected, and the meeting will be spiritually helpful to all.

—Republican city primaries this evening.

RUNYON WILL NOT RUN FOR MAYORALTY.

Geo. W. Rockfellow Will Head Republican Ticket.

WM. N. RUNYON TALKS.

SAYS HE IS STILL IN RACE FOR CITY JUDGESHIP.

Declares That He Would Not Accept Mayoralty Nomination Under Any Circumstances—Needs a Man of More Mature Judgement—Race for City Judge Nomination Still Undecided.

Councilman William N. Runyon is not a candidate for the Mayoralty nomination on the Republican ticket this year under any circumstances. Such was the statement made by Mr. Runyon to a Press Reporter Saturday afternoon, and it is backed up with the assertions of his friends. Mr. Runyon is in the race for the nomination for City Judge and is going to stay there until he meets with victory or defeat at the city convention.

The story that appeared in Saturday's Daily Press telling of the possibility of Mr. Runyon as a candidate for Mayor, was rather startling. The rumor was beginning to have pretty wide circulation in political circles and caused an unbounded amount of talk. The friends of Mr. Runyon were firm in their declarations that its circulation was all a political trick to injure his chances for the City Judgeship. If such was the fact, it was certainly well handled for it came through reliable sources and bearing every pretence of truth. Mr. Runyon is firm in his statement, however, that he does not want the Mayorality nomination under any circumstances. He feels that he is too young a man to stand as executive head of the city. It needs, he says, a man of more nature judgment than himself who will be able to give much of his time to the responsible duties that accompany the position.

The people of Plainfield, he said, wanted a local business man for Mayor and he thought that George W. Rockfellow would be the man for the place. There seems little doubt now that he will head the Republican ticket for the municipal election. None of the other booms seem to bear the support of the men named and they are said to exist only in the minds of a few.

It is recognized by the Republican leaders that their candidate for Mayor must be a strong one if he expects to have any show of winning. The popular demand is for a local business man who will be always accessable to the citizens. Mr. Rockfellow cannot be considered a politician nor a "machine man." When elected before, he had the support of the independent Republican vote which will be absolutely necessary for the Republican candidate this year if he wins. Of the 1,800 votes cast in 1884, when Mr. Rockfellow was elected to the Mayoralty, he received 1,400.

The contest for the City Judge nomination on the Republican ticket still goes on without change. It seems likely that most of the ward delegations will split and that both Councilman W. N. Runyon and Judge William Newcorn will have strong followings. Just how the contest stands between them, it is impossible to say. Neither side is claiming an overwhelming victory but there is much activity on both sides. Judge Newcorn feels sure of the Fourth and First wards. In the latter, he is said to have the support of City Clerk J. T. McMurray. It is pretty generally conceded that the Third ward will favor Runyon. The Second, although the home of the Councilman, is now in the throes of a hot contest between the "machine" and the independent Republicans. As Mr. Runyon happens to be part of the "machine" there, it may somewhat injure his chances. He is, however, quite popular with the Republicans there and the independent ticket will take no sides in the contest for the City Judgeship.

New Philadelphia Train.

A new train for Philadelphia has been put on the road. The train leaves here mornings at 8:29 o'clock, and gets into Philadelphia about twenty minutes ahead of train leaving here at 8:14. The new train was put upon the road at the solicitation of several New York and Plainfield business men, who go back and forth between these cities, and who desire to get into Philadelphia earlier in the day.

ONE ASSAILANT LEFT HIS COAT BEHIND.

Isaac Shrager Attacked on the Street.

HE HAS BEEN PERSECUTED.

GUMBART DFFENDED SHOP ALONE WITH AN AXE.

Shrager Often Teased and His Sign Upset—Saturday it Was Thrown in Store—He Rushed Out and Was Assaulted—Sam Jackson to the Rescue—Photograph in Coat Gives a Clue.

"Help! Murder! Police!" rang out on the still evening air. It only lasted a few moments, but as a result one young man departed homeward in a hurry, minus his coat, vest and hat, late Saturday evening, and a roughly-handled little Hebrew tailor nursed sundry cuts and bruises.

Madison avenue, between Front and Second streets, has an exciting history. Part of that section, under the sobriquet of "Dusky Flats," once figured prominently in police court annals when Maggie Belle Jackson and her "pink teas" were in their glory. Saturday night it furnished more excitement and incidentally more work for the City Judge.

Isaac Shrager, more familiarly known as "Ikey," is the proprietor of a little tailor shop in the part of the city in question. With him works one Louis Gumbart, an elderly man with flowing white whiskers. For many moons there has been more or less attempt to worry the inoffensive tailor. His sign has been upset; the door to his shop has been opened at night and abusive epithets hurled at him. Of late, this persecution has grown more persistent, and the tailor vowed vengeance if he caught the miscreants.

It was after 11 o'clock Saturday night, and the two men were industriously working in the little shop, when the door was suddenly opened and Shrager's sign thrown in with a crash. Then the proprietor rose up and rushed out.

A few steps away were three young men. It was too dark to recognize them, but Shrager demanded, as well as his wrath would permit, to know why he was thus persecuted. A laugh, an oath, and the three set upon the little tailor and knocked him to the sidewalk. With tooth and nail, he resisted and fought gamely as they picked him up and started for the dark alleyway that leads to the back of the Jackson building opposite.

"Help! Murder! Police!" shouted Shrager and a crowd began to gather. Among the crowd were friends of the trio. They pressed about the entrance to the little tailorshop. Gumbart sent two of the intruders out of the door faster than they came. Then seizing an axe, he defied the crowd and promised to decapitate the first one that passed the door. The axe shone keen in the lamp light, and the crowd thought better of it.

Meanwhile, despite his struggles, Shrager was being dragged along. His screams for aid aroused Sam Jackson in his pool room and the stalwart negro came out to take a hand in the chase. His actions were prompt. Two of Shrager's assailants were upset. Shrager was left hugging the other. Then Jackson started after one of the trio who was fleeing down the street. He had posted a colored friend at the corner but when the desperado approached and promised to perforate the friend's person, the runner was allowed to pass unmolested and Jackson had to give up the chase.

Shrager's prisoner began to fight for freedom but the Hebrew tailor hung on despite the blows. The crowd grew threatening but still the tailor clung fast. By a quick turn, his prisoner slipped out of coat and vest, leaving them in the grasp of the astonished tailor and disappeared in the darkness.

A search of the coat revealed the photograph of a young woman. It was shown to the police who quickly recognized it and soon were on the track of the trio whose identity was ascertained.

Warrants for Dr. Bondy.

Justice Newcorn issued warrants this morning for the arrest of Dr. Bondy, the alleged swindler, who is charged with swindling Robert Guttridge of $50, and John Keeley, of LaGrande avenue, out of $24, a few weeks ago as told in Saturday's Press. Chief Grant took the warrants, and accompanied by the two victims, went to Jersey City this morning, and will return later in the day with Bondy in custody.

SECOND WARD MEN TO FIGHT ASSESSMENTS

They Claim Increase Is Unequally Distributed.

INVESTIGATION WAS MADE.

FACTS AND FIGURES THAT HAVE BEEN LEARNED.

Statement Made That Second Ward Bears Forty-five Per Cent. of the Increase of the Tax Valuation in the City—Figures to Back Statement—Lively Time Expected Before Commissioners.

The session of the Commissioners of Appeals which is to be held tomorrow afternoon, according to custom, to hear the grievances of the taxpayers of the city promises to be one of unusual interest. A powerful delegation of property-owners from the Second ward are coming to the meeting of the Commissioners prepared to make a vigorous kick over what they consider a manifest injustice in the increase in the assessments. The objection is not so much on any special properties as for the whole ward.

Ever since the tax bills have gone forth and the amount of the assessments made known, there have been many of the property-owners and taxpayers of the Second ward who have the large increase in the valuations. A few informal conferences resulted and an attorney, Charles J. McNabb, was retained to look into the matter and see positively just how the facts stand.

With the assistance of an expert accountant, the valuations of the different wards have been looked into and compared, and the results have decided the property-owners interested that the Second ward had been unjustly handled, and that it was their duty to protest to the Commissioners of Appeal.

The facts ascertained by Lawyer McNabb and the accountant show that the total increase in the tax valuation in the city amounts to $489,000. Of that, $220,958 is the valuation of the real estate in the Second ward alone. That would give the Second ward 45 per cent. of the increase. The investigators hunted to find if there had been any large increase in the value of new buildings in the Second, Third and Fourth wards in the past year had been equal.

The argument advanced is that why should the Second ward be compelled to bear nearly half of the increase in valuations throughout the city unless there was some reason for a remarkable increase of valuations there. There has been no such reason, these taxpayers said, that would not hold good throught the city. On such is their claim of unequal distribution of the increase in valuation.

PLEASURE FOR YOUNG WOMEN.

Monthly Entertainment Will be Given Tomorrow Evening.

The Young Women's Club monthly entertainment will be held at the club tomorrow evening, and members who have not received their tickets may get them at the rooms. A very fine programme has been arranged for the affair, after which refreshments will be served and a social time enjoyed.

Commencing with next Saturday evening, Miss Grace Cooley, of Washington Park, will start a series of practical talks on Bacteriology, hygene, etc., and kindred topics of interest to young women, being a resume of lectures delivered at Vasser College. After the short lecture, charades and games of all kinds will be entered into by the members. These are only open to club members, as no tickets are sold for any of the entertainments of the club, with the exception of the monthly entertainments, which is held the fourth Tuesday of each month. These lectures, it is believed, will be of great benefit for the girls, as many of them know so little about caring for their health.

Entertained at Euchre.

The Watchung Avenue Euchre Club were entertained Saturday evening at the home of Miss Force, of Duer street. The entire membership of sixteen was present, and ten games were played. A very enjoyable evening was spent by all, and favors were awarded to Miss Elizabeth DeCamp, a piece of Austrian glassware; Mrs. Dryden, a Persian letter receiver; Mr. Schultz, an oriental tobacco jar, and Mr. Beard an oriental match receiver. Mrs. Beard, of Hillside avenue, will entertain the club Saturday evening, December 3d.

TALKED TO THE JUNIORS

REV. W. C. SNODGRASS PREACHED TO THE JR. O. U. A. M.

Discussed the Great National Problems That Now Confront Us—He Is in Favor of National Expansion, He Said.

Last evening at the First M. E. church, the pastor, Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, delivered a strong and interesting sermon to the members of Somerset and Franklin Councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., of this city, who were present in a body. The attendance was very large. After the opening exercises, which included the reading of the Scriptures and prayer by the pastor, and special music by the regular choir, the pastor commenced his sermon based on the words found in the prophecy of Joel. During the talk Dr. Snodgrass rehearsed briefly the work of the past year as regards National interests. He stated that he thought it had been one of the most important in our recent history, that there was no reason why industries should remain idle, and that while it is a difficult task to look after seventy millions of people, it had been done in a marvelous manner.

He spoke of the prosperity of the manufacturers, farmers, miners, shippers, and with it all scarcely had one starved out of the bounty of the God Supreme, and for this reason all have great cause for thanksgiving. He spoke of the glorious war, which he hoped was at an end, and how marvelously it had been concluded, and he dwelt at length upon the promotion of a great National spirit and of a unified Government. He introduced the subject of the Nicaragua canal that will at no future day connect two great oceans, which he did not believe was a party measure. He spoke in favor of expansion and said that he welcomed the discussion, that the Government and people favored it and he had strong belief in the favorable outcome. He said that he is a devout hereditary American, but is of the opinion that there are things that other nations can teach us.

Dr. Snodgrass spoke about emigration and thought the time would soon arrive when America would receive but little of the bad element. He thought the issues through which we have just passed would tend to draw us closer to the mother country—Great Britain. In conclusion the pastor spoke strongly on the subject of an Anglo-Saxon alliance and said that there is not enough people in any other country to dispute the proposition. At the close the speaker presented many helpful lessons, and urged all to place their trust in God, and have implicit faith in Him.

PICKPOCKET GOT HIS WATCH.

Charles Smith, the Architect, Was the Victim. But He Got it Back.

Charles Smith, of Grove street, an architect doing business in New York, was relieved of a gold watch and chain by a clever pickpocket in New York Thursday. Mr. Smith was riding in an elevated train at the time and the light fingered gent, who occupied the seat beside him, proved to be the thief.

Mr. Smith was going up town, and sat looking out of the window. Soon after he had taken his seat a well-dressed, fine looking young man took the unoccupied place beside him. Mr. Smith continued to gaze out of the window, but suddenly feeling for his watch, to find out the time of day, he was dismayed to find it was gone.

The man who had been occupying the seat at his side was also gone, and Mr. Smith suspected him immediately. Fortunately Mr. Smith had taken a good look at the man next to him, so leaving the train he hurried to the nearest police station and reported his loss, together with a good description of the man.

With the description, the police were soon on the stranger's track and promptly cornered him. He admitted his guilt, and the watch was found upon his person. Mr. Smith identified the watch and will be able to regain it again as soon as certain formalities are gone through with.

The stranger confessed that although this was not his first crime of that kind, he was not a professional. But Mr. Smith says that the easy way in which his watch was taken stamps the man as an adept in his trade.

Released on Bail.

William G. DeMeza went to Newark Saturday and succeeded in getting Augustus Baldwin, a haycarter, living on West Fourth street, this city, out of jail there, on $500 bail. An Orange man signed the bond. Baldwin is awaiting trial on a charge of changing hay tickets.

HOW THE FIGHT WILL GO AT PRIMARIES.

Various Tickets in the Field Throughout City.

SEVERAL COTESTS IN VIEW.

SECOND WARD PRIMARY WILL BE LARGEST ONE.

Most of the Contests Will Be for the Delegates to the City Convention—First Ward Has Three Tickets—Third Ward Peaceful—Fight for Councilman in Second Ward—Nothing Definite.

There are groups of men standing at street corners. Others converse as they walk. Still others chat over the counter in a store. But the topic of all their conversation is the same. It's politics on every hand. Never before did Plainfield ever see a political campaign like this one. There are no mass meetings, no parades and fireworks. The work is all being done man to man and there is plenty of it. It is not exaggerating to say that the entire city is interested in the coming election.

Tonight the Republican primaries will be held in the different wards. Consequently the chief topic of interest is the probable results at the primaries. From present prospects, there will be a lively contest in every ward but the Third; there peace and quietude reigns, apparently at least.

In each primary a Councilman, Justice of the Peace, and a Constable will be nominated. Three members of the Republican city executive committee and the delegates to the city convention will be elected.

In the First ward there are three tickets, all headed by the name of Ralph I. Tolles as nominee for Councilman, H. C. Corsa for Justice, and John Gettleson for Constable are also unitedly supported. It is rather difficult to pick the "regular" ticket, but many of the ward workers are supporting the one bearing the names of I. L. McVoy, Thomas Hanna, Fred W. Viewig, Alexander D. Mallinson and Wm. J. Douglass for delegates to the convention, and J. B. Codington, and Harry B. MacDonald for the city executive committee.

One of the other tickets has John Anthony, D. F. Dunavan, W. W. Warnock, Amos Andrews and Willard Case slated for the delegates to the convention and J. B Coward, W. R. Codington and C. J. Neuman for the executive committee. The third ticket has the same candidates named for the executive committee and E. Apgar, H. H. Corey, D. F. Dunavan, I H. McVoy and George W. Moore for delegates. This ticket is said to favor Justice Newcorn for City Judge nomination.

The Second ward primary promises to be the largest ever held in the ward. Both the "machine" and the opposition are working hard for victory and will try to get all their friends out. George P. Mellick is slated for the councilmanic nomination on the "machine" ticket. J E. Mosher is down for Justice and John Sheehan for Constable. The "machine" delegates to the city convention are Stephen A. Ginna, Josiah Browne, C. S. Foote, Lewis L. Croom, John B. Dumont, B. Van D. Hedges. The "machine" is pushing John E. Keeley, John B. Dumont and Stephen A. Ginna for city executive committee. Mr. Foote was slated for the Councilmanic nomination until the last moment when Mr. Mellick was substituted as being a stronger man.

Thomas A. Cuming is at the head of the opposition tickect to the "machine." The members of the executive committee on the Cuming ticket are George D. Patten, Robert Guttridge, and Edward C. Petrie. The delegates to the city conventon are Stephen A. Ginna, L. B. Bromfield, Armstrong Mulford, Fernanda Brown, Charles C. Lister and Henry C. Squires.

B. Frank Coriell heads the only ticket on the field in the Third ward. ward. Seven delegates are to be chosen from the names of Alexander Gilbert, J. W. Murray, Jr., John Cose, J. Evarts Tracy, Frank E. Marsh, I. W. Bushmore, Nathan R. Titsworth and William Mayhew.

The candidate in the Third for Justice is John Neagle, for Constable, Amos Moffett; for the city committee, Alexander Gilbert, Ernest R. Ackerman and Elliot T. Barrows.

As yet, only one ticket has been placed in nomination in the Fourth ward, but there will be a fight after the delegates when another ticket will be put in the field to defeat the control of Andrew McCardle and Judge Newcorn in the ward. The regular ticket now in nomination there is as

WAR REVENUE TAXES

No Reduction or Modification During Next Session of Congress.

CHAIRMAN DINGLEY'S IDEA

He Says the Expenditures Growing Out of the War Will Continue for Some Time Yet. Revenue Producing Qualities of the Dingley Bill.

Washington, Nov. 21.—Chairman Dingley of the ways and means committee of the House, intimates that expenditures growing out of the war will continue for a long time yet, certainly for a year, and that for the next six or eight months the treasury will expend about $15,000,000 a month for war purposes.

"By the first of January," said Chairman Dingley, 'the war expenditures will have exceeded $200,000,000. Notwithstanding the fact that active hostilities have ceased, $25,000,000 were spent on account of the war during the month of October, and there will be fully $20,000,000 this month. These big expenditures will be only slightly increased during the balance of the present fiscal year. I believe that for the next six or seven months the disbursements on account of the war will not be less than $10,000,000 a month, and more likely $15,000,000 a month. The treasury statement will, for the next year, show that we are still making large payments growing out of the war.

"In view of the amount of revenue being derived from the war taxes, it is foolish to talk of repealing any of the revenue raising items, particularly so before a peace treaty is signed. The war revenues produce about $10,000,000 a month, and the monthly war expenses are considerably more than this.

"The deficit thus created is being made up by the proceeds of the $200,000,000 issue of bonds. The war expenses for October were $15,000,000 in excess of the revenues for the same month, and the excess of expenditures will be fully $10,000,000 for the month of November.

"My estimate of a monthly expenditure of between $10,000,000 and $15,000,000 during the next fiscal year, is, of course, based on the assumption that hostilities will not be resumed. We will be at considerable expense in adjusting the affairs of the new territory acquired by us. I believe that the war expenses will get down below the revenues some time during the next year. In the meantime, we have a surplus of about $130,000,000, and whatever deficit there may be will be paid out of this fund.

"In view of these facts the people of the country must realize that there is no prospect of cutting off existing taxes. The great bulk of the public knows this, for I receive very few petitions to lower the taxes. There will be no reduction or modification of the war taxes during the present season, and I do not agree with those who think it will be necessary to increase them. The law is meeting with our expectations and it is only a matter of time before the war expenses and war receopts will be equal."

In speaking of the revenue producing qualities of the tariff of 1897 Chairman Dingley said that the revenue produced by the new law for the past four months exceeded the amount derived from the Wilson law in the same months in the last year of its existence by nearly $25,000,000, which indicates that the Dingley law will produce from $60,000,000 to $75,000,000 per annum more than the Wilson tariff.

"The revenue now derived under the tariff for the month of October exclusive of war taxes," said Mr. Dingley, "was more than $15,000,000 in excess of the revenue yielded by the Wilson tariff law in the last October of its enforcement, and the revenue produced this month by the new law, exclusive of war revenues, will be more than $6,000,000 in excess of the revenue produced by the Wilson law in the last November of its existence. The revenues from February 1 have been more than the peace expenditures on the basis of the expenditures for the last five years. In other words, the new tariff is producing all the revenue that was expected from it and is ample to meet the expenses of the government if we had not been plunged into war."

Christmas Presents Off for Manila.

San Francisco, Nov. 21.—The transport St. Paul has sailed for Manila, carrying a cargo of Christmas presents for the soldiers and sailors in the Philippines.

Thousands of packages have reached the quartermaster's department in the last ten days from all parts of the country, since it became known that Uncle Sam would act as Santa Claus and convey Christmas gifts free of charge.

A number of soldiers drafted to recruit companies now at Manila and forty trained nurses sailed on the vessel.

Twenty of the nurses will remain at Honolulu.

Before the War Board.

New York, Nov. 21.—Five witnesses were examined by the war investigating commission Saturday in the Fifth Avenue Hotel. They were Mrs. Edwin G. Allis, a volunteer nurse of No. 29 East Twenty-first street; Captain Edwin H. Plummer of the Tenth cavalry, now on General Shafter's staff; Major Lorigan of the Ninth New York; Margaret H. Garrard, a volunteer nurse of Morristown, N. J., and Lieutenant Charles Edwards of the Seventy-first regiment.

The commission adjourned until today at 9.30 a. m. Tht commission hopes to call some of the high officials of the army this week.

Race Troubles at Anniston.

Anniston, Ala., Nov. 20.—A riot is imminent here. Negro soldiers interfered with the white provost guard as they were arresting a drunken negro soldier. The negro was finally landed in the jail, which is now surrounded by an angry mob of white soldiers clamoring for his blood. The feeling is intense and more trouble is feared.

ROOT FOR ST. JAMES.

State Republican Organization Said to Have Recommended Him.

New York, Nov. 21.—The Press has the following:

Elihu Root has been recommended through Senator Platt, representing the Republican organization of the state, for the position of ambassador to the court of St. James.

Whether Senator Platt personally was in favor of this action of the organization is not known, but it removes one aspirant from the ranks of the candidates for United States senator.

It was understood that Mr. Root was the choice of Governor-elect Roosevelt to succeed Senator Murphy.

The selection of Mr. Root is to fill the post left vacant by the calling of Colonel John Hay to a higher place. Mr. Root's work in the campaign has endeared him to the organization. He was not anxious to go to the senate, but his friends have been zealous in his behalf.

Mr. Root is a New Yorker. He was born in Oneida, February 15, 1845, in the town of Clinton. His father was Oren Root, professor of mathematics in Hamilton College from 1849 to 1885. The son was graduated there in 1864. He was admitted to the practice of law and settled in New York city.

From 1883 to 1885 he was United States district attorney for the southern district. In 1879 he was a candidate on the Republican ticket for a judgeship in the Court of Common Pleas. He was defeated. In 1886 he was chairman of the Republican county committee of New York.

He was counsel for Judge Hilton in the Stewart will case. He has been an active member and president of the Bar Association, and his fight for a clean judiciary in the last election will be remembered long.

His speech to the Republican state convention at Saratoga showing the eligibility of Colonel Roosevelt for the governorship was a masterpiece. He is one of the best known constitutional and international lawyers in the country.

Advance Sheets of Esterhazy's Book.

Paris, Nov. 21.—La Liberte published yesterday extracts from the advance sheets of the first part of Count Esterhazy's book entitled "L'Affaire Dreyfus," in which the writer declares himself the "victim of Cavaignac" (recently minister of war), whose enmity for him, he says, arises from the fact that their fathers were political enemies.

Esterhazy reasserts that he was the tool of the general staff, that it was the general staff who always dictated his conduct, that by their orders he struck Lieutenant Colonel Picquart, and that it was the general staff who selected his seconds when he challenged Picquart and furnished him with "exceptional and irregular means" of defending himself.

He left France, he asserts, to "escape being assassinated or being driven to suicide like Lieutenant Colonel Henry."

Another Abdication Story.

London, Nov. 21.—In regard to the future government of Spain it is again reported in diplomatic circles, and apparently with some weight, that there will be a change of dynasty, but a peaceful change.

The queen regent is said to be convinced of the hopelessness of her son ever reigning and upon the advice of the Emperor of Austria has decided, that soon after the peace treaty is signed at Paris (and everyone now regards this as only a question of days) to quit Spain with her family and Don Carlos will be proclaimed king.

Everything is reported to be already arranged and the army and clergy are alleged to be eager for the change. According to the programme, Don Carlos, as soon as things are running smoothly, will abdicate in favor of his son, Don Jaime.

Still Discussing Reciprocity.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—The Anglo-American commission held no session Saturday, but the two sides held separate conferences for the purpose of arranging their data for the next joint session on Tuesday.

Reciprocity continued to be the general subject of discussion, and it was understood that the lumber question was receiving considerable attention. It is probable that the free lists in the present tariff acts of Canada and the United States will be incorporated in any reciprocity agreement which may be made, and it is pointed out by members of the commission that this will be important in giving these free lists a permanent form as parts of a treaty rather than a changeable form, as parts of the general statutes.

Hairpin Diet Killed Her.

Toledo, O., Nov. 21.—Not long ago a woman named Wheelock died in the infirmary. No one claiming the body it was turned over to the Toledo Medical College and placed in the pickling vat. The woman had been slightly insane.

This week, when her body was cut open, the stomach had a big rent from inflammation, and in that organ were found about five hundred bent hairpins, several hundred brass pins, tacks and needles, pieces of glass, a set ring and other small articles of a similar character. The woman's remarkable mania had caused her death.

Fell from Brooklyn Bridge.

New York, Nov. 21.—Christopher Ryman, a rigger, employed on the Brooklyn bridge, living at No. 26 Rose street, fell from the bridge Saturday morning while repairing a strand in a cable, landing in the yard of the New York Telephone Company in Water street. Death was instantaneous. His body was found wedged in between two spools of wire and nearly every bone in it was broken.

Engineer Held for Manslaughter.

Stoughton, Mass., Nov. 21.—Daniel W. Getchell of Mansfield, the engineer who ran the rear section of the train which was in collision on the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at Sharon on August 21, has been arrested on the charge of manslaughter, and has given bonds for his appearance next Wednesday before the district court, at this place.

REBELS CAPTURE ILOILO

Manila Hears that the Capital of Panay Island Is Taken.

SUNKEN CRUISERS RAISED

Sergeant Price Stabbed to Death and Three Othrrs Wounded by Disorderly Natives. The Isla de Cuba and the Isla de Luzon, Sunk by Dewey, Docked at Cavite.

Manila, Nov. 20.—It is reported that Iloilo, capital of the island of Panay, is in the hands of the insurgents.

The United States cruiser Charleston and the gunboat Concord have gone there.

Three Filipino natives hired a carriage Friday night and afterward became engaged in a dispute with the driver regarding the fare.

Some members of the American military police tried to arrest the natives, but the latter resisted, and Sergeant Price of the Minnesota regiment was stabbed and killed, and three other American soldiers—Maher, Montgomery and Hoyt—were wounded.

Maher shot one native dead. The others were arrested.

The Spanish cruisers Isla de Cuba and Isla de Luzon, which were sunk during the battle of Manila, have been refloated and docked at Cavite.

The gunboat McCullough has left Manila on her way home.

The Philippine provinces have suffered from the severest typhoon in years. Malolos, headquarters of Aguinaldo, has been damaged and many villages have been destroyed.

Merchants of this city have decided to establish a chamber of commerce, which by Spanish law they were previously precluded from doing.

Spain's Claim Disputed.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—Through the state department Secretary Long has sent to the American peace commissioners two reports concerning the situation in the Philippines for use in controverting the Spanish claim that Spanish sovereignty in the islands has continued intact.

These reports were submitted to Rear Admiral Dewey by Captain J. B. Coghlan, commanding the cruiser Raleigh, and Captain G. F. Wilde, commanding the cruiser Boston, who were directed to sail among the islands to ascertain the exact situation and to impress the natives with the strength of the United States.

The Raleigh went to the northward of the island of Luzon. Captain Coghlan found the natives very suspicious, but at Corregidor island they cheerfully complied with the instructions transmitted through him by Rear Admiral Dewey to the insurgent chief there directing him not to fly the insurgent flag.

"At all places south of the Lingayen gulf," he observes, "we found the officers and natives most friendly—anxious, as they said, that the United States should maintain a protectorate over the island of Luzon and that trade relations should be established. There are no Spaniards from Cape Engano to Manila, except a few prisoners."

Captain Coghlan found that the friars, numbering about fifteen, of Sual, St. Isidro, and Dagupan, had been impressed into service by the insurgents, and were attending the horses of the insurgent officers.

So far as he could learn they were made to feel their degradation.

Captain Wilde's voyage was through the islands to the soutwahrd of Luzon. He found that Spanish troops had been withdrawn to the city of Cebu from all parts of the islands of the same name, and that the natives of Negros were in control of that island. At Palawan there were no insurgents, and there was a military force at Port Royalist of two hundred Indians, forty or fifty Spaniards and one piece of field artillery and one gunboat of two hundred and fifty tons.

Deadly Charges Removed.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—A difficult and dangerous operation was successfully accomplished at the navy yard Saturday by Ensign Sticht, inspector of ordnance there, in removing the charges from a half dozen of the captured Spanish rifled guns brought to the yard on the Leonidas, having been recovered from the Teresa, Viscaya and Oquendo.

The breech plugs of these guns were rusted and the workers who loaded them on the Leonidas were afraid to attempt the dangerous task of unloading the guns in their condition, the ammunition being inclosed in a brass cartridge case with a primer in the rear and a percussion fuse on the point of the shell.

It was found that in the case of three of the loaded guns the Spanish gunners in their haste had forgotten to remove the safety checks from the percussion fuses, so that even had the shells struck the mark they never would have exploded.

New General Master Workman.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—At the meeting of the Knights of Labor Saturday John W. Parsons of New York was elected general master workman by a close vote over the present general master workman, Henry H. Hicks, who is also a New Yorker.

J. D. Schonfaber of Baltimore was selected as a member of the general executive board in place of Henry Bostock of Muncie, Ind.

All the other general officers were reelected. Boston was chosen as the place of meeting for next year's convention.

Schley Welcomed Home.

Frederick, Md., Nov. 21.—Rear Admiral Schley was the center of a great public demonstration here Saturday. Wherever he appeared he was cheered and congratulated by the people and old friends and acquaintances.

At noon he took a trip to Middletown on the electric railway, which resembled a triumphal journey.

Several thousand persons attended the reception in his honor in the opera house, which was preceded by a parade.

NO WASTE OF WORDS.

Evidence Which is Right to the Point and Reliable.

Judge Frank Ives of District Court of Crookston, Minn., says: For some time I have used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with seeming great benefit with few exceptions, I have not been so free from indigestion in twenty-five years.

George W. Roosevelt, U. S. Consul to Brussels, Belgium: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, safe, pleasant to take, convenient to carry, give keen apptite, perfect digestion.

Mr. W. D. Tomlin, mechanical engineer, Duluth, Minn.: One box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets has done its work, and I am again gaining flesh and strength.

O. E. Ransom, Hustonville, Ky.: I was distressed and annoyed for two or three years with throwing up food, often two or three times a day; had no certainty of retaining a meal if I ate one. Four boxes of the tablets from my druggist have fully cured me. I find them pleasant to take, convenient to carry.

Rev. G. D. Brown, Mondovi, Wis.: The effects of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is simply marvelous; a quite hearty dinner of broiled beefsteak causes no distress since I begun their use.

Over six thousand people in the state of Michigan alone in 1896 were cured of stomach troubles by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Full sized packages may be found at all druggists at 50 cents, or sent by mail on receipt of price from F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

CERTAINLY!

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it is'nt always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

GREELY'S SHARP CRITICISM.

Chief Signal Officer Comments Severaly on Conduct of War.

San Francisco, Cal., Nov. 21.—General A. F. Greely, chief signal officer of the army, is reported to have made something of a stir by his response to a toast at the Chit Chat Club's banquet a few nights ago.

In effect he is said to have called the system of army organization "antiquated and inelastic," and told of the inefficiency of the new officers, scoring the methods of appointment through political influence.

He did not think much of volunteer soldiers.

The alleged incompetency in landing troops and supplies at Santiago came in for lively comments. General Greely said that at the time hostilities were first threatened there was not a gun south of Mason and Dixon's line that could be fired. He praised the president for delaying the final outbreak.

He was particularly severe in speaking of poor methods of handling supplies. He cited instances of gross blunders in forwarding supplies. At Tampa he was forced to break into nearly two hundred freight cars to secure provisions intended for his department.

The same incompetency characterized the loading of provision ships. In one case where men had been sent to a steamer to procure general rations for troops at Santiago, they found nothing in the vessel but canned tomatoes.

MRS. GUILFORD COMES BACK.

The Bridgeport Practitioner Arrested in London Reaches Here.

New York, Nov. 21.—On board the Cunard line steamer Lucania, which arrived here Saturday from Liverpool and Queenstown, was Dr. Nancy Guilford, the Connecticut practitioner, who is charged with the murder of Emma Gill.

She was in the custody of Detective Cronin of the Bridgeport police. Mrs. Guilford appears on the list as Mrs. N. Brown. She occupied saloon stateroom E on the forward saloon deck of the steamer.

Mrs. Guilford was on deck when the steamer reached quarantine. Detective Cronin said:

"Mrs. Guilford was seasick for more than half the voyage. She managed to get on deck during the past few days. But few of the passengers on board knew of her identity. She gave me not the slightest trouble during the voyage, neither has she made any statement or confession. She appeared anxious to reach home and see her family."

Bride Balks at the Altar.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 21.—In St. Catherine's church, at noon Saturday, a bride deserted her would be husband at the altar during the ceremony, blushingly walked down the aisle to the door and made a hasty exit.

Miss Margaret Moore was attired beautifully as she met Timothy Foley and the bridal party at the sanctuary rail in the church.

The Rev. R. H. Walsh was reading the marriage service and already the bridegroom had taken his solemn vow.

"Will you, Margaret Moore, take Timothy Foley to be your lawful husband?" asked the priest.

There was a hesitation. "Is it yet too late?" asked the bride-elect.

"Not yet," replied Father Walsh.

"No, I will not," said Miss Moore, as she turned from the altar, and, facing the astonished crowd of guests which filled the church, started for the door.

The motive which prompted the bride so summarily to end the ceremony has not yet been explained.

5th Cavalry in Porto Rico.

San Juan de Porto Rico, Nov. 21.—The United States transport Michigan has arrived with three troops of the Fifth United States cavalry. The rest of the regiment was landed at Ponce and Mayaguez.

The Michigan will take home Company F, Eighth infrantry, Troop H, Sixth cavalry, Troop B, Second cavalry and two batteries of the Seventh Light Artillery, a total of five hundred and forty men and five hundred and thirty-three horses.

Spanish steamers continue to bring large quantities of provisions from Spain, particularly rice, beans, oils and wines.

There is a good deal of complaint as to the irregularity of the transport mail service between Porto Rico and the United States.

General Buell Dead.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 21.—General Don Carlos Buell died at his home, four miles from Rockport, Ky., yesterday. The end had been expected, for the general had been very ill for several months.

General Buell was born at Marietta, Ohio, on March 23, 1818. He was graduated at West Point in 1841.

In the Mexican war he was promoted for gallantry to brevet major, and when the civil war began he was made a brigadier general.

At Shiloh he came to the relief of Grant. He resigned his commission in the army in June, 1864, and had lived in retirement ever since.

Yellow Fever in Washington.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—Archie S. Miller, a civil engineer, aged 33 years, unmarried, died in a hotel in this city from what the physicians have pronounced to be yellow fever. He had been in Washington two days, having come from New York city, where he arrived on Monday from Nicaragua, where he had been since last April.

He left there about two weeks ago on a steamer bound for New York, but was stopped at Port Limon, Costa Rica, an infected port.

Rush Orders on Warships.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 21.—Rush orders for the war vessels now being repaired at the Charlestown navy yard have been received at that place.

Three vessels, the double turreted monitor Amphitrite, the cruiser Detroit and the gunboat Castine were specially mentioned in the order.

THINKS SHE DID IT ALL

Miss Jessie Schley Says She Induced Spain to Sue for Peace.

INTERESTING CLAIM MADE

Miss Schley Went to Madrid as a Delegate of the Woman's International League for Peace. Advised Government to Give Up a Coaling Station or Two, but Deprecates Our Demands.

Milwaukee, Nov. 21.—Miss Jessie Schley, a relation of the admiral, who went to Spain as a delegate of the Women's International League for Peace, in an effort to bring the war to a close, has issued a statement to the American press in which she takes the credit of influencing Spain to sue for peace. In the course of her statement she says:

"I reached Madrid as delegate of the Women's International League for Peace, and bearing the list of names and resolutions for her majesty, the Queen of Spain, on July 22.

"I at once began visiting and conferring with prominent officials. On the 23d his excellency, the minister of state, Duc de Almodovar del Rio, requested me to put in writing the matter I desired to convey to him. I did so and sent it to him on the 25th. On that day or the following, I judged from the newspaper report, the queen's cabinet discussed this communication at their meeting, and that day (the 26th) Spain sued for peace.

"The next day, the 27th, I was hurried out of Madrid, fearing a riot against me, when it should become known that Spain had made overtures of peace. It was feared the Carlists and Spanish jingoes might make trouble then, and they had already begun to look for me.

"Of course peace would have come, Spain was beaten, but she was not ready to surrender then. She still wanted to fight for Havana and the Philippines, but I maintain the documents I submitted to the minister of state decided her to sue for peace just then, and I believe you will find that the Spanish authorities bear me out in this.

"Spain trusted me. She knew I liked her noble and defenceless country; was of her religion and detested the war, considering it a disgrace to our country.

"I advised her to give us a coaling station or two, though strictly speaking we should not take even that, as we had begun the war 'in the name of humanity,' but our government might need them, and we had been put to much expense. In short, I wrote such a strong appeal for peace I feared I might overdo it by my blunt statements, using the word "foolhardy," etc.

"I was certain my country would act honorably, so you can imagine my mortification and chagrin to find we are trying to grab all that we can.

"Following this letter I shall have a storm of abuse, I know, from the jingoes and the A. P. A.'s, who have already written me so many insulting letters, but I defy one of them to show anyone who has made greater sacrifices to maintain the honor of our grand country.

"This is no time for party strife or bitter religious feeling if we would save our country.

"Democrats and Republicans must act together. Possibly it was fortunate the Republicans won in the last elections, for among them are many honorable men who will maintain our national honor, and the party that began the war 'in the name of humanity' will be able to finish it in the name of humanity and not disgrace us by making terms too difficult for our conquered foe."

Anti-Expansionists Organize.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 21.—The organizers of a movement against the annexation of the Philippines met in this city Saturday.

A constitution was adopted, officers were elected and an address was issued to the people of the United States urging prompt co-operation in getting signatures to a protest against the annexation of the Philippines. Edward Atkinson presided.

Before the meeting opened he received a telegram from Andrew Carnegie saying that Mr. Carnegie had sent a check for $1,000 for the use of the movement.

Funds have already been subscribed liberally.

Paris Paper Prophesies.

Paris, Nov. 21.—The Rappel, in threatening Great Britain with French hostility in the future, says:

"The blunders of Great Britain in the Fashoda question have irritated Europe and have excited the appetite of the United States. England and America can scarcely continue to agree. Canada is very tempting after Cuba, and then Jamaica, British Guiana and the Cape. A decade hence England will be caught between Europe and the United States, and that day will be Great Britain's death.

Cuban Commission Coming.

New York, Nov. 21.—General Calixto Garcia, General Miguel Gomez, Gonzales Lanuza and Jose Ramon Villaion, members of the commission appointed by the Cuban assembly to visit Washington and confer with President McKinley as to the future of the island, will arrive here to-day on the steamer Seguranca.

Missionary Murdered in China.

London, Nov. 21.—A dispatch to the Daily Telegraph from Shanghai says that the Rev. Mr. Fleming, a missionary, and a native evangelist were murdered in the recent attack by the rebels on the town of Kwei-Fu, in the upper Yang-tse-Kiang valley, when the Catholic mission at that place was burned.

Baron Fava a Senator.

Rome, Nov. 21.—The Official Gazette announces the appointment of thirty new senators, including Baron Fava, Italian ambassador to the United States, who, however, will retain the embassy at Washington.

HARVARD BEATS YALE.

Crimson Won for the First Time in Eight Years. Score 17—0.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 21.—Harvard defeated Yale Saturday afternoon, 17 to 0, winning a glorious football victory in a clean, fast game, abounding in brilliant plays, dramatic moments and unsullied by the slightest vestige of unfair tactics.

Success perched on the Crimson banner through no lucky turn of fortune. The Harvard players proved themselves to be masters of the game, excelling in every department, and playing such football as was never before seen, and was well nigh marvelous, considering the miserable weather conditions.

Every point was made by straightforward, open tactics, and no fluke or luck contributed in any way to the result.

Harvard's great speed of play, power and concentration of attack, superior kicking and splendid physical condition won the game for her easily. The Yale players fought with stolid pluck and at the end they rallied grandly out of sheer desperation, and finished strong.

For the first time in eight long years a Harvard team not only succeeded in defeating a Yale football eleven, but rolled up the largest score made in a game between the two colleges since 1886.

The Crimson crossed Yale's goal line three times, kicking two goals and ending the game with seventeen points to their credit, while Yale's score was as blank as their faces.

There was considerable of the traditional Yale grit shown throughout, but Harvard's confidence increased as the game progressed, until the frequent scoring intoxicated her followers and the demonstration at the end broke all bounds.

That the game could have been played under such fearful weather conditions and yet be marked by less than the average amount of fumbling, was indeed remarkable, and it was still more enjoyable, despite the same conditions, in that there were but few delays, no quarrels and the absence of questionable decisions and a clean, wholesome football game throughout.

The rain, which had been pouring down for two days, continued throughout the entire game, but in spite of the weather fully sixteen thousand people witnessed the game.

FILIPINOS IN EUROPE AGITATED.

Aguinaldo Sends Word to Insist on Independence or Death.

London, Nov. 21.—There is much agitation among the Filipino representatives in Europe over the Philippine situation.

Agoncillo, the representative of Aguinaldo, who has been in Paris watching the proceedings of the peace commissions, has started for Washington, D. C.

It is learned that on Wednesday last he called a meeting of all the Filipinos in Paris and London to meet him in Paris, when a committee was formed with the object of doing everything possible to induce France to recognize the so-called Filipino republic.

A telegram was sent to Aguinaldo asking for instructions, and the following reply is said to have been received:

"Insist upon absolute independence. Otherwise fight to the death. We are all united and the government is progressing smoothly. All the independent tribes of the mountains are submitting to Aguinaldo, and the chiefs are bringing in presents of gold."

The statements made by General Wesley Merritt in reply to the appeal of the Filipino junta of Hong Kong to the American people have caused indignation among the Filipinos.

They are specially incensed at the suggestion that they would loot and at the idea of being governed as a colony.

The Filipinos of Paris are sending a dispatch to President McKinley protesting against the assertions that have been made.

Fenced Himself In.

Lakewood, N. J., Nov. 21.—George Gould's magnificent place here has become so much of an attraction that the public has taken an interest almost proprietary in it.

In fact the estate has been so overrun with visitors that in self protection Mr. Gould has been compelled to interpose a barrier.

He has built a wall, surmounted by an iron paling, twelve feet high altogether, and his lawns and flowers and trees and shrubbery are no longer at the mercy of careless persons, who have been tramping over everything green in sight.

The new clock which the millionaire has placed over the front of his stables strikes the hours, half hours and quarters, and the clear, silvery tones can be heard a long distance away.

Recently Mr. Gould bought five hundred acres of ground adjoining his place, and this is to be turned into a game preserve. It will be stocked with quail and pheasant at first. Larger game will be added next season.

Postal Commission to Meet in Chicago

Washington, D. C., Nov. 21.—The joint commission of the Senate and House which is looking into postal affairs will meet in Chicago to-day to take up that branch of the inquiry relating to the cost of transporting mail over the railways, rental of postal cars, etc.

The commission consists of Senators Chandler, Wolcott, Allison and Faulkner, and Representatives Loud, Moody, Fleming and Catching.

Bits of News.

Bucharest dispatches say that two attempts have been made recently upon the life of ex-King Milan.

A three hundred thousand dollar fire visited Staten Island Saturday. Warehouses and newspaper offices were destroyed.

Governor-elect Roosevelt lectured at Lowell Institute, Boston, Saturday evening, to a large audience on the Indian question.

Robert Fullerton, the Silver Democratic candidate for assembly in the Eighteenth district, New York, filed an account of his campaign expenses in the office of the county clerk on Saturday. He stated that he had expended fifteen cents in silver, of which ten cents went for a pint of beer and five cents for stogies."

Trolley and Election.

Though little has been said about the influence of the trolley in the municipal campaign it is a fact that street railway matters may constitute a lively issue.

It appears that a private conference of a number of wealthy gentlemen was held a few evenings ago, and at that time the probable attitude of the next city administration in reference to street railway affairs was discussed. In the minds of a number of those who are identified with financial institution, which hold pleasant relationships with trolley promoters, the fact that the next Common Council and Mayor may have something to say about the Bergen county trolley scheme has not been lost sight of.

It is said that at this meeting it was decided to have a certain committee of gentleman call upon DeWitt C. Ivins for the purpose of inviting him to become a candidate for Mayor on an anti-county trolley platform. They want to see the Republicans nominate him for Mayor and then they will endeavor to have his candidacy endorsed by the Citizens.

Mr. Ivins is openly and above board against the Bergen county trolley scheme, and in the event of his election as Mayor it would be expected that he would oppose the Bergen scheme on every hand. Mr. Ivins is also in favor of the Plainfield Street Railway Company being granted a franchise in perpetuity for its eastern extensions in this city, and if elected he would no doubt do his best to secure for them the concessions that they asked for in the franchise under consideration recently by the Common Council, and to which The Daily Press, The News and a majority of the people in Plainfield were opposed.

Mr. Voorhees' Good Sense.

Governor-elect Voorhees displays good sense when he urges that his inauguration as the chief officer of the State be accompanied by simple and unostentatious ceremonies. Enthusiastic Republicans and personal friends had been arranging to give the Governor a great send-off on his induction into office, but Mr. Voorhees has put a quietus on such plans by announcing that he does not want any military or spectacular display when he takes his oath of office.

Too often a select coterie of friends, well-meaning enough in their own way, make heroes of men when there is no reason for it. In his everyday life Mr. Voorhees is distinguished by his democratic manners and it would be a slight indication of an enlarged cranium should he countenance the attempt to make his inauguration a grand affair.

Mr. Martine Not a Citizens' Man.

James E. Martine has been called upon and urged by the leaders of the Citizens' party to accept the Mayoralty nomination on their ticket. Mr. Martine positively declined to consider such a matter, however, and told the Citizens' leaders that he would not, under any circumstances, consent to become a candidate of the Citizens'.

After urging a straight Democratic ticket, Mr. Martine realizes full well the inconsistency he would exhibit in associating himself in any way with the Citizens'.

A certain alleged Democrat in Plainfield, who has made great professions of loyalty to his party, but who at this time believes in subserving the party to a Citizens' movement on the plea that his devotion to the success of the people in the approaching city election is so great that he fears to take a risk on a straight party ticket, has had a quiet sort of a talk with a Republican leader, of whom he is a relative, urging that a certain Republican be nominated for an office that he (the alleged Democrat) secretly aspires to. The alleged Democrat wants this to be so because he thinks that the Republican in question is a weak man and that he (the alleged Democrat) will win if the Republican is nominated. It takes a pretty smart man to work three sides of a political game, but this alleged Democrat seems to be doing it fairly well.

An opinion just given by the New Jersey Court of Appeals holds that the law giving to trades unions the right to adopt and use a distinctive label for their protection is constitutional. This reverses a Chancery Court decision and is important. The Newark Hatmakers' Association adopted a label and a firm of hatmakers adopted a similar one. The Newark Association sought an injunction and have secured it. The labels of trades unions will now be respected in New Jersey.

Harry C. Runyon, secretary of the Board of Trade, assures that in all probability an application for the franchise to the eastern limits of the city will be made at the next meeting of the Common Council by the Plainfield Street Railway Company, notwithstanding the statement made by L. W. Serrell, Jr., to the contrary. Mr. Runyon, however, states that it was not L. W. Serrell, Jr., that brought the message of Chandler Riker to him, but another young man by the name of Serrell.

It is an unkind political fate that left Fred Bird off the Citizens' committee in the First ward. After having carried the Citizens' movement uphill for five months, as Mr. Bird says that he has, he is to be left at the top and not allowed the pleasure of riding down on what he anticipates is going to be a landslide.

In order to secure the nomination of their candidates the Citizens' will have to secure signatures on petitions representing one per cent of the vote cast at the last municipal election, which will be between 250 and 300.

Harmony will not commence with a big H in the Republican primaries tonight if indications count for anything. Extraordinary changes are likely to be made in the working machinery of the party.

Even if all do not agree with Councilman Barrows in his view of the local government, it will be interesting to read his communication in another column.

Election is two weeks from tomorrow.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

The Shrewsbury and Plainfield Society of Friends want the Legislature of New Jersey to abolish the death penalty. That has been practically done ahead by the juries in the various counties. So sympathetic is the average jury in this respect that it is a pretty hard task nowadays to convict anybody of murder in this State, and even in the worst cases the law permits all kinds of devices and tricks to delay the execution of sentence.—Tribune.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The Burrill Comedy Company opens a week's engagement tonight at Music Hall in the powerful play, "Infatuation." This company, composed of sixteen clever artists, supports Miss Laura Hulbert, the well-known emotional actress. Specialties will be introduced between the acts by refined vaudeville artists. Among them is Nellie DeVeau, the champion buck and wing dancer of America, the winner of the Richard K. Fox diamond medal, and other well-known performers. A special ladies' ticket has been issued for this evening's performance which must be presented for exchange at half price at box office before 7 p. m. The regular evening prices are 10, 20 and 30 cents, and matinee prices will be 10 cents for children and 20 cents for adults. The first matinee will be given tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 o'clock.

* * * * *

"The Nancy Hanks," a musical farce comedy by Frank Tunnehill, Jr., will soon be seen at Music Hall. Manager Maze Edwards has lately perfected a number of first class attractions.

* * * * *

A majestic revival of D'ennery great melo-drama, "The Two Orphans," will be the excellent attraction Thanksgiving week at the Star Theater, 14th street and Broadway, New York, commencing tonight. The favorite American actress Kate Claxton will be seen in her version of Louise, the blind girl, a role that has made her famous throughout the length and breath of the civilized world. This romantic drama has lived and will continue to live without the aid of disrobing scenes, explosions, burglars, and other accessories necessary for modern plays to attract attention. The story of the "Two Orphans" is too well known to require reciting. Suffice to say it is one of absorbing interest. Miss Claxton will have the support of a specially picked company, the leading heavy role being in the hands of that finished and clever actor, Charles A. Stevenson.

Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre, the delight of the tired shopper, and home of continuous vaudeville and dramatic debuts, keeps up its high reputation with an exceedingly strong bill for the week of November 21st. At great expense Mr. Proctor has arranged for a special holiday production of Charles Dickens' beautiful story, "The Holly Tree Inn," the stage adaptation being by Augustus Thomas, and the principal characters being taken by the clever child actors, Mabel Taliaferra and Master Harold Walsh, supported by a competent company. Special scenery and costumes have been provided, and the little play bids fair to score a big success. Such a thing as a weak or unentertaining show is unknown at Proctor's, and this fact, combined with the popular prices, which never change, the courteous treatment which Mr. Proctor insists shall be extended to all his patrons by every attachee of the house, and the cozy surroundings, have all tended to make the Twenty-third Street Theatre the most popular continuous performance house in town.

Has Reported to the President.

Dr. H. K. Carroll, Commissioner to Puerto Rico, has returned from Washington, accompanied by his stenographer, Mr. Williams. The doctor had delightful conferences with President McKinley, the Secretary of State and Secretary of the Treasury. He will remain here about three weeks, when he and Mr. Williams will return to Puerto Rico to resume their labors.

—Trinity Commandery, Knights Templar, will hold a regular meeting this evening.

—If you are in a dilemma about the setting of your table for Thanksgiving, Woodhull & Martin will help you out with the "specials" they have advertized in this issue of the Press.

—A horse owned by Marsh, Ayres & Co. started to run away this morning on Plainfield avenue. A boy in the employ of the firm was in charge, and he quickly caught the animal before it had gone very far.

—The Grand Union Tea Company, 138 West Front street, owing to the demand, will continue all this week to give free with one pound of baking powder the greatest roasting pan out. Just the thing for roasting poultry.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, Nov. 21—In accordance with a suggestion made by The Press a short time ago, a card club has been formed, composed of residents of the borough, and called the Washington Avenue Card Club. The club has been organized and the officers elected are as follows: President, Miss S. D. Barrett; vice president, R. B. Carpenter, secretary and treasurer, F. R. Haynes. The club will meet for the first time tonight.

The Thanksgiving service this year will be held in the Methodist church Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. All the churches in the borough as well as those in New Market will join in the services. Rev. F. E. Peterson, of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, New Market, will preach the sermon, and Revs. Martine, Jamison and Todd will take some part in the services.

A new local train for New York was put on the timetable yesterday. The train leaves the station here at 9:08 o'clock, and makes almost all the stops from here to Elizabeth.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles McNabb, of Plainfield, have taken up their residence in the Staple house on Washington avenue which Mr. McNabb has recently purchased.

Isaac J. Stites, the blacksmith, has sold his house to his brother. A new sidewalk is being laid around it, and the property is being otherwise improved.

The football game Thanksgiving Day will be quite an attraction, and no doubt there will be a large crowd on hand to witness it.

A. F. Warden is a confirmed nimrod, and every fine day he is apt to be gunning for rabbits. He meets with good success, too.

T. W. Denlinger, of Mauch Chunk, has rented the Henry Ludivici house on Jackson avenue, and moved in there last week.

Miss Jennie Williams, of Westfield, who has been visiting Miss Janie Churchill for several weeks, has returned home.

John Beekman and James Martin have returned from a visit with friends and relatives in Centreville.

F. W. Burger has sold his Washington avenue property to a New York lawyer who will soon move here.

Miss Nan White, of Somerville, spent Sunday with friends in the borough.

Miss Alma Enander has entered the Plainfield Business College.

E. Brown will soon move to Connecticut.

Miss Kate Bryan spent yesterday in Roselle.

Miss May Waring is ill at her home.

'PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 21.—Mr. and Mrs. John R. Morey are rejoicing over the arrival of a young son Thursday.

An interesting Sunday-school rally was held in the Baptist church last evening. Addresses were made by Mr. Teller, Mr. Crausse and Mr. Irving, all of Cranford. Mr. Baylis had charge of the vocal part of the programme, and Prof. Allen's orchestra, of Cranford, furnished the instrumental music. Mrs. Maguire and Mrs. Braker sang a beautiful duet, "Light After Darkness," and altogether a very pleasant evening was spent by those attending. Mr. Braker during his short stay with the church intends to have popular Sunday evening services, and Sunday evening next the service will be in charge of a noted New York slum worker.

Mr. and Mrs. John Marsh and family are preparing to move from their home at the foot of the mountains to their house on Park avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanton W. Pentz, of Bayonne, were the guests Saturday and Sunday of Mrs. Pentz's grandfather, Charles Kyte.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Jimerson, of Westfield, were the guests Sunday of their daughter, Mrs. Geo. W. Marsh.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Morey are entertaining Mrs. Morey's mother, Mrs. Stearns, of Brooklyn.

Fanwood Council, 744, R. A., entertain the grand officers at their meeting Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Stillger, of Linden, spent Sunday with Mr. Stillger's parents.

George Adair, of Metuchen, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Joseph Clark.

The commissioners of appeal meet in the town rooms tomorrow.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 21.—The members of Central Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., and a large number of their friends went to the Methodist church last evening where they listened to an excellent sermon, delivered by Rev. Dr. Charles M. Anderson, the pastor of the church.

There will be a union Thanksgiving service held in the Presbyterian church at 10 o'clock Thursday morning. In the afternoon there will be a football game between the Westfield team and the Dunellen team on the Broad street gridiron. These teams have played two tie games this season and the members are out for blood this time and a close and exciting game can be looked for.

Director of Weddings.

An ingenious woman has opened a new field of occupation for her sisters. It is that of "director of weddings." This woman, realizing how much of an undertaking a wedding is, and how much care and trouble it is for the bride-elect, also into what sort of demoralized state it throws the whole household has taken upon herself the burden of the responsibility of it all.

She helps in the selection of the trousseau, after buying the material for the gowns, and superintending the making. She advises as to the gowns of the mother and sisters, and dictates as to how the bridesmaids shall dress. She installs herself in the home of the bride, sometimes before the wedding, and makes all arrangements for the decorations, and even arranges with the caterer.

Of course she has many original ideas, and is constantly in search of new ones, so that there may be, perhaps, some special novel feature to each wedding. She also is exceedingly clever in carrying out ideas suggested by the givers of the wedding, and tries in all ways to make herself popular.—New York Tribune.

Ready to Be Thrilled, and She Was.

An Ohio lady visiting Boston for the first time has been doing the sights. "I had my greatest thrill down at Copp's Hill burying ground," she said. "Yes, that's just the place for historic emotions," commented her interlocutor. She smiled. "As soon as my sister-in-law and I got into the place," she said, "I found myself almost stepping upon a grave with an inscription on a queer little iron cover sort of tomb. I jumped back, feeling the way you do when you step on a grave, and read the inscription, just three initials, no name or date. 'Isn't it pathetic?' I said to my sister-in-law. 'Oh, I don't know,' she answered, 'B. W. W. means Boston Water Works.'"—Boston Evening Transcript

GOOD JOB WORK.

THE DAILY PRESS office can do it—anything from a milk ticket to an auction bill; even larger, too.

The job department of THE DAILY PRESS office is the largest and best equipped in Plainfield or vicinity. The workmen employed are experienced and capable and possess the knack of producing neat products. The prices are reasonable. When work is promised for a certain time the customer gets it without the aggravating delay common to many printeries.

If you need job printing at all you need the kind that reflects credit for neatness and style on you. You can get that kind

AT THE DAILY PRESS.

TOLD BY A DAIRY.

Saturday.—Off for Germany at last! We have only been out five hours, though it seems more. I suppose I am to be envied. I am young—just twenty-five—never had a sick day in my life, have plenty of money, affections at present unoccupied. I am (bless the fates!) a bachelor, and am just starting on a sketching tour through Europe. I am told that I have been a very bad boy, but let me hasten to say that my present exemplary character renders all past misdemeanors insignificant. My conscience did so much active duty in the way of pricking during my youthful days that it has long since pricked itself an exit and fled away. My heart has been broken so often that, were it not for my excellent circulation, I should entertain the belief that that organ had been damaged beyond repair.

So now that I have introduced myself (by the way, I am usually considered quite a handsome fellow), let me look about the room, for I am writing in the public salon of the steamer and implore the muse for an inspiration. Ah! considerate muse, thou art indeed, wondrous kind! All I can see is a mass of curly golden hair Promising, so far. She is writing so busily that I can't see her face. There she has finished; she is going to look up. Ye gods and little fishes, what a face! I must sketch that girl. But she's gone. Well, we shall be six days on board the same vessel; I shall find another opportunity. Heigho! guess I'll go and have a smoke.

Sunday.—Prayer meeting in the salon this morning, which I did not attend. I pined to do so, but I am a great believer in the benefit which one derives from self-denial. Have not even caught a glimpse of my golden-haired divinity of yesterday; perhaps—oh, romantic suggestion!—perhaps she's seasick. There was a pretty brunette opposite me at breakfast; I caught her eye and smiled. She looked well when she blushed—most brunettes do. Sunday on board ship is deadly dull. Asked a fellow to play a game of poker this afternoon. He was evidently horrified; his expression was rich. I whipped out my sketchbook and caught it—see page fourteen.

Monday.—There's been a stiff breeze all day; many of the passengers have succumbed. My charming blonde (that pronoun sounds well) wasn't seasick; but the dragon, I mean her mother, was. She is traveling with her mother and brother. I have scraped up an acquaintance with the boy—milk-and-water sort of fellow; secretied to his mother's apron strings Worships his sister, too. He promised to introduce me to her. I shall get that sketch now.

Tuesday.—I came, I saw, she conquered. Dorothy Wayne—charming name, charming girl. Took her for a stroll on deck. She's bright, too. Of course I'm in love; when I'm not I feel like a fish out of water. I've always been thankful that the tender passion doesn't interfere with my appetite. The table is not very good, but I'm usually too hungry to be particular.

Wednesday.—It has just struck midnight. There has been a dance this evening. A dance over at midnight They keep abominably early hours on shipboard. I danced seven times with Miss Wayne; she waltzes like an angel. She wore a white gown cut low, with what-you-call-'ems down the front. Fine neck and shoulders that girl has. She was pleased to compliment me upon my mastery of the terpsichorean art; well, I have always been fond of dancing. There, I hear footsteps; some of the fellows. I asked them in for a game of cards.

Thursday.—Beastly day; cold rain and a heavy sea. I woke up with a bad headache this morning; lost at cards last night. Strolled into the dining room too late for breakfast waiter inattentive and everything lukewarm. Afterwards I went into the salon; Miss Wayne was there, writing She looked up as I entered and said that she had just finished. That was clearly an invitation and not to be resisted. I sat down beside her. She granted me the pleasure of her society until lunch time. The dragon (what a mother-in-law that woman would make!) seemed nervous all the morning; gave me black glances and tried all sorts of stratagems to get me away. I saw her little game and stuck to Dorothy closer than a brother. Young Wayne tried to hang on too, but I gave him a glance that sent him off.

After lunch he came up again and asked if I could spare him a few minutes. The poor little chap was awfully rattled. Well, then it all came out. Miss Dorothy was to be Lady Le Marchant in less than a week What deceivers women are! The dragon was escorting her over to meet Sir Peter Le Marchant, her affianced The old man had better keep his eyes open; I'm afraid my lady will prove one too many for him. She did not appear again till evening. I thought she looked rather subdued. Suppose her fond mamma had been pitching into her. Captain expects to get in to-morrow night. I'm rather glad; a sea voyage gets tedious.

Friday.—Landed in Hamburg a few hours ago. Met an artist friend of mine who is staying here with his people. He took me right up to his hotel and I dined with his family. Awfully jolly people. He has two pretty sisters; I am going to paint the elder I've just been looking over my portfolio; I found a lot of sketches of that steamer girl. I tore them up. They really weren't worth keeping. A fellow does collect such a lot of rubbish when he is travelling.

WITHOUT HARNESS OR DRIVER.

Horses That Make Records All By Themselves.

Last year the Washington Park Club of Chicago secured the four pacing kings, Star Pointer, John R. Gentry, Joe Patchen and Robert J., and gave a one day's meeting at Washington Park. Star Pointer and Joe Patchen paced a great race, while Gentry went to beat the high wheel sulky record, and Robert J. tried to lower his mark of 2.01 1-2. Nearly twenty thousand persons paid admission to the track, and they gave the pacing kings a royal welcome. But when Marion Mills, a beautiful bay mare, came on the track without harness or driver and paced a mile alone in about 2.10, she fairly set the big crowd wild. Men shouted themselves hoarse and women stood on chairs in the excitement of the moment to wave their handkerchiefs as the knowing animal, after passing the wire, stopped, turned and jogged back to where her trainer stood. She was clearly the popular favorite that day, although the fastest four pacers in the world were her rivals. A few days before her appearance at Washington Park Marion Mills had paced a mile at Decatur in 2.04¾, which is the best time on record for "guideless wonders."

"Do you know how the 'guideless wonders' originated?" said a western horseman to a reporter. "Well, I can tell you. There was a man in a little country town out in Iowa who owned a rattle-headed pacer a few years ago. This pacer was fast, but he could never win a race on account of his acting, so the owner gave it up and turned him out on the infield of his half mile track. When the other horses were being trained and driven on the track the pacer on the infield would sometimes square away on the path he had worn next the rail, and would try to beat the horses in harness down the straight side of the course. One day it occurred to the owner to take him out on the track and see if he could do the trick there. So they rigged him out in hopples and put an overdraw check on him and tried the experiment. It succeeded beyond their expectations, for the pacer got excited and went two miles as hard as he could before they stopped him. A few days afterward they tried it again. By this time everybody in the village had heard about the horse that would race without a driver, and half the population turned out to see the second trial. Of course they were scattered out around the track more or less, and they helped to make him go by shouting as he passed them. Within a week that pacer was the talk of the town and the country for miles around. The secretary of the county fair heard about him and paid the owner $20 to take his horse to the show and exhibit him in the fall of that year. It got into the papers and the man who owned the horse got several thousand dollars by exhibiting him the next year."

Sheep without Wool.

The principal kind of meat consumed by the people of Arabia, both native and foreign, is the mutton of the somali, or black-head sheep, and, no matter by whom eaten, all pronounce it the best mutton ever tasted. This sheep, as its name indicates, is from the Somali country, on the African coast. These sheep have no wool, but short, fine hair, similar to that of a dog. The most peculiar thing about them is that they have a large lump of pure fat growing right at the root of the tail, and this fat varies in size and weight according to the condition of the sheep. A medium sized lump of this fat weighs about four pounds. Such a sheep, which weighs from thirty-five to forty pounds, is sold at from four to five rupees (85 cents to $1.05). The skins, when sun dried, are exported, and large quantities of them go every year to the New York market, where they are known as "mocha skins," but, like the "mocha coffee" of commerce, this is merely a term and nothing else. In 1897 these skins were imported into New York to the value of $628,226.—New York Press.

Robin Roosts Discovered.

For many years naturalists like Audubon and Wilson studied and wrote of this bird before it was known that there were "robin roosts" as well as pigeon roosts. Only within the last few years was the fact brought out that a bird more familiarly known than the passenger pigeon followed this mode of spending the night, although it adopted spring instead of fall for massing by hundreds in a high, sheltered wood for a night's protection from cold, or because it is the period before pairing time, or for some other reason at present beyond men's ken. With what stealth must this well known and much observed bird have found its way in such numbers to the same patch of timber night after night in the early months of the year, according to locality, coming from all directions so swiftly that a secreted observer could not count, keeping up a chatter that could be heard for a long distance, until the last bird, somewhat belated, perhaps, found shelter in the darkening grove, when all became as silent as thousands of wings were folded to rest.

FIRST CHURCH IN THE KLONDIKE.

Good Work Begun by the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions.

The Rev. S. Hall Young and Dr. W. A. McEwen, two young Presbyterians sent out by the Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, started for the Klondike last August. The two missionaries reached Klondike City just before the winter set in and before all means of travelling had been closed. On their journey they were robbed of the greater part of their provisions. Their first step was to rent a hall in which to hold services. They leased a small house for seven months for $850, payable in advance. The upper floor was divided into six 8x10 rooms, which were let very readily for $20 a month in advance. After the first service had been held, however, one of the lodgers came home drunk and set fire to the building. The house was totally destroyed. The loss was a great blow to the church, as much of the material burned could not be replaced at any cost.

Services were next held in the "Opera-House," which is the largest room in the city. The missionaries spent all their money in fitting up the new church, but when their cash was gone they found the miners very willing to give credit. The rudest furniture that could be found cost the church $200. Each window sash cost one-half ounce of gold, or about $10. Twelve joints of stovepipe cost $1.50 each. The pews were made of rough, unplaned boards, supported by rough logs. The missionaries borrowed sixteen rough boards to be used for seats.

The church is always kept warm and comfortable, in spite of the artic cold, to provide a meeting place for the miners away from the saloons. The reading-rooms have already become very popular. The miners have taken great interest in collecting reading matter. The library consists of about 1,500 books, magazines and pamphlets.

The labor bureau, which has been running for some time, has also done much good in relieving those unable to find profitable employment—for the Klondike has its unemployed poor the same as New York. A number of women from the surrounding country have taken an active interest in the church work and a regular chapter of the Christian Endeavor Society has been formed. One of the most important acquisitions of the church is a piano, which is played at the various services by Mrs. Kaiser, a woman banker from Jacksonville, Tenn.—New Work World.

PURPOSE PUT PITT IN PARLIAMENT.

He Allowed Nothing to Interfere with His Career and Never Knew Defeat.

William Pitt resolved in his boyhood to win a seat in the British Parliament, and every fibre of his being became alive with that purpose. Friends besought him to make a career worthy of his illustrious father; and his soul expanded, and achieved wonders under the power of that idea. No hardship was too great, no sacrifice too exacting, no study too irksome and no labor too forbidding for his conquering spirit. His was a triumphal march through the fields of literature, over the hills of science, and into the realm of wise statesmanship. He passed directly from College to the House of Commons. In a single year he rose to be Chancellor of the Exchequer; in two years he became Prime Minister of England, and from that moment his reign of influence and power was phenomenal. For a quarter of a century he was the power behind the throne of Britain, never relaxing his grip of political supremacy for love, wealth, learning or religion, and never knowing defeat, even temporary disappointment, from the beginning to the end of his remarkable career. He was the most influential and famous man in Great Britain before the dew of his youth was wiped from his forehead. Purpose did it.—Success.

CAREFUL OF HIS AUTOGRAPH.

Secretary Gage Does Not Leave Room to Write Above His Name.

Secretary Gage is cautious as to the manner in which he signs his name for autograph fiends. One of these gentry recently accosted the Secretary as he was leaving the White House after a Cabinet meeting. Always willing to oblige, Mr. Gage paused to write his signature. The autograph man indicated a place in the middle of the page for the name. Secretary Gage shook his head, and said: "You'll have to find another place." A brother Cabinet officer was standing near and was attracted by the remark. After signing his name at the top part of the page of the album, Secretary Gage explained that many years ago he had learned never to place his name on a blank piece of paper where there was enough space above it to allow anything else to be written. "I know that man who wanted the signature just then was all right," said the Secretary, "but I never break my rule." The Secretary told several stories of people attaching their names to blank papers, with the result that they got themselves into trouble through orders being written above the names.—Cor. Chicago Times-Herald.

One Instance.

"Our proud name has never been humbled in the dust," said Miss Parr-Venoo.

"Oh, yes, it has, Sally," said the inconvenient and objectionable old friend of the family. I remember it happenin' forty years ago, when the wind blowed down the sign off your grandfather's shoe shop."—Indianapolis Journal.

Lokal-Nachrichten aus der alten Heimath.

Württemberg.

Stuttgart. Im Frühjahr entstand plötzlich unter den Hunden in Stuttgart eine größere Sterblichkeit; es herrschte zuerst die Ansicht, daß von böswilliger Hand den Thieren Gift gegeben wurde. Inzwischen hat jedoch die Sterblichkeit noch zugenommen, und es hat sich herausgestellt, daß die Thiere einer Seuche zum Opfer fallen, die in ihrer äußeren Erscheinung große Aehnlichkeit mit der beim Rindvieh vorkommenden Maul- und Klauenseuche hat. Ganz abgesehen von dem großen Schaden, welcher dem einzelnen Besitzer durch das Verenden der oft sehr werthvollen Thiere entsteht, wird die Seuche auch ihre fühlbare Wirkung auf das Steuer-Budget im nächsten Jahre ausüben.

Ebingen. In der Nähe der Gemeinde Bitz ist ein ergiebiges Marmorlagen konstatirt worden. Professor Fraas aus Stuttgart und Professor Kroken aus Tübingen, die an Ort und Stelle waren, bestätigten darnach, daß die zu Tage geförderte Felsenmasse echter Marmor sei. Nach dem Urtheil der Fachmänner soll das Lager „außerordentlich ergiebig" sein und einen bedeutenden Industriezweig versprechen.

Marbach. Der Schmied Daiber hat seine 28jährige leibliche Tochter erstochen. Daiber hatte früher den Sauferwahnsinn und ist schon öfter bestraft; seine Tochter war ein sehr braves Mädchen.

Rottweil. Wegen fahrlässiger Tödtung durch Ueberfahren mit einem Fahrrad wurde der ledige Schuhmacher Richard Leis von Dortmund von der hiesigen Strafkammer zu elf Monaten Gefängniß verurtheilt. Leis hatte einen Knaben überfahren, der nach 12 Stunden seinen Verletzungen erlag.

Ulm. Die städtischen Kollegien genehmigten das Gesuch des königlichen statistischen Landesamtes um die Benützung des Münsterthurmes für meteorologische Beobachtungen. Die Instrumente, die die meteorologische Centralstation in Stuttgart liefert, werden auf dem oberen und unteren Umgange angebracht. Als Beobachter der Instrumente werden auf Kosten der Stadt die Münsterwächter angestellt werden. Die Ueberwachung übernimmt Direktor Schimpf. Die meteorologische Münsterstation wird nach der auf dem Eiffelthurme in Paris die höchste Thurmstation werden.

Baden.

Karlsruhe. Der Bürgerausschuß trat einstimmig dem Beschluß des Stadtraths bei, der sich für die Höherlegung des Bahnhofs ausspricht. Ebenso genehmigte er den vom Stadtrath vorgeschlagenen Ankauf einer Geländefläche von 12,847 Quadratmetern zum Preise von 113,317 Mark auf der Knielinger Gemarkung, um dort einen Friedhof für den westlichen Stadttheil anzulegen.—Dieser Tage wurde hier nach vorausgegangenem Gottesdienste die zweite israelitische Synode eröffnet.

Heidelberg. Acht Angehörige des hiesigen Studentenkorps „Rhenania," die Anfangs August von der Strafkammer in Mannheim wegen Herausforderung zum Zweikampf und Kartelltragens zu Festungshaft verurtheilt worden waren, wurden durch Beschluß des Senats der Universität auf vier Semester relegirt.

Mannheim. Die Firma Lever Bros, in Port Sunlight bei Liverpool, bekanntlich die größte Seifenfabrik der Welt, hat auf Neckarau-Mannheimer Gemarkung ein Gelände von 85,000 Quadratmeter gekauft, um darauf eine große Seifenfabrik zu errichten.

Thennenbronn. Als der 51 Jahre alte frühere Bierbrauer Christian Oel mit der Axt einen Pfahl in den Boden treiben wollte, schlug er sich mit dem Schneidetheil an die Stirn, worauf der Tod sofort erfolgte. Oel war angetrunken.

Elsaß-Lothringen.

Straßburg. Der Gemeinderath beschloß, in den städtischen Elementarschulen Schulküchen für Schülerinnen in größerem Umfange einzuführen.—Die in Folge des Dreyfushandels in Frankreich herrschende Aufregung und Unsicherheit hat zahlreiche einheimische Familien, die bisher ihre Söhne über die Grenze schickten, um sie in französischen Pensionaten erziehen zu lassen, bewogen, dieselben von dort zurückzunehmen, um sie elsaß-lothringischen höheren Lehranstalten zu übergeben.

Merzheim. Hier erschoß ein Gendarm einen Gefangenen, der einen Fluchtversuch machte, als er ihn in's Colmaer Untersuchungsgefängniß überführen wollte. Er schoß erst, als der Gefangene, ein viel vorbestrafter, gefährlicher Mensch, auf seine Halttrufe nicht hielt, und er glaubte, ihn nicht mehr einholen zu können.

CHAPTER VI.

Then in the darkness, in the shadow of the wall beneath the lady's balcony, one lover in low whispers taught the other how to speak. And, that no passerby should spoil the plan, he bade his pages play at the entrance to the street a tune if any one should come, "Gay if a woman, sad if a man," said Cyrano.

"Roxane," called Christian's voice.

Roxane glimmered in white upon the balcony.

"Who's there?" she asked.

"'Tis I, Christian. I would speak with you."

"No! You speak too ill. Begone!"

"I pray"—

"No! You do not love me!"

"You accuse me—kind Heaven, hear her—of loving no more when I love more and more."

"Ah," cried Roxane, "that is a little better."

"Love grew great rocked in my restless heart, which he—the cruel—took for a cradle. And for that he was cruel. I have tried to stifle him—but vain the effort. Newborn, he is still a young Hercules. And as if they were naught he strangled the two serpents—pride and doubt."

"Ah! That is very good," cried Roxane. She left the shuttered window where she had been standing, as though to re-enter her room, and leaned over the balcony, peering into the darkness.

"But why do you speak so slowly?" she asked. "Have you some palsy of imagination?"

Cyrano pushed Christian farther into the background, and, schooling his voice to be like the youth's, answered her.

"It is that night is come," he said, "and in the dark my words must creep to find your ear."

"My words encounter no such difficulty."

"The winged words from you, madame, come down. They travel quickly. But mine must climb, and that needs longer time."

"But now they mount with speed, methinks."

"They've had practice. They have caught the art."

"I speak to you, in truth, from a great height," sighed Roxane. "I think I will come down."

"No, no!"

"Stand, then, upon that bench beneath my balcony."

"No!"

"And pray why not?"

"To speak thus, without seeing—'tis sweet. We scarce divine each other. You see a darkness, cloaked and tall, and I—the whiteness of a robe of spring. I am but a shadow, and you are light. You do not know what these minutes are to me. If sometimes I am eloquent"—

UNDER THE BALCONY OF ROXANE.

"You are!"

"Never until this hour have my words sprung straight from my heart. A blindness falls upon me when your eyes look into mine. Tonight—tonight for the first time, it seems to me that I am speaking straight to you."

"A new tone's in your voice."

"A new tone, true, for in the night that hides me I dare at last to be myself. I dare—I know not what. Forgive me that I'm moved. This—this is so sweet—so strange"—

"So strange?"

"Yes—strange to be sincere. The fear of being mocked has always locked my heart."

"Mocked? But why?"

"Ah—for my heart's wild beating! I sought to clothe my love with witty words, to hide it from the curious gaze. I longed to reach up starward, and am afraid of ridicule. I stooped and picked a wild flower. This wit of ours! To catch your fancy at the first—'twas good, but now 'twould be a profanation of the calm night to speak the words that garnish fine love letters. Come, let us look upon the stars. Let the wide sky take from us all our make believes. I dread that, in the alchemy we're skilled in, the very essence of our love may dissolve—escape us. Ah, it is sin in love to play at fencing! The moment comes—and blest that moment—when every polished phrase and rounded word is sad and vain."

"And if that moment's come for us?" floated the whisper down from the balcony.

"All, all that came to me I'd toss to you in one wild cluster, not set in a bouquet. I love you! I stifle—I love! I'm mad! Do you not begin to understand, my sweet? Do you not feel my soul mount up to you? Ah, this is too beautiful, too dear, that I should tell you all and you should listen! It is too much. I never hoped for this. Could I but die now! Have words of mine the power to make you tremble there among the branches? For you do tremble like a leaf among the leaves! I feel it! Whether you will it or not, the blessed trembling of your hand thrills through the tendrils of your jasmine."

He caught the vine and kissed it passionately.

"Oh," cried Roxane in a voice faint with excess of happiness, "I tremble! I weep! I love thee! I am thine! Ah, thou hast conquered me!"

And then, though Cyrano's were the words that won her, Christian's were the feet to mount to her balcony, Christian's the arms to infold her, his the face for her kisses.

"Ah, well," mused Cyrano in the gloom, all sweet with white stars of flowers; "ah, well, some crumbs of joy still fall to me, for though you kiss his lips the words you kiss are mine!"

Now, it was no part of my Lord De Guiche's plan to betake himself to Arras without pursuing the advantage he thought he had won with Roxane. She had pretended an interest in his movements. She had suggested to him a subtle scheme of revenge upon her insolent cousin. She had called him "Antoine." Surely when she had yielded so far to his lovemaking surely he had but to make love a little longer to win more favor. What if she had besought him by his love for her to go where glory waited! Glory should wait on love.

Therefore it happened that on the night when Cyrano's lovemaking, mounting to Roxane's balcony through the jasmined darkness, had broken down her coldness and had won her—for Christian—there came a friar through the still street where the ugly eloquent waited. The pages guarding the corner had played twice—gay and sad.

"Gay?" said Cyrano. "A woman passes. No. Sad? Ah, gay and sad! It is a monk."

And through the street there glided a cowled and vestured figure.

"I seek Mme. Robin—Mme. Madeline Robin," announced the friar "Lives she not here?"

Some subtle sense of danger to his lady caused Cyrano to give the friar a false direction. Discovering his mistake, the friar returned. While they talked Roxane and Christian came to the door with her duenna to learn the cause of the chatter.

"I have a message for your fairness," exclaimed the friar, "from a great noble."

"Ah—De Guiche!" breathed Roxane softly.

"'Tis here." And the friar drew forth the note and gave it to Roxane.

Behind Roxane stood Ragueneau, whom hungry poets had eaten out of stock and shop and whom a gay newsdealer had bereft of his wife also. At Cyrano's prayer Roxane had made the ex-pastry cook one of her retainers, and his was the hand that held the lantern by which she read De Guiche's note. It ran:

MADEMOISELLE—The drums beat. My regiment girds its armor on. It starts. And I—they believe me gone already, but I wait. I disobey you. I am here—hidden in the convent. Tonight I come to you. I send you this to let you know by a poor monk as simple as a child, who has no understanding of the thing he bears. Your lips have smiled on me too sweetly, and I must see them once again. Send every one away. Receive me all alone—the bold one you forgive already—I hope it. For he is yours—

Roxane had read the letter swiftly and softly. She turned her eyes upon its bearer and said:

"Father, this is what the letter bids me. Listen:

"MADEMOISELLE—All must bow to the cardinal's will, no matter how hard it seems. Therefore I send these lines to your fair hands by this devout, this wise and cautious friar. It is our will that he pronounce upon you in your own dwelling, within the hour, the nuptial benediction. Christian becomes your husband secretly. We send him to you. He does not please you, but resign yourself. Think well how heaven will reward your zeal and be always assured, mademoiselle, of the respect of him who is and who will always be your very humble servant."

The simple friar looked up with delight.

"The noble gentleman!" he said. "I knew there was no wrong planned."

Roxane's smile for a second was inscrutable. Then she threw herself into her part.

"This—this is unbearable!" she cried. "Marry him!"

The friar looked at Cyrano.

"Is this the choice made for mademoiselle?" he asked with sympathy.

"No. I am!" cried Christian.

The good friar's lantern swung slowly around. He was puzzled. Why should Roxane object to wed this highly favored youth? Roxane saw the dawning suspicion in his eyes.

"Ah, stay!" she exclaimed. "A postscript! 'Give to the convent 20 pistoles.'"

"The noble lord!" said the reassured friar. "Come, mademoiselle, resign yourself to the cardinal's will."

"I am resigned," said Roxane, with the air of a martyr. Then she said in a quick undertone to Cyrano:

"De Guiche comes. Keep him out till I am wed."

"Father," said Cyrano, "how long will this marrying take?"

"A quarter of an hour will suffice."

"No one shall enter for that time," whispered Cyrano to Roxane, and as the wedding party filed into the house he began his lonely guarding beneath the balcony

CHAPTER VII.

At the corner of the street the flutes played a sad air. The pages thus announced the coming of a man.

"It's he," said Cyrano. "How shall I keep him? How detain him? I have it! Now, Cyrano, forget the Paris accent. Assume again the twang of Bergerac."

He climbed lithe as a cat into the branches by Roxane's balcony. He clung to them, ready to fall at the proper instant. De Guiche came along, grumbling softly to himself in the darkness.

"Which is the house?" he growled. "This mask half blinds me. Ah! That's it. I think that's it. What can that idiot friar be about? What's this? What's this? Where did that man fall from?"

For Cyrano had fallen straight before his path heavily, as though from some great height.

"From the moon," he answered gruffly, disguising his voice.

"What!" cried De Guiche, retreating a step from the madman.

"Where am I? What's the hour? What country is this? What day of the week? What time of year? I'm stunned. I fell like a bomb straight from the moon."

De Guiche made fruitless efforts to stay the apparent maniac's flow of words or to pass him. But Cyrano rushed on.

"It may have been a hundred years. It may have been a second only. I do not know. I only know that there—up in that ball of yellow saffron"—

"Let me pass, sir!" cried De Guiche.

"Oh, where am I? Tell me the truth! Keep nothing back! Where is it that I am? Where have I fallen like a shooting star? I had no time to choose the place where I should land. Oh, tell me! Where am I? But—great heaven! Let me look on you! You're black! Have I, then, fallen into Africa? Are you a native?"

De Guiche, puzzled for an instant by the reference to his complexion, suddenly recalled his mask.

"Oh, my mask!" he exclaimed.

"Ah! Am I, then, in Venice or in Rome?"

"I go—a lady waits me!"

"Now I am sure!" cried Cyrano. "I am in Paris!"

In spite of himself the impatient lord laughed. At once the maniac from the moon, with an air of complete good comradeship, began to apologize for his appearance.

"So 'tis to Paris that I've fallen! You'll pardon me my looks? I've journeyed far, you see. My eyes are full of star dust, and my spurs are tangled with the planets' filaments. See! I must brush me! A comet's hair is on my doublet. In my leg, if you'll believe me—nay, do not hurry—there's a tooth of the Great Bear, who bit me as I passed, and if you'd press my nose, monsieur, between your fingers milk would run forth. You are astonished? 'Twas from the milky way. A most amazing journey! I mean to write it for a book, and the small gold stars I carry will serve for asterisks."

Again and again De Guiche essayed to pass. Again and again Cyrano frustrated him. He did it all with such whimsical grace that, despite his annoyance, the noble lord found himself amused and interested. A rendezvous with a lady, no matter how fair—that might befall one any night—but a talk with a man who, crazy though he certainly was, had all astronomy and all mythology at his tongue's tip—that was of less frequent possibility.

Cyrano was in the midst of a description of his method of mounting to the moon.

"At the hour when the moon wooes the sea," he said, "I lay me on the shore fresh from the sea bath. And keeping the head first—for the hair holds sea water—I mounted in the air straight, straight as an angel! Then"—

"Then?" queried the half hypnotized De Guiche.

"Then—but the quarter of an hour is passed," suddenly exclaimed Cyrano in his natural voice. "Sir, you are free; the marriage is made!"

De Guiche sprang forward.

"What!" he cried. "Am I mad? That voice! That nose! Cyrano?"

Cyrano bowed low.

"Cyrano, at your service," he replied, "while we have plighted vows."

One thing Roxane had overlooked in making her hasty plans for a wedding to thwart De Guiche's hopes. She had forgotten that while the commander of the forces remained in Paris the soldiers left there were under his direction. Her husband and her cousin must do the bidding of their chief. And the chief's bidding that night when he found himself fooled by the woman he had believed half won to his dishonorable love, and by her insolent cousin to whom he owed a long due grudge, was not a light one. The Gascon cadets were ordered straight to Arras.

No time was given the young bride to weep farewells. Her husband before the marriage vows had ceased to vibrate in the air was hurried forth. Scarce had she time to beg her valiant cousin to keep her lover safe in battle, prudent in danger, faithful to her and a dozen other easy things when both were gone. And De Guiche, vanquished in love, felt himself victor, at any rate in cruelty.

At Arras life was not a pleasant affair. Though the French troops were the besiegers, they suffered for provisions almost as keenly as if they had been in the fortified town they attacked, for, while they bombarded the town, the troops of Spain gathered about them, and thus there was a siege within a siege, and the forces of France were as hungry as the men in the town. The cadets were reduced to eating cannon wads soaked in axle grease, sometimes catching a gudgeon and shooting an occasional sparrow.

Things had reached a crisis one morning. Even the Gascons vowed that they had not come out to fight the gray wolf hunger. They grumbled fiercely at their lot. They picked the commander to pieces. They found fault with his wide lace collar and his manners of the court. Hunger gnawed at them until they were ready to mutiny against even their beloved captain, Carbon de Castel-Jaloux.

Cyrano, returning from a mad dash he made each morning through the Spanish lines, that he might send to Roxane in Paris love letters, all signed Christian, for the bargain made in Ragueneau's bakeshop still held force, found all the camp in turmoil. The men had vowed they would no longer stand their lot.

Cyrano himself was scarcely ruddy, scarcely strong, but it took more than the want of food to kill his courage. At his captain's command he began to rally the men. First it was with jests.

"If you be so hungry, eat your patience then," he counseled one grumbler.

"Always your pointed word!" cried the man whom he rebuked.

"So would I die," said Cyrano, "like this, making a pointed word for a good cause, felled by a thrust from some brave adversary's sword. Thus would I die—upon the blood stained earth—a point within my heart, a point upon my lips."

They did not care for that, the Gascons. Their answer was:

"We're hungry!"

Then Cyrano bade the fifer play and do the work his wit had failed in doing.

"Play not the calls to battle," he commanded, "but simple things they heard of in old Gascony—each piping note like the call of a little sister. Let them rise slow, like the slow rising smoke that curls from out our chimneys there. Play the tunes the goatherds play—now heard, now lost down in the valley. Hear you it not? See you not your country—the evening purpling on the river, the woods, the hills, with huddling sheep the shepherd drives? See you not Gascony?"

The men sat staring—not at the camp, not the arms, the sentinels, the trappings of war, but far past all these into far Gascony. The higher love had killed the lower. Homesickness drove out hunger.

It was thus that De Guiche found them—Gascons again, who could laugh at starvation as they would laugh at whistling bullets. They were ready to bear themselves before him with their customary air of insolent high spirit.

He did not like their manner. He, too, was hungry. Their eyes seemed always to challenge his courage. Today he even went so far as to boast of his strategem of the day before, when, dropping the white scarf that showed his rank, he had escaped from a detachment of the enemy, only to return later and rout it.

"Ah!" said Cyrano. "The white plume of Henry of Navarre had not been dropped thus. Some would not so lightly abdicate the honor of serving for a target. Had I been there, I would have picked it up and put it on."

"A Gascon boast," sneered De Guiche.

"Nay, give it me and I will wear it."

"Another boast. It's gone—dropped in the Spanish lines where none may venture—as you knew."

From his pocket Cyrano drew forth the scarf.

"I found it there this morning," said he, bowing. "Permit that I return it."

The rage on the commander's face gave place to an uglier look.

"I thank you," he said. "I'll use it for a signal. See! Here upon the ramparts I wave it. A man below there runs—a false Spanish spy. He came to warn me that the Spanish will this day attack us, for our force is weakened. Perhaps you did not know it, but the marshal secretly has gone with a strong escort to Dourleus, where the king's provisions are. Our camp being thus made vulnerable, the Spanish will attack it. And with the scarf you very kindly gave to me I have just signaled to the false spy to tell his general that this is the weakest spot to fall upon. Here the attack will begin. You'll have a chance to prove your boasted courage, sirs. The marshal will return in time to save the day for us, but not to save the men who are first assaulted. Brave Gascons, who complain of paltry odds, be good enough to let yourselves be killed."

He finished with his sneer. Carbon was already forming his men in line of resistance. Cyrano with all his old light hearted insolence bowed low to De Guiche in thanks, and to the cadets he cried:

"So we shall win for the Gascon coat of arms, with its six bars of blue and gold, the blood red one it lacked."

And to Christian he said:

"My heart misgave me this would be today. Here is the letter that I wrote for you to send Roxane. A farewell letter, it is sad. Death matters not, but not to look upon her face again—for you, I mean—oh, that is terrible!"

FINAL TERMS TO SPAIN.

Cession of the Philippine Islands Demanded. Twenty Million Offered in Return.

(Special to The Daily Press.)

Paris, Nov. 21—The Spanish and American Peace Commission met in joint session at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The Americans declared that the United States must have the entire Phillippine archipelago, and, for a treaty cession of the islands, the Americans tendered to Spain $20,000,000

November 28th is fixed as the date on which the United States Commission desires a definite response to today's propositions and all other subjects in issue here.

The Americans refuse to arbitrate article three of the peace protocol bearing upon the future disposition and control of the Philippine Islands.

It was declared that it is the purpose of the United States to maintain in the Philippine Islands an "open-door" to the world's commerce.

President Rios, of the Spanish commission, refused to continue further negotiations.

Funeral of Mrs. Crittenden.

The funeral services of the late Mrs Crittenden were held yesterday afternoon from the home, 90 Grove street, and was largely attended by friends and neighbors. The services were in charge of Rev. Dr. W. R Richards, pastor of the deceased, and he was assisted by T. Logan Murphy, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross. Both divines spoke tender words of sympathy and comfort, and dwelt at length upon the Christian character of the deceased. During the services Charles L. Lewis, of this city, sang two beautiful solos.

HOW SEWARD DISCHARGED A DEBT.

In a Year's Time He Paid $200,000 to Creditors and Was a Rich Man Besides.

Calvin Hudson, an old-time lawyer of Rochester, used to tell a good story of William H. Seward, in whose office he studied law for about two years. Seward retired from the Governor's chair $200,000 in debt. He returned to Auburn and went to practising law.

It was not long after this that Woodward, the famous manufacturer of ploughs, began to have a lot of trouble with firms all over the country, who infringed his patents. He began to look about him for a lawyer to prosecute them. Realizing that it was a gigantic task, he would have none but the best lawyer to be secured. In his search he went to Albany and attended the Court of Appeals for several days. Seward was arguing a case in that court, and Woodward's attention was attracted to him. Woodward became convinced that the lawyer, whom he did not then know, was the one to conduct his case, so one day when court was over he made his way to the clerk of the court and asked who the young attorney was. He was much surprised to get the reply, "Why, that's Governor Seward."

Woodward engaged Seward to conduct his case for him and after some months Seward went to Albany to have the first case against the infringers tried.

The opposition was represented by twelve lawyers, among whom were Senators, Congressmen and some of the best attorneys in the State. After much debating among themselves as to who should conduct the defence, they finally settled the job upon one of their number. He was no match for Seward who easily won the case and got a strong opinion from the Court.

Armed with the opinion, Seward went back to Auburn and began the fight all along the line, wherever there was an infringement. He sent a copy of a voluminous brief to every man who was concerned in the infringement, and they were scattered all over the United States, together with the opinion. For several weeks briefs left Seward's office by the bushel basketful. He carried the enemies' works by storm. There were no more suits. At the end of a year Seward had paid up the debt of $200,000 and was a rich man besides.—Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Early in the present year Mr. Laing told me that he did not think there was enough money spent on street work, and that the city should be bonded for same; now he criticises what is called "excessive expenditure" and that the "home of the Council is in the club car or at the "Country Club." Three members of the Council, viz. Messrs. Andrews, Baker and myself belong to a club car. Mr Baker is not a member of any committee, and neither Mr. Andrews or myself serve on any like committees; but one member (Mr. Baker) is a member of the Union County Country Club.

Councilman Liefke at the same meeting complained that he "could not find out what was going on, unless he goes outside the Council." He serves on the following committees: License, composed of himself, chairman, and Messrs. Homan and myself. Here is a local majority and as a member of that committee I can certify that but one meeting has been called this year. On lights and trees he is associated with Messrs. Newman and Hetfield, all local men, and on alms he is associated with Messrs. Andrews and Hetfield, a majority of local men. Contrary to custom of former days when under both Democratic and Republican administrations, secret meetings were held, this Council has not had a meeting (even the organizing caucus) except that a notice was given to every member of the Council.

We are but human, still we have endeavored to represent the city, and requests coming from citizens have been heeded, notably storm sewer in East Second street, same in Plainfield avenue to the bridge, amending the "Building Ordinance," refusing "Trolley Extension," and re-macadamizing West Front street, Westervelt, Sandford, Belvidere, Madison and Watchung avenues, and East Fifth street. Other work is just as pressing, but it cannot all be done at once. With patience for another year, we can see Plainfield out of the mud and her streets to their former pride.

Opposition is healthy but let it be honest. We cannot carry sewers to tide-water and keep the tax rate down. Today in the town of Montclair, one of similiar size as regards population and assessed valuation, taxpayers on the average pay twenty-five per cent more on the same property value.

Fanwood and Westfield both tax heavier, without beginning to return same benefits.

Citizens should realize how hard it is to keep taxes down and improvements up. Let them open their eyes to what other places pay and get in return. Forget slight inequalization in taxation and assessment. Be patriotic and stand behind the men you place in office; that Plainfield's welfare and growth may continue on the lines that have already made her the model home city, homes of all classes, that are not equalled elsewhere, and where brains and education are the standard by which citizenship is judged.

Respectfully,
Elliot T. Barrows,
Councilman 3d ward.

WEDDED AT ST. JOSEPH'S.

Nuptials of Daniel Sullivan and Agnes Higgins Celebrated Yesterday.

A pretty wedding took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Joseph's church. The contracting parties were Miss Agnes Higgins and Daniel Sullivan, both of this city. The bride wore a suit of mixed goods, trimmed with cream lace and silk, covered with chiffon. The bridemaid was Miss Katie Ladless. The best man was Michael Higgins a brother of the bride. The church was filled with friends and relatives of both parties. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Brenon of St. Josephs church. The groom has completely furnished a house on West Fourth treet, where a supper was served and the bride and groom received the congratulations of the guests.

—Tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold a sewing meeting in the church parlors.

The condition of J. W. Yates is practically unchanged, and is very critical.

AMERICAN RIDING IN ENGLAND.

A Sporting Writer Dissects Tod Sloane's Elements of Success.

Thousands who take only the most casual interest in the turf, but are always attracted by great horsemanship, are asking expert advice on the intrinsic merits of the American style of riding. A sportsman sends an instructive letter on the subject. He says:

"Let me see whether I can give an explanation of Sloan's success. In the first instance I should say he is a man of absolute courage; and it is this which, combined with kindness, wins the confidence of all the lower animals and is the first essential of a good jockey. Horses are wonderful judges of character. Secondly, Sloan's position, exactly that of a monkey on a stick, does offer less opposition to the air than the ordinary seat of a horseman. In scientific phraseology, it diminishes the friction to a minimum. Again, this position enables him to grasp the reins within a foot of the horse's mouth, and the nearer the object to be guided the more accurately can be applied the directing force. Thirdly, Sloan, I am convinced, recognizes the great fact that if we are either in a train or in a conveyance or on horseback we become one with the moving mass if we sit still. This is proved by the well known fact that the circus rider does not jump over the banners; he simply lets his body become a moving mass with the horse, and as he approaches the banner he jumps into the air. The impetus which he has obtained from the horse carries him over the banner nearly as quickly as the horse has travelled, and he alights on the steed's back, but if we watch the bareback rider we shall see he does not keep interfering with the horse's movements. He in effect says the animal will do his part of the work if left alone. Those who have watched Sloan in his races will have noticed how he jumps off rapidly, and at once settles down on his horse, and is not constantly changing his position in the saddle, or interfering with the special step of his horse; because it must be remembered that each horse, like each man, has his or her special mode of progression. Sloan simply makes himself one with his horse in movement; he does not offend the naturally sensitive temperament of such a beautiful creature as a thoroughbred horse; he does not sacrifice a race for the sake of making an artistic finish, but with unequaled skill and judgment, and with a cool, intelligent head he wins his races when and how he can, always remembering that friction means loss of energy, and that with interference with a horse's method means loss of power and opposition to nature. For my part, I am glad to see Tod Sloan on our racecourses. It will, I hope, be the cause of young men who are of light weight, good traditions and intelligence making jockeyship their calling. There is ample room for them, and they might serve a good purpose."

VEGETATION IN THE CANARIES.

Three Harvests a Year are Always Expected.

The soil is very rich. With irrigation three harvests a year are regularly gathered on Canary and Teneriffe. The water supply is largely kept up by the cloud belts, which even in the driest seasons form almost daily over the higher mountains, feeding the springs there which are the life of the land. But the rocky, volcanic nature of the coast forbids the entrance of many plants, and this fact has had great influence on the character of the flora. The craggy hills and stony shores have a decidedly desert aspect, and adaptations to drought in the form of fleshy, hoary and coriaceous leaves and stems abound.

Euphorbias take the place and have the appearance of the cacti of American deserts. Fleshy Crassulaceae of the Sempervivum group are more abundant here than in any other part of the world. There are twenty-two species of them which are found nowhere else. Such fleshy plants are not confined to the volcanic wastes and shores. They project from the most precipitous and rocky sides of the gorges. The urban flora, which makes Laguna and other old towns so picturesque, and which Berthelot describes as largely a duplication of that of the ruins of the Coliseum of Rome, consists conspicuously of fleshy-leaved Sempervivums and Senecios, whose roots penetrate the tiles of the houses and the stones of the streets. It is curious how many of these fleshy plants have their leaves growing in rosettes, producing a similarity between the members of widely separated orders.—Appleton's Popular Science Monthly.

The Youth's Predicament.

A youth who much desired to wear the matrimonial yoke had not sufficient courage to "pop the question." On informing his father of the difficulty he labored under, the old gentleman passionately replied, "Why you great booby, how do you suppose I managed to get married?"

"Oh, yes," said the bashful lover, "you married mother, but I've got to marry a strange girl."—Tid Bits.

The late Empress of Austria, it is said, kept up a constant correspondence with her Irish friends, and in a letter written recently to an Irish lady alluded to the terrible death of her sister, the Duchess d'Alencon, at the charity bazaar fire in Paris, and remarked that she felt a presentment that some tragedy awaited herself in the future.

X-RAY USED IN DENTISTRY.

The most remarkable application of the X-ray was recently made in a case in which a child's mouth was made to do duty as a photographic camera. It was part of an operation in dental surgery.

A progressive dentist in New York state had a case in which he suspected a delayed second tooth, but no external examination could either prove or disprove the theory. He finally decided on recourse to the X-ray. A mold of the upper part of the mouth was made in wax, and allowed to harden. On it was chiseled a flat surface directly back of the portion of the jaw to be photographed and just large enough for a photographic film less than an inch square. The film is simply a strip of thin celluloid, coated with an emulsion which is sensitive to light. In a dark room the film was cut to such a shape that it would lie evenly on the plain surface chiseled in the wax mold. It was then carefully protected by an double wrapping of black paper, so that it would not be acted upon by common light. The film, together with the wax mold, was placed in the mouth of the patient, and the head held perfectly still for several minutes, while a heavy current excited the X-ray tube placed in front of the face. Although the photographic film would be absolutely unaffected by ordinary light in its carefully prepared envelope, the X-ray readily penetrated this envelope and cast on the film a shadow of all the parts intervening between the tube and film.

On developing the film in a dark room two small first teeth were clearly shown in the jaw, but their roots were partially absorbed. Behind them, and too far up to be shown by an exterior examination, a large second tooth projected obliquely downward. Supplied with the negative thus obtained by means of the X-ray, the dentist had a clear idea of the condition he had to deal with, and it only rested with his skill to adjust the difficulties.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

MACHINE TICKETS WIN IN ALL WARDS.

Hot Fight in the First and Second Wards.

CUMING'S PLUCKY FIGHT.

GEORGE P. MELLICK DEFEATED HIM AT RECORD-BREAKING PRIMARY.

The MacMurray Faction in the First Ward was Defeated by a Small Majority — Delegates Elected There Are Unpledged—No Fight in Third Ward—Opposition in Fourth Did Not Appear.

Never in the history of the Republican party in Plainfield was such an interest shown by the voters in ward affairs as last night. The party primaries were held to nominate Councilmen, Justice of the Peace and Constable and to elect delegates to the city convention and members of the city executive committee of the G. O. P. The attendance at all of them was remarkably large, in the Second ward there being ninety more voters out than ever attended a Republican primary in that ward before. All was without incident in the Third and Fourth wards. In the other two, lively contests were closely watched. The result was a victory for the "machine" tickets in every ward.

FIRST WARD

The First ward primary saw three tickets on the field. There was a split among the ward leaders that resulted in a very close fight. City Clerk MacMurray and Postmaster E. H. Bird, and their friends favored a ticket pledged to W. N. Runyon in the race for the City Judgeship. J. Fred MacDonald, J. B. Coward and W. R. Codington and their supporters advocated a ticket that included unpledged delegates. They also substituted the name of Harry B. MacDonald for that of Councilman C. J. Neuman in the city committee. The third ticket was understood to include delegates who favored William Newcorn for the City Judge nomination.

There were 261 voters out to the primary. The officers of the primary were: W. R. Codington, chairman, and J. B. Coward, secretary. The officers of the election were: George W. Moore, judge; Guillermo Thorn, inspector, and John H. Tier, Jr., clerk.

Ralph I. Tolles was the only candidate for the Councilmanic nomination. He received 256 votes. John Gjetlesen received 259 votes for Constable nomination. For the Justice nomination, Henry C. Corsa, of the MacMurray ticket, defeated Dennis E. Carney, of the other faction, 133 to 127. The vote for the three members of the city executive committee was: W. R. Codington, 258; J. B. Coward, 258; Harry B. MacDonald, 147, and C. J. Neuman, 117. The first three were elected.

The vote for the five delegates to the city convention, the first five being elected, was as follows: Thos. Hanna, 135; Alexander D. Mallinson, 133; Fred J. Vieweg, 132; Wm. J. Douglass, 132; Isaiah L. McVoy, 131; D. S. Dunavan, 128; H. H. Corey, 128; W. W. Warnock, 119; Willard Case, 118; John Anthony, 118; Amos Andrews, 118; George W. Moore, 10; E. Apgar, 9, and I. H. McVoy, 9.

The result was a victory for the MacDonald-Coward-Codington faction by a vote of 133 to 118 for the other leaders' ticket, and 9 for the Newcorn ticket. It was nearly midnight before the counting of the ballots was completed.

SECOND WARD.

The primary in the Second ward was a record breaker as far as numbers was concerned. Until last night, the greatest primary was that preceeding the last city election when 160 voters came out. Last night there were 251 out. The result was a complete victory for the "machine" ticket which was so arranged as to be very strong. C. S. Foote was withdrawn for the Councilmanic nomination and George P. Mellick, a very popular man, was placed at the head of the ticket. He was supported by a powerful ticket. The faction favoring Thomas A. Cuming for the Councilmanic nomination made a good fight but lacked the excellent organization of the "machine." They had enough votes out to capture an ordinary primary but in the remarkable turnout Cuming was defeated by a majority of 78. He ran six or eight votes ahead of his ticket.

At the business meeting Stephen A. Ginna was elected chairman and Chas. C. Lister secretary. The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies. The officers of the election were W. H. Drayton, judge; W. P. Spangenberg, inspector; H. C. Durar, clerk.

The vote for the Councilmanic nomination was as follows: George P. Mellick, 163; Thomas A. Cuming, 85. For the Justice nomination, J. E. Mosher, 169. For Constable nomination, John Sheehan, 169. For three members of the city executive committee, John B. Dumont, 167; John E Keeley, 162; Stephen A. Ginna, 170; George D. Patten, 85; Robert Guttridge, 81; Edward C. Petrie, 77. For six delegates to the city convention, Stephen A. Ginna, 249; Josiah Browne, 169; Charles S. Foote, 163; L. L. Croom, 168; J. B. Dumont, 169; B. VanD. Hedges, 170; L. B. Bromfield, 79; Armstrong Mulford, 68; Fernando Brown, 77; Charles C. Lister, 79; Henry C. Squires, 80.

THIRD WARD.

A rumor of the fight at the Third ward primary that gained credence yesterday afternoon, proved entirely without foundation. The "machine" ticket went through with flying colors and without any contest. At the business meeting, W. M. Stillman was chairman and Roger F. Murray secretary. Resolutions were introduced by J. W. Murray, Jr., George J. Tobin and William T. Kirk providing for the signing of the certificates of nomination, for the filling of vacancies by the delegates and the filling of any vacancies in the nominations by the ward members of the executive committee. These were all passed.

The officers of election were J. Caspar Kirkner, judge; A. I. Littell, inspector; Nathan R. Titsworth, clerk. There were 106 ballots cast and one rejected. The vote for Councilmanic nomination was B. Frank Corlell, 103; F. C. Kinsman, 1. For Justice nomination, John Neagle, 105. For Constable nomination, Amos Moffett, 105. For seven delegates to the city convention, Alexander Gilbert, 105; J. W. Murray, Jr., 104; John Cose, 105; J. Evarts Tracy, 104; Frank E. Marsh, 105; I. W. Rushmore, 104; Nathan R. Titsworth, 104; Charles F. Abbott, 1; Jacob Kirkner, 1. For three members of the city executive committee, Alexander Gilbert, 105; Ernest R. Ackerman, 104; Elliott T. Barrows, 98; Roger F. Murray, 2.

The delegates in the Third ward are all in favor of Councilman William N. Runyon as the candidate for the City Judgeship.

FOURTH WARD.

The reported opposition to the "machine" in the Fourth ward failed to materialize and the "machine" ticket went through without trouble. The delegates on that ticket are all in favor of Judge William Newcorn for City Judge, as Mr. Newcorn is one of the hardest workers in the "machine."

At the business meeting, William Newcorn was elected chairman and Isaac P. Runyon secretary. The delegates were empowered to fill all vacancies.

The election officers were James Huntington, judge; Fred J. Huff, inspector; William H. Abbott, clerk. There were 230 ballots cast. The vote for the ticket was as follows: Councilman, Frank H. Smith, 230; Justice, W. H. Abbott, 229; Constable, F. Vanderhoof. Delegates to the city convention, William A. Westphal, 224; Alonzo T. Ayres, 226; Edward Mosher, 228; James Huntington, 228; Daniel Galbraith, 225; James Porter, 228; Neil Head, 228; Richard Norwood, 226; Charles Sheldon, 226. Members of city executive committee, William A. Westphal, 224; A. T. Ayers, 226; William Newcorn, 216.

PARK BOWLERS LOST.

Bad Start for Home Team in Central Journal League.

(Special to The Daily Press)

Elizabeth, November 22.—The bowlers of the Park Club, of Plainfield, came to Elizabeth last evening to roll their first games in the Central Journal League against the Elizabeth Club. The result was three victories for the home team. The scores of the games were 790-777, 797-680, 847-750. No phenominal scores were made and the visitors were in poor form. Hibbard, who rolled his first championship game, did particularly good work while "Doc" Thiers rolled a very even game. The other Plainfield bowlers were VanBuren, F. H. Ball and F. O. Ball. The Elizabeth Club was represented by Morrell, Vanderveer, Keys, Lane and Pope, the well-known combination.

HONOR FOR DR. RICHARDSON.

Selected as Third Vice-President of State C. E. Society.

Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, has been selected by the State officers of the Christian Endeavor Society to fill the position of third vice president, in place of Rev. W. T. S. Lumbar, of Moorestown, who has resigned.

The Endeavorers are to be congratulated in securing such an able man for an officer.

—The Republican city convention will be held tomorrow evening.

CITIZENS' LOOKING FOR CANDIDATES.

J. M. Hetfield Mentioned for Head of Ticket.

HE HAS MANY FRIENDS.

W. A. CODDINGTON GATHERS STRENGTH FOR JUDGESHIP.

Said to be a Compromise Candidate to Suit Angleman and Hetfield Factions—F C Lounsbury May be Candidate for Collector or Mayor—Is Considered a Strong Man on the Ticket.

In the heat of the municipal election that is now close at hand, the usual political affiliations are seemingly dropped in a great many instances and it is difficult to tell just where anybody stands. One thing is certain, the regular Republican ticket will appear as usual. There is also little reason to doubt that a Citizens' ticket will make its appearance in time for election. Just at present, the Citizens' movement can be considered a rather uncertain quantity, it's liable to spring up at any moment and sweep things before it. The majority of the independent voters are holding back, however, to see just who is going to be nominated and on that will depend the direction of their support.

There are a host of names that have been mentioned for the various nominations on the Citizens' ticket, and new booms spring up every day. The fewest are, perhaps, for the Mayoralty nomination, as it is clearly recognized that it will take a man of much strength to overcome the usual Republican majority. Just now, the name of Former Postmaster John M. Hetfield comes to the front with suggestive prominence. A staunch Democrat, he has many friends in both parties as well as among the independent voters. He is a Plainfield business man and is well up in municipal affairs.

Out of the dozen names mentioned for the Citizens' nomination for City Judge, that of Former Judge W. A. Coddington seems in the lead. The factions supporting Winfield S. Angleman and Councilman Walter L. Hetfield are said to be at a dead-lock, and the candidacy of the ex-Judge will be pushed as a compromise measure. His general popularity and his wonderful run when a candidate before cause a belief among his friends that he can successfully run against Councilman William N. Runyon or Justice Newcorn, which ever happens to come up as the Republican nominee.

The nomination for City Collectorship has been a much disputed one and the candidates are decidedly numerous. A "dark horse" has appeared in Fred C Lounsbury It is yet too early to make any definite predictions but Mr. Lounsbury is thought by the leaders of the Citizens' movement to be a valuable man for the ticket and one that should be used if possible. He has long been talked of for Mayor, but has declared it out of the question. If the choice does not fall on J. M. Hetfield, it may be that Mr. Lounsbury can be persuaded to head the Citizens' ticket.

Last year, Eugene M. Laing ran for the office of a member of the Board of Education, but was defeated. This year, his friends want him to try it again, and, they hope, with better success.

The Citizens' movement has not yet reached that stage that aught but hints regarding the ward Councilmanic nominations can be made. In the First ward J. C. Blimm has been prominently mentioned. Over in the Second a strong backing comes from the second district in favor of Alfred Cocks, of Woodland avenue. He has been steadily advocating a Citizens' movement for several months, and stands well in his community. He is a large property owner there.

George W. V. Moy, the druggist, is suggested as a Citizens' candidate in the Third ward. In the Fourth ward there is a likely prospect that Councilman Elmore D. Moffett will stand for re election.

Plans are now being laid to hold a meeting of the joint committees of the Citizens' movement Wednesday evening, when a slate will be drawn up to be submitted to a mass meeting of the Citizens' to be held later.

Football Thanksgiving.

The Thanksgiving Day game of the Plainfield football eleven will be played Thursday morning at 11 o'clock. After considerable discussion the management has come to that decision, which is final. The Plainfield team will be strengthened by Raymond A. McGee and two of the Yale 'varsity substitutes.

THE TRADESMEN PLAN.

THEY WILL TRY TO HAVE TROLLEY EXTENSION MADE.

To Arrange a Conference Between Street Railway Company and the Council—Report on the New Central Depot

The Board of Trade came near not holding a meeting last night, for until 9 o'clock a quorum was not present. But at that hour a number of members came in, and a meeting lasting for about half an hour was then held.

Two resignations were asked for and granted, those of Charles A. Reed and William A. Coddington. One application was made for membership, E. D. Barrett.

The committee on transportation, railroads and telegraphs, consisting of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., John D. Runyon and E. M. French, were instructed to arrange a meeting between the trolley representatives and the Council soon so that both the Council and the trolley company can find out on just what terms the spur to the 'Plains can be laid. The Board of Trade, being anxious to have the extension built, are going to find out exactly where the hitch is, and just what the company will do, and just what the Council will accept.

The committee on the new railroad depot reported that they have arranged for a conference with the Central Railroad officials some day next week. Two or three dates have already been set, but for some reason had to be broken. The committee on stations consists of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., E M. Laing, E. M. French, Chas. H. Hand, J. F. Hubbard, J. D. Runyon, W. A. Woodruff, D. C. Ivins, George Kyte, A. L. Pope and R. A. Meeker.

MET THE OLD MEMBERS.

INTERESTING SERVICES HELD BY TRINITY ENDEAVORERS.

Meeting Led By Mrs. F. E. Woodruff—Number of State and County Officers Present—A Handsome Display.

An interesting and somewhat unique Christian Endeavor meeting was held last evening in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed church, when a Thanksgiving service and reunion of the former members of the society since its organization, about thirteen years ago, was held under the direction of the prayer-meeting committee, of which Miss Ella C. Benedict is the chairman.

The service was led by Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, while Mrs. E. E. Anthony presided at the piano. There was a very large attendance, including many former members. From a number of former members who could not be present, letters were read showing that they had not lost interest in the welfare of the society. The meeting throughout was a very helpful one and will long be remembered by everyone present.

Among those present were State, county and local officers of the society, including F. G. Williams, of Rahway, president of the Union County Union; E. E. Anthony, treasurer of the State Union; Miss Florence G. Hawkins, president Plainfield Local Union; A. A. Lake, of Dunellen, second vice-president Plainfield Local Union.

One very encouraging feature of the reunion was the handsome display of fruits and vegetables, which were brought in abundance by the young people. Over the pulpit desk there was arranged an arch and a portion of the fruits and vegetables were displayed therefrom. It presented an attractive sight. The members of the society will distribute the gifts among the poor of the church. The arrangement of the fruit and vegetable display was in charge of the flower committee of the society which is composed of Miss Gertrude Tier, Miss Beulah Waters, Miss Lizzie Denckiau, Miss Florence Smalley, Miss Louise Fisher, Miss Nellie McGinnis and Miss Bessie Martin.

APPLICATION TO COUNCIL.

HEARING ON THE APPLICATION SET DOWN FOR DECEMBER 9TH.

D. C. Ivins is Heard in the Matter of the Sewer Assessments—A Lively Discussion Over the Police Ordinance—Councilman Hetfield Says That Patrolmen Don't Want It—Storm Sewer.

The adjourned meeting of the City Council last evening was a quiet affair, owing to the holding of the Republican primaries. It was after the hour when the meeting was called to order, and there was not a great deal of important business considered. Some of the members came in late, having previously attended the primaries. Mr. Barrows moved, after the reading of the minutes, that the regular order of business be suspended so that the report of the commissioners on assessment for sewage could be received and considered. After Clerk MacMurray read the official notice for such action, President Baker gave all an opportunity to speak for or against the confirmation of the report.

D C. Ivins was present and had a few words to say regarding the assessment of $25 on the property at 321 Hillside avenue. An assessment was levied in 1896 and on March 4th, 1897, it was paid. The sewer was extended by this property some thirty or forty feet, so as to install a flush tank. As it is at present the sewer is no benefit to the property in question. The sewer was located in Webster place, and Mr. Ivins made a connection to it. He is now assessed $25 for the sewer that has been run through Hillside avenue, which he claims is of no benefit, and he asked the Council to remove the second assessment.

There were no other persons present who desired to be heard, and on Mr. Barrows' motion the commissioners' report was read by the clerk.

At the conclusion of the reading of the report, Mr. Barrows made a few remarks regarding Mr. Ivins' statements. He expressed the opinion that Mr. Ivins is getting off cheap by paying the $25 on the Hillside avenue assessement. He said that several residents on that avenue wanted the sewer, and it was granted.

Mr. Ivins took exception to the remarks by Mr. Barrows, and stated that a majority of the owners did not want the sewer on Hillside avenue, in fact several of the property owners desired to remonstrate to the Council against its introduction in the street. He said that he thought it unfair to directly assess twice one piece of property, and it seemed according to Mr Borrows, that the Council desired to squeeze out of him $25.

Mr. Hetfield, Mr. Buckle and Mr. Runyon thought it unfair to assess Mr. Ivins twice and favored a remittance of the $25, while Mr. VanHerwerden expressing the same opinion offered a resolution that the whole report of the commissioners be referred to the street committee, for further consideration, and that they report at the next meeting.

Bids for the macadamizing of East Ninth street, East Sixth street and Franklin place, were at this time received. A. I & N. B Smalley's bid was, East Ninth street, 53 cents; East Sixth street, 51 cents; Franklin place, 50 cents. David Bowden bid 55 cents for East Sixth and Ninth streets and Franklin place. C. M. Meeker bid 52½ cents for Franklin place; 57 cents for East Sixth street, and 59 cents for East Ninth street. Samuel A. Richardson, of Dunellen, bid 83 cents for East Sixth street; 81 cents for East Ninth street; 81 cents for Franklin place. All bids were according to specifications and were per running foot. They were all referred to the street committee, they to report at the next meeting.

At the request of residents on the south side of Central avenue near Seventh street, a crosswalk was granted. The walk is needed very much.

At this stage of proceeding the Plainfield Street Railway Company, at the request of the Board of Trade and a large number of the leading merchants of the city, petitioned the Council for a franchise to extend their tracks as proposed sometime ago in the east end of the city. The petition was received and referred to the street and sewer committee, and later Mr Barrows offered a resolution setting Friday evening, December, 9th, as a time when a public hearing will be given for or against the trolley extension.

Mr. Hetfield of the laws and ordinance committee reported on the matter of the county trolley. He stated that the papers referred to the committee were so indefinite that the committee had nothing to report regarding them. On his motion they were received and filed.

At this time the Council engaged in a discussion regarding the police ordinance, which has been laid on the table a number of times. The discussion arose when Mr. Buckle called the ordinance from the table and moved that it be placed on its first reading.

Mr. Hetfield stated that he had seen a number of the members of the police force, especially the patrolmen, and had learned that it was not at their request that the ordinance was introduced, that they had told him it would be of no benefit to them. He had learned, however, that the officers of the force who belong to another organization, were urging the enforcement of the ordinance. He even went so far as to state that members of the Patrolmen's Benefit Association had requested him to ask the Council to appoint a committee of two to confer with a similar committee from the Association for the purpose of discussing the ordinance, and Mr. Hetfield moved that that committee be the Police Board. In connection with that motion he moved that the ordinance be laid on the table and that the board report on the matter at a future meeting.

This motion was adopted and Mr. Barrows amended the motion so that the report will be received at the first meeting in December, when the ordinance will be taken up again.

Regarding the ordinance, Mr. Buckle spoke. He said that it is his idea to place the police force out of the control of political influence. He thought that during the past year Plainfield had been well governed, not that he wanted to take credit to himself as a member of the police committee, for he thought Mr. Barrows was entitled to the credit. There had been fewer charges against the force, and he was sure that the citizens of Plainfield would approve of the adoption of the ordinance. It has nothing to do with police pensions, and there is no political influence about it.

Mr. Hetfield agreed with Mr. Buckle in some respects, but he did not believe that there is a man on the police force who feels insecure unless he wants the ordinance passed.

Mr. Hetfield stated that he understood that an officer of the department had sent patrolmen to Mr. Buckle to urge the adoption of the ordinance, but he was sure that the majority of the patrolmen desired further consideration on the subject.

In conclusion Mr. Hetfield said, by way of explanation, that he had not been holding up the Park avenue storm sewer improvement, as published in the News, and Mr. Barrows vindicated Mr Hetfield by stating that Mr. Hetfield had not worked against it. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned.

THE ROYAL BLUE LIMITED.

Fine Train Service That Now Passes Through Plainfield.

The "Royal Blue Limited," the new train service inaugurated last Sunday by the B and O. R. R. Company, is styled by experts to be the finest train service in the world. The cars and equipment, fresh from the Pullman Company's factory, is thoroughly up to date and cannot be excelled. Last Saturday officials of the company received guests and members of the press at Jersey City, where every courtesy was shown. A sumptuous dinner was also served in the dining car.

The train is made up entirely of Pullman chair and dining cars. The first run on Sunday was an ideal one, the trip being made in five hours, as scheduled. The train on both trips was filled with passengers, who seemed to know at once a good thing. One of the train crew is Frank Webster, of Duer street, who is baggagemaster. He makes a trip from Philadelphia to Jersey City.

The new train bids fair to become very popular with a good class of people, who can take advantage of this superior service.

Birthday Anniversary.

Yesterday was W. R. Mattox's sixty-second birthday, and it was made a very pleasant time for him indeed. At the meeting of Howell Division, Sons of Temperance, last night, genial Bob was called upon for a recitation and gave "Pictures on the Floor." Afterwards he was called up and presented by Benjamin Hand with a package of silk handkerchiefs made by the ladies. Coffee and cake were then brought in and a good time was enjoyed.

—Tomorrow evening there will be an important church business meeting held at the First Baptist church after the prayer meeting service.

RUNYON IN THE LEAD FOR CITY JUDGESHIP.

Second and Third Ward Delegations Will Support Him.

HAS THIRTEEN VOTES NOW.

LACKS BUT ONE TO GIVE HIM MAJORITY IN CONVENTION.

First Ward Delegates Favored DeMeza—Probable That Runyon Will Get the Necessary One Out of the Five—They Are Not Pledged — Justice Newcorn Gets Solid Delegation in Fourth Ward.

Now that the Republican primaries are over and the delegates to the city convention elected, the uncertainty in the race for the nomination for City Judge is beginning to assume more definite shape. While the race is not yet run, it can fairly be said that William N. Runyon is in the lead.

The delegations elected in the Second and Third wards are out-and-out Runyon men. The Second ward has six votes in the city convention and the Third seven, making thirteen votes that Mr. Runyon is certain to receive. The Fourth ward will support Judge Newcorn in his candidacy with its nine votes. The five delegates from the First ward are unpledged, and now both sides are trying to secure them.

There are twenty-seven delegates to the city convention, and without any help from the First ward Councilman Runyon has within one of a majority of the votes. The First ward delegation elected is reported to be composed of Judge DeMeza men. It seems very probable that the present Judge will not try for re-election, in which case these delegates are left without a choice. The friends of Mr. Runyon are confident that they can secure at least one First ward delegate, which is all that is needed to give Mr. Runyon the nomination. Mr. Newcorn, on the contrary, must capture the entire delegation to win.

CHANGE IN MAIL DELIVERY.

Delay of One Hour for a Few and Gain of Several Hours by Many.

Postmaster Elias Bird has made a change in the delivery of the morning mail, which it is hoped will please the great majority of people who live just outside of the central business portion of the city. Heretofore there have been two early morning deliveries in the business portion, one at 7 o'clock and the other at 8:30.

But this plan, followed out, makes it impossible for the carriers to deliver the 8:30 mail to those living outside the business portion until 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and a great many complaints have been made by these folks. To remedy this Mr. Bird has put off the delivery of the 8:30 morning mail one hour but in this way has made it possible for it to be delivered all over the city. A few of the business men may be disappointed, but the satisfaction which will be expressed by the great majority will more than make it up.

GOT THEIR MONEY BACK.

Dr. Bondy's Lawyer Settled With Plainfielders Who Were Swindled.

John Keeley, Robert Guttridge and Joseph Blatz, who went to Jersey City yesterday to have Dr. Bondy brought here to answer to the charge of swindling them out of various sums of money, came back last night without their man, but with something better —their money.

Bondy's lawyer consented to pay their claims in full, if they would not prosecute the man, and this they agreed to do. Keeley's claim was for $24, but he demanded $7 more for trouble and worry it had caused him. He got it. Guttridge claimed $50 and Joseph Blatz $65.

Citizens' in the Second Ward

There was a gathering of the supporters of the Citizens' movement in the Second ward last evening at the store Hezekiah Hand on South avenue. Leonard Spangenberg was made chairman, and Alfred Cocks secretary. The committee of ten to confer with the other ward committees was partially appointed. It will be completed today. No action was taken aside from discussing the issues of the coming election.

Sent to Industrial Home.

Kate Morris, colored, for a great many years a servant in the family of Chief T O Doane, has been taken to the City Industrial Home, and it is quite likely that she will be taken to an asylum. Of late her mental condition has been gradually getting worse and Chief Doane was forced to have her taken to the Home.

FINAL TERMS TO SPAIN

Cession of the Philippine Islands Demanded.

STATION IN THE CAROLINES

Twenty Million Dollars Offered in Return.

An Answer Wanted by November 28. Refusal of Senor Montero Rios to Continue the Negotiations.

Paris, Nov. 22.—The Spanish and American peace commissions met in joint session at two o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Americans declared that the United States must have the entire Philippine archipelago, and, for a treaty cession of the islands, the Americans tendered to Spain twenty million dollars.

November 28 is fixed as the date on which the United States commission desires a definite response to yesterday's propositions and all other subjects in issue here.

The Americans refuse to arbitrate article three of the peace protocol bearing upon the future disposition and control of the Philippine archipelago.

It was declared that it was the purpose of the United States to maintain in the Philippine islands an "open door" to the world's commerce.

On the terms named the United States proposes a mutual relinquishment of all claims for indemnity, national or personal, subsequent to the outbreak of the last Cuban insurrection.

It was also announced that the United States desire to treat of the religious freedom of the Caroline islands, as agreed upon between the United States and Spain in 1886, and also of the acquisition of one of the Caroline islands for an American naval station, and of cable landing rights at other places in Spanish jurisdiction, and the revival of certain Spanish-American treaties as heretofore in force.

The memorandum of the American commission embodying the above proposition is long and was not read in full. The vital portions, however, were communicated verbally to the Spanish commissioners in practically these terms.

The fact was cited that, the proposal presented by the American commissioners in behalf of their government for the cession of the Philippines to the United States having been rejected by the Spanish commissioners, and the counter proposal of the latter for the withdrawal of the American forces from the islands and the payment of an indemnity by the United States to Spain having been rejected by the American commissioners, the latter, deeming it essential that the present negotiations, already greatly protracted, should be brought to an early and definite conclusion, now begged to present a new proposition embodying their concessions, which for the sake of peace their government would, under the circumstances, be willing to tender.

The memorandum stated that the government of the United States is unable to modify the proposal heretofore made for the cession of the entire archipelago of the Philippines, but the American commissioners are authorized to offer to Spain, in case the cession should be agreed to, the sum of $20,000,000, to be paid in accordance with the terms to be fixed in the treaty of peace.

The memorandum then states that, it being the policy of the United States to maintain in the Philippines an open door to the world's commerce, the American commissioners are prepared to insert in the treaty now in contemplation a stipulation to the effect that, for a term of years, Spanish ships and merchandise shall be admitted into Philippine ports on the same terms as American ships and merchandise.

The American commissioners are also authorized and are prepared to insert in the treaty, in connection with the cession of territory by Spain to the United States, a provision for the mutual relinquishment of all claims for indemnity, national and individual, of every kind, of the United States against Spain, and of Spain against the United States, that may have arisen since the beginning of the late Cuban insurrection and prior to the conclusion of the treaty of peace.

Next followed the terms nearest approaching to a formal ultimatum to Spain.

The United States commissioners expressed the hope that they might receive from the Spanish commissioners on or before Monday, the 28th day of the present month, definite and final acceptance of the proposals made as to the Philippines, in connection also with the demands as to Cuba, Porto Rico, and the other Spanish islands of the West Indies, and Guam, in the form in which these demands have been provisionally agreed to.

In this event it would be possible for the joint commission to continue its sessions and proceed to the consideration and adjustment of other matters, including those which, as subsidiary and incidental to the principal provisions, should form part of the treaty of peace.

It was at this juncture that the Americans notified the Spaniards that freedom of the Caroline islands, as they desired to treat of the religious freedom of the Caroline islands, as agreed to twelve years ago, also of the release of political prisoners now held by Spain in connection with the insurrections in Cuba and the Philippine islands, also of the taking over of the island of Kusais or Ualan, in the Carolines, for a telegraphic and naval station; also of cable station rights at the other points in Spain's jurisdiction and also of the renewal of certain treaties previously in force between the United States and Spain, and which may have lapsed or been vitiated by war.

After these declarations were made the meeting was adjourned until Wednesday.

The president of the Spanish commission, Senor Montero Rios, afterwards refused to continue the negotiations.

The Soleil, reviewing at length the peace negotiations, says:

"How miserable is the fate of our Spanish neighbors. American rapacity has not left them an inch of the territory they have possessed in America since the time of Columbus, or in Oceania since Magellan. But that is not the worst of their misfortune. Their whole edifice of political economy and administration is going to pieces. Their parliamentary parties, which, moreover, never had strong root, are completely disorganized and no one dares assume the responsibility of power. The present ministry remains because no one wishes to replace it. But it is almost powerless before the ills which threaten the country."

Touching the fate of the Spanish soldiers who are now returning to a life of idleness, the Soleil says:

"If they employ their leisure in conspiring no one can reasonably be astonished."

The Petit Bleu says: "Spain is becoming resigned at the idea of giving the islands up, and the Cortes will understand and approve of the inevitable sacrifice."

The Figaro declares that Spain will give in because she is powerless to do otherwise.

Reported Withdrawal Discredited.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The report of Spain withdrawing from the peace negotiations is discredited at the White House.

It is entirely contrary to dispatches received at the state department yesterday.

There were no dispatches at the state department and had an important occurrence taken place Secretary Hay would have been at once notified.

Everything was proceeding satisfactorily, the dispatches stated, and an agreement would be reached.

The president was not in the least worried over the report, and continued to receive visitors up to 1.30, and then went to work on his message.

Secretary Alger, after getting a copy of the Associated Press bulletin, went over to the White House and read it to the president. This was the first Mr. McKinley knew of it.

A cabinet member stated that he did not believe the story because all official information showed that the negotiations were progressing favorably, and while a final agreement was not expected at once, he thought it would be brought about during the remainder of this week.

He said that in all probability the story was started by an over-zealous correspondent, who, seeing the commissioners break up after a short session, jumped to the conclusion that the Spanish commissioners had withdrawn.

Gen. Schofield's Views.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—Lieutenant General Schofield called on the president at the executive mansion yesterday afternoon. In speaking of the Paris negotiations, the general said:

"I do not believe that Spain will submit except by a display of force by the United States. She cannot afford to, according to her own argument. She has mortgaged the Philippine islands for debt, and they therefore do not belong to her, consequently she cannot place herself in the position of giving away that which she herself has not a clear title to. She will have to be forced, as was the case in Cuba. This is my view of the present situation."

LOSS OF MARIA TERESA.

The Cruiser Abandoned and Rapidly Going to Pieces.

Nassau, N. P., Nov. 22.—The wrecking tug Merritt has arrived here. She reports that the tugs Potomac and Vulcan sailed yesterday from Cat island for Norfolk, Va.

The cruiser Infanta Maria Teresa has been abandoned. She is going to pieces rapidly and her contents are floating out through different places on her sides.

The Court of Inquiry at Norfolk.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 22.—A court of inquiry will convene at this navy yard to determine the officer or officers responsible for abandoning the Maria Teresa off Watling island while being towed from Cuba to Norfolk.

The court, it is said, will also recommend what, if any, proceedings shall be instituted against those responsible.

The court will consist of Captain Benjamin F. Day, who is a member of the examining and retiring boards; Captain John Schouler of the bureau of navigation, Commander B. F. Tilly and Captain Waller of the Marine Corps, the latter to act as judge advocate.

Among those to be examined are those aboard the Vulcan, but as that vessel is still at Cat island, the inquiry may have to be postponed until some future date.

Lieutenant Commander Harris will, no doubt, testify, and also the men on the Leonidas, which vessel was a convoy to the ill fated ship.

Anthracite Mining Activity.

Scranton, Pa., Nov. 22.—Anthracite mining, which has been brisk during the last two months, is now nearly at the height of activity.

There was a considerable hindrance to the production for several weeks on account of the lack of cars, but this trouble has been largely overcome.

The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Company is striving to mine twenty-eight thousand tons a day. The larger part of this company's output is sent to the lakes.

The men working on the coal trains are kept so busy that they make from twelve to sixteen days' overtime each month.

Mexico Surrenders Temple.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—A telegram has been received from the state department from Minister Powell Clayton reporting that the government of Mexico has acceded to the representations of the United States for the surrender to the United States authorities of Temple, the American citizen under arrest at Nogales, Mexico, charged with killing a Mexican in the state of Arizona.

This action on the part of the government of Mexico removes what might have been a cause of considerable friction between the two countries.

Doctors now agree that consumption is curable.
Three things, if taken together, will cure nearly every case in the first stages; the majority of cases more advanced; and a few of those far advanced.
The first is, fresh air; the second, proper food; the third, Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil with hypophosphites.
To be cured, you must not lose in weight, and, if this you must gain. Nothing equals Scott's Emulsion to keep you in good flesh.

GEN. GARCIA IN NEW YORK.

He Heads a Commission Appointed to Give President McKinley Information.

New York, Nov. 22.—Major General Calixto Garcia, until recently commander of the Department of the East of the Cuban army, arrived yesterday from Havana on the steamer Seguranca, at the head of the commission appointed by the military assembly.

Three members of the commission accompanied General Garcia—General Jose Miguel Gomez (not a relative of Maximo Gomez), Colonel Gonzales Lanuza and Lieutenant Colonel J. R. Villalon. General Miguel Sanguilly, the fifth commissioner, arrived in this city two days ago.

There was a great crowd of Cubans and their friends at Pier No. 17 when the Seguranca docked. General Garcia's two sons, Captain Justo Garcia and Ezequiel Garcia, were there to meet their father.

When the tall form of General Garcia appeared at the top of the gang plank the Cubans on the pier set up a rousing cheer and the old campaigner removed his broad-brimmed soft hat with a graceful gesture. He no sooner set his foot on the pier than he was surrounded and embraced by a score of friends and relatives.

General Garcia presented a striking picture. His hair and moustache was as white as snow, and his face is bronzed, bringing out into striking relief the great scar in the center of his forehead, an honorable relic of the ten years' war.

He was dressed in civilian clothes the only sign that his vocation has been one of war rather than peace being the soft campaign hat and a long overcoat which might have belonged to a military uniform.

A crowd of two hundred Cubans, men and women, followed the general off the pier. They did not want to let him get out of their sight. Finally his sons carried him off to his home, No. 165 Lenox avenue, where he will remain until he is ready to go to Washington.

Anti-Cigarette Law Stands.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 22.—The anti-cigarette law passed by the last Tennessee legislature is declared constitutional in an opinion given to the press by Judge Caldwell of the supreme court of the state.

The opinion declares that cigarettes are not legitimate articles of commerce, because they are wholly noxious and deleterious to health, and therefore are not within the provision of the federal constitution protecting legitimate commerce.

Kansas Cattle Dying.

Topeka, Kansas, Nov. 22.—Information comes to the live stock sanitary board that cattle in many sections of Central Kansas are dying from eating frostbitten oats.

The voluntary growth in the fields was very rank, and whenever stock was turned on the oat stubble death resulted.

Scores of cattle have died from the poison and the live stock sanitary board is warning the farmers against the danger.

Blizzard in Kansas.

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 22.—Kansas is experiencing a genuine western blizzard. Sleet began falling shortly before midnight Sunday, which later on turned to snow. A high wind is blowing, drifting the snow badly.

Trains on all the railroads are being delayed.

The thermometer has fallen over thirty degrees in twenty-four hours. Cattle are suffering severely and in some localities the coal supply is insufficient.

Dewey Says Keep the Whole.

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 22.—President Brown of Norwich University has received a personal letter from Admiral Dewey under date of October 3, in which the admiral says:

"I trust the entire archipelago will be retained by the United States. Any other arrangement will lead to no end of trouble."

Rush Orders on Warships.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 21.—Rush orders for the war vessels now being repaired at the Charlestown navy yard have been received at that place.

Three vessels, the double turreted monitor Amphitrite, the cruiser Detroit and the gunboat Castine were specially mentioned in the order.

Bits of News.

The war investigating commission has decided to visit Montauk Point on Wednesday.

The business section of the town of Perry, Ia., suffered a fire loss of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars on Monday morning.

Attorney General Griggs has decided that a person may draw money on a check without a stamp, provided the check be payable to himself from his own funds.

Fire in John P. Squire & Company's lard manufactory at Cambridge, Mass., caused a property loss of eighty thousand dollars and many firemen were injured.

Well, Mr. Merchant-who-thinks-of-advertising, this is only one of the many corners in THE DAILY PRESS—it isn't the best located one, either; we can give you better—and if this attracts your attention in our endeavor to tell you how good advertising will get you a hearing before the purchasing public, doesn't common sense teach you that if you were having people reading your trade story instead of you're reading our argument about it, that it would be better for your business.

THE DAILY PRESS reaches the purchasing public that makes the profits for the merchant.

We can give you big or little space—but in advertising it isn't always economy to be sparing in your appropriation.

PREPARING FOR CENSUS

Believed That the Bill Will Soon Be Taken Up.

HYDE MAY SUPERINTEND

The Present Statistician of the Agricultural Department Likely to Have Charge of the Work. The Twelfth Census Not Likely to Include All the Classifications Contained in the Eleventh.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—Although the appropriation bills will engage the attention of the House during the first few weeks of the coming session, it is the general opinion here that a bill authorizing the taking of the twelfth census will be under consideration before the New Year.

This matter was put off from day to day during the last session and despite the urgent appeals of those interested in the work, no action was taken by both houses on it.

During the closing days of that session, however, a bill directing the compilation of the next census and making provision for its administration, passed the Senate and went over to the House.

Speaker Reed appointed a large and powerful special committee, with Congressman Hopkins of Illinois as its chairman, to take charge of the Senate bill. Before this committee could be called together, however, Congress had adjourned.

Chairman Hopkins has given notice that he intends to get his associates in session early in December for the purpose of considering the Senate measure, and the chances are excellent for its passage by both branches of Congress in January or February.

If this programme is followed out, the president will have an opportunity to appoint the superintendent and start the census work as soon as the preliminaries were begun about ten years ago.

The last act authorizing the taking of the census was approved by the president March 1, 1889, and the appointment of Robert Porter as superintendent was made on April 20.

President McKinley asked Mr. Porter to take charge of the work this census, but he declined.

It is believed to be practically settled that the twelfth census will not include all the classifications of statistics compiled for the eleventh census. There was no end of charges that unnecessary work was done ten years ago, and that much of the data gathered at great expense was perfectly useless.

There were innumerable divisions of the various branches, and many of these are to be dropped with the coming work.

There are already a number of candidates for superintendent in the field, prominent among whom is John Hyde, statistician of the agricultural department.

Mr. Hyde was a chief of division in the last census and has practically entire charge of collecting the population figures. He outlined the system to be followed by the enumerators in the big cities and in the country districts, and planned the classification of the returns at the headquarters in Washington.

Mr. Hyde is from Nebraska, and it is understood that he has the solid support of the senatorial and congressional delegation from that state in his candidacy for the position of superintendent of the next census. He has also been assured that he will be indorsed by a large number of other western senators and representatives for the place.

Marsh Wants to Plead Guilty.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—The trial of Gideon W. Marsh, the former president of the wrecked Keystone Bank, will probably begin on next Monday.

The November term of the United States district court began yesterday and there was a chance that Marsh would be arraigned to plead to the five indictments against him, a possibility that drew a very large crowd to the court house.

There is no doubt that the returned fugitive desires to plead guilty if he can be assured of a light sentence. The maximum punishment for Marsh's crime is twenty-two years' imprisonment. The minimum is eleven years. If Marsh will consent to divulge the names of the men who profited by the Keystone Bank frauds and who have never been punished, it is possible that he may be let off with a light sentence.

A Fire Thirteen Miles Long.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 22.—A special from Macomb, Mo., says: The largest and most destructive conflagration that has swept the Ozark mountains since 1884 is now circumscribing this town for miles north of and parallel with the Memphis railroad.

The autumn heavy foliage has rapidly fallen since frost and the fire is supposed to have been started from sparks from freight engines yesterday afternoon.

A scope of country thirteen miles long is in flames, miles of fences, orchards, plantations, farms and dry pasture fields, stocked with cattle and other animals, and many old settlers' homes lie directly in the path of the fire. The residents find themselves totally unable to check the spread of the flames.

For a New Silk Plant.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 22.—The silk firm of J. B. Martin & Co., of Lyons, France, has substantially decided to establish a large branch at Norwich, Conn.

The company has a capital of five million dollars and employs three thousand hands.

A town meeting at Norwich on Saturday night last voted to relieve the projected enterprise from local taxation for ten years and to give one thousand dollars to a local construction company which is to be formed to buy water power and supply a plant.

OCCUPATION OF CUBA.

The Start Not to be Made This Week, For Lack of Transports.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The war department has definitely given up its purpost of starting the army of occupation off to Cuba this week. The trouble is lack of transports. This seems to dispose of any chance of the transfer of formal possession of the island on December 1, but it is believed that New Year's Day will see all Cuba under the flag of the United States.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—The war department has found that it is impracticable to occupy Cienfuegos before the first of January next, and Major General Wilson, commanding the First Corps, which was designated to occupy Cienfuegos, has been directed to make such disposition of the troops that were about to sail as in his judgment will best serve the interests of the army.

A short time ago a brigade under command of General Snyder was ordered to be placed in readiness for immediate service, and occupation at Cienfuegos.

Since that time it has been found that there are now nineteen thousand Spanish troops at Cienfuegos, and that more Spanish troops are to be sent there; that the Spanish garrison cannot be removed in time for occupancy by the American troops on or about December 1.

This was the date originally fixed when General Snyder should go to Cienfuegos.

Besides the nineteen thousand troops originally at this place, it has been found necessary to send a large number of troops from Havana on account of the disturbances and mutiny which have taken place.

The preparations thus far made do not indicate that the United States authorities are in any great hurry about sending troops to Cuba.

No ships for transports have been assembled at Savannah, and no orders have been issued for the quartermaster's department to send transports to southern points for the embarkation of troops to Cuba.

CLOSED DOOR IN PORTO RICO.

Expressions of British and Canadian Disappointments.

London, Nov. 22.—Ottawa cablegrams speak of the keen Canadian disappointment at the news that the establishment of American authority over Porto Rico has been followed by the adoption of what is called a "mediaeval navigation law."

This disappointment is fully shared here among the warmest friends of Anglo-American co-operation.

There is the highest reason for repeating that an American expansion which means hidebound protectionism in American colonies has no attractions, but quite the reverse, for the great bulk of Englishmen.

Such methods must effectually kill that Anglo-American alliance of which the British ministers have made themselves warm advocates.

No responsible, seriously minded Englishman will support an alliance so contrary to English traditions and political and commercial freedom.

The Much-Kissed Mate.

New York, Nov. 22.—Osborne W. Deignan, chief boatswain's mate on the auxiliary cruiser Resolute, has returned from his trip to his native place of Stewart, Ia.

He confirms the story that when he arrived at Stewart there were two hundred yound ladies lined up to kiss him. He survived the ordeal and was present at a banquet given in his honor at Des Moines.

A resolution was unanimously approved at the dinner to the effect that the state officers, many of whom attended the dinner, endeavor to get Deignan an appointment to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and that two thousand dollars be appropriated to attain that end.

There may be some difficulty in this, as Deignan is twenty-one years old, while the age limit for entrance into the academy is nineteen years.

On this occasion Deignan presented his boatswain's whistle to the club.

Will Welcome Our Fleet.

London, Nov. 22.—In consequence of rumors that an American squadron of warships is to visit Portsmouth, the mayor of that place has written to the United States embassy promising a cordial welcome.

Mr. Henry White, United States charge d'affaires, thanked the mayor of Portsmouth for his courteous letter, which, he said, he will not fail to transmit to Washington.

Mr. White, however, added: "I have not yet received information of the visit, but my government will not fail to be gratified by the knowledge that such a welcome awaits our squadron in the event it comes."

Dawes Treaty Rejected.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—Secretary Bliss has received a dispatch from Indian Inspector Wright in the Indian territory, announcing the rejection of the Dawes commission treaty by the Creek Indian nation.

Inspector Wright says that the count of the returns in the Creek elections has just been completed and that the treaty is defeated by the majority of 152 votes.

He added that there was no fraud shown, but that the chief opened the returns before counting, according to the tribal laws. There was no disorder at the polls.

Col. Hood Occupies Holguin.

San Francisco, Nov. 22.—Word has been received from Colonel Hood of the evacuation of Holguin.

He has taken possession of the city and appointed Colonel Rodriguez, a well known Cuban, as alcaide.

Colonel Hood says that the city is very much neglected and that in some places the grass in the streets is four feet high.

Post Diggers Found Gold.

Steubenville, Ohio, Nov. 22.—Gold has been discovered on the property of the Riverside Iron Company. The find was made while digging postholes.

If the same relative yield continues the property will be developed.

WILL FIGHT POLYGAMY

Congressman - Elect Roberts, of Utah, May Lose His Seat.

SAID TO HAVE THREE WIVES

It is Claimed He Violated Edmunds's Act and Can be Tried When He Reaches the Capital, Bitter Contest On. Churches of All Denominations Will Aid.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The case of Brigham H. Roberts, member-elect from Utah, is attracting much attention here among congressmen, and when he arrives his course beyond doubt will settle whether he is eligible to a seat.

In the District of Columbia the Edmunds law in relation to polygamy is in existence, and Roberts could be arrested and tried if he brings more than one wife with him.

The only way he could be unseated on the charge of being a polygamist would be to prove the fact.

The first course would be to try him under the Edmunds act. If he is convicted, of course Congress can easily get rid of him; but leading members of the House say it must first be proven that he has three wives before anything can be done.

The contest, however, will be brought into the House and will be fought bitterly.

During the campaign it was intimated that, if elected, Mr. Roberts would never get his seat.

The Mormon Church, powerful as it is in Utah, has enemies all the more bitter, perhaps, because of their helplessness, and it is announced that they will support the Populist candidate, Mr. Warren Foster, who ran against Mr. Roberts in his contest for the seat.

The contest will be based solely on the charge that Mr. Roberts is a polygamist and accordingly a violator of the Edmunds law.

It is assumed by the entiles of Utah, as they are called by the Mormons, that in this fight against Mormonism, as represented by Mr. Roberts, the churches of every denomination will lend the aid of their far reaching influence.

AS TO PEACE JUBILEES.

Why the President Objects to Premature Rejoicing.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The White House officials corroborate the press dispatches stating that the president had requested the peace celebration committee at Atlanta to change the form of its expression from peace jubilee fo a celebration of the victory of our arms.

The reason for this request is the uncertainty of peace negotiations. Even should a treaty of peace be signed, it could not be ratified until after Christmas.

Moreover, there are indications that there may be other troubles pursuant upon the peace treaty which would make a peace jubilee celebration a little premature.

It is understood that the president regretted the various peace jubilees before peace has actually been accomplished, but that in the case of Chicago and Philadelphia they had proceeded too far for his suggestion to be of any avail.

It is said here that the Atlanta people have expressed their willingness for the change and that the president is very much gratified.

To Occupy Cienfuegos January 1.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.—The occupation of Cienfuegos, Cuba, which was expected to take place within the next few weeks, has been postponed until January 1.

A dispatch has been sent to Major General James H. Wilson, at Macon, Ga., notifying him of the change of plan, as follows:

"It is found impracticable to occupy Cienfuegos before January 1. In view of the altered conditions, the secretary of war directs that you give such orders concerning brigade designated for this service as will meet the situation.

"H. C. CORBIN."

Senator Quay Indicted.

Philadelphia, Nov. 22.—The grand jury has presented to the county court true bills of indictment against United States Senator M. S. Quay, his son, Richard R. Quay, and ex-State Treasurer Benjamin J. Haywood, charged with conspiring unlawfully to use public money deposited in the People's Bank of this city for the purchase and sale of stocks and for other purposes not authorized by law.

John S. Hopkins, former cashier of the People's Bank, now dead, is named as a party to the conspiracy.

Vote of Soldiers Received.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The votes of four companies of the First Provisional regiment, stationed at Honolulu, have reached the secretary of state by mail. The remaining companies of this organization, as well as the Forty-seventh regiment and the First United States engineers, doing duty at Porto Rico, still have to send in their votes.

22d Free To-day.

New Rochelle, Nov. 22.—The Twenty-second regiment of New York volunteers will be mustered out of the service of the United States to-day. It is expected that the men will reach New York city about two o'clock in the afternoon and will march to their armory, where they will turn in their arms and equipment.

Mustering Out Eighth Ohio.

Wooster, Ohio, Nov. 22.—The mustering out of the Eighth Ohio volunteer infantry, "the president's own," began yesterday. The muster out will include 1,106 officers and men, over $135,000 being required to pay the regiment off.

Cotton Workers on Strike.

Augusta, Ga., Nov. 22.—Three thousand operatives in the cotton mills here struck yesterday on account of a reduction in wages.

NOTICE.

The subscribers, commissioners of adjustment in and for the city of Plainfield, appointed by the circuit court of the county of Union, on the twenty-ninth day of May, A. D. 1897, for the purpose of performing the duties and exercising the powers conferred by chapter CXII of the laws of 1896, entitled "An Act concerning the settlement and collection of arrearages of unpaid taxes, assessments and water rates or water rents, in cities of this state, and imposing and levying a tax, assessment and lien in lieu and instead of such arrearages, and to enforce the payment thereof, and to provide for the sale of lands subjected to future taxation and assessment", passed March 30, 1896, and the amendments thereof and supplements thereto, having filed a report of their proceedings and of the assessments, charges and liens fixed and certified by them, together with a map on which the lands so assessed and charged have been indicated by block and lot numbers, and said court having on the 19th day of October, A. D. 1898, ordered that said report and all matters touching and concerning the same be referred back to said commissioners to reconsider the subject matter thereof, and that the said report be corrected and revised by said commissioners, or a new report be made by them in the premises to said court without unnecessary delay pursuant to the statute in such cases made and provided;

Notice is hereby given that the subscribers, commissioners aforesaid will meet at the Council Chamber, No. 109 Park avenue, in the city of Plainfield, on the 19th day of December, A. D. 1898, at the hour of two o'clock in the afternoon of that day, to hear, either personally or by counsel, all persons interested in the re-assessment or adjustment under said act, of the taxes, assessments or water rates in arrears in the said city.

Dated Nov. 15th, 1898.

LET US ARM YOU!
It's quite necessary, because while Uncle Sam is settling scores with the Spaniards you're bound to have a little brush at home at the same time, and there's nothing like being ready for emergencies. Until you can sign a perpetual truce with sun, wind and storm, your house and other buildings will need to be fortified with paint, and ours are like a 20-inch chilled steel armor.

The "Curfew Bell."

Mrs. S. R. Krom, as secretary of the W. C. T. U., writes to The Daily Press to say that it was not the Woman's Town Improvement Association, but the W. C. T. U. that sent the petition to the Common Council for the enactment of a "curfew bell" ordinance in order to keep immature children off the streets after certain hours of the night.

Mrs. Krom also encloses pamphlets describing what has been accomplished by the "curfew bell" in western cities where it has been tried. A partial summary of what the "curfew" ordinance will do is as follows:

First—It is absolutely free from any politeal and denom national feature.

Second—It costs nothing to enforce it.

Third—It improves parents and children morally and socially, builds up homes, and increases the attendance in churches, Sabbath-schools, and day-schools, and is a complete remedy against truancy in the public schools.

Fourth—It lessens commitments to the station-house, jails, and reform schools in cities where enforced, 60 per cent.

Fifth—It will lessen convicts in the penitentiary in the same proportion and protect the trades of honest mechanics.

Sixth—Police officials say it will save thousands of boys from becoming tramps and rescue a multitude of young girls from lives of shame.

Seventh—The curfew prevents accidents and fatalities to youths who willfully board street cars after night.

Eighth—Cities with curfew have no bands of boy robbers.

Ninth—Where cities have the curfew, young hoodlums no longer raid empty houses and appropriate the brass and copper fittings or destroy windows.

Tenth—Families with children are leaving cities and towns and leave vacant houses where there is no curfew, expressly to avoid the influence of neighbors' children who are on the street at all hours of the night.

Eleventh—Superintendents of reform schools certify that the curfew if honestly enforced will prevent commitments to their schools.

Jersey Grows Healthier.

According to the advance sheets of the annual report of the State Board of Health, New Jersey is growing healthier and its past glories as a Gretna Green are gone forever. The total number of marriages in the State during the last twelve months is 13,213, as against 18,171 in 1897. This shrinkage is due to the passage of the Lloyd law, which provides that non-residents of the State who come here to be married must procure a license. The decrease is principally in the number of non-resident marriages. Last year 4,090 couples crossed the State line to wed. This year only 262 couples from other States were made man and wife here. Last year's record shows that the Camden ministers alone married 4,494 couples while this year they have married only 824 couples.

The eleven Republican Assemblymen-elect of Essex county have decided to support John Kean, of Elizabeth, for United States Senator. In the organization of the House the support of the delegation will be given to these candidates: Speaker, David O. Watkins, of Gloucester; clerk, Thomas H. Jones, of Essex; sergeant-at-arms, John B. Flavell, of Essex; assistant engrossing clerk, Elmer Freeman, of Essex; assistant to clerk, Herbert H. Matts, of Essex.

Healthy opposition between two factions in a political party generally results in an improvement of its working forces as a whole, and if this rule works well with the Republicans they as a party probably do not regard the contests that took place in the primaries last night as bad omens. This is the first time in several years that opposition to what is commonly called "the machine" has developed with such formidable strength, but as is very often the case in contests between "regular" and dissatisfied party members, "the machine" will still continue to grind at the same old stand.

If Spain will only agree to the President's ultimatum on or before Thursday, what a glorious Thanksgiving it would be. With the peace terms finally settled on Thanksgiving and the smashing of Cevera's fleet on the Fourth of July, these two holidays would become the most notable days of American history.

In order to have their nominations printed on regular ballots, furnished by the city, the Citizens' will have to have the acceptances of their candidates, together with their petitions, filed with the City Clerk by Saturday.

As anticipated, the application for a trolley franchise bobbed up serenely last night.

THE HORSE HAS HIS DAY.

This is the season when the horse is the idol before which the fashionables of this country lay their offerings. The New York Horse Show has come to be one of the great events of the year; but other American cities are not far behind it in this respect.

WHAT THE SHEARS FIND.

Editorial Comment From Other Papers of Interest in Plainfield.

Assemblyman Murray, of Union county, is opposed to the re-election of Speaker Watkins on the ground that as Mr. Watkins will continue as Acting Governor until the inauguration of Governor-elect Voorhees, his re-election to the Speaker's chair will produce embarrassing complications. Mr. Murray directs attention to the fact that the first duty of both Assembly and Senate, after organization, is to appoint a committee to notify the Governor that they have organized, and he wants to know how the Senate committee could notify Mr. Watkins while he was in the Speaker's chair, or how that official could appoint a committee to notify himself. Unless Mr. Murray can find some complications more serious than these, he will hardly win many to his side in opposition to the Speaker's re election. There is nothing to prevent Mr. Watkins, immediately after taking the chair, from calling some other member to preside in his stead temporarily, and in the meanwhile he can retire to the executive chamber and receive the formal notification of organization by the committees of the two Houses.—Newark News.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The telephone wires will not be placed under ground on Park avenue until the office is removed to that avenue, which will be early next year.

—Henry J. Wierenga, the popular furniture and freight expressman, has received the contract to deliver the tiling pipes to go under ground for the electric light company's wires. Mr. Wierenga will give all orders prompt attention that is left for him at Blair's, 126 Park avenue.

—Miss Holmes, formerly of 220 East Front street, has removed to more commodious rooms at 440 West Front street, where she has resumed her scientific massage treatment by appointment. Miss Holmes can furnish the best of reference from both leading physicians and families.

—At the meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club held yesterday afternoon in the Casino, Miss Harriet R Shreve gave her paper on Current Events in place of Miss Elizabeth R. Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

"Infatuation," a four-act society drama from the pen of Howard P. Taylor, was the opening piece presented last night at Music Hall by the Burrill Comedy Company. A packed house greeted the company at their initial performance and it is putting it mildly to say that everyone present was well pleased. Miss LauraHulbert, in the leading role, was appreciated. She is a woman of the highest intellectual qualities. She speaks the most beautiful English of any actress on the stage. Miss Hulbert is a thoroughly schooled dramatic star. In pathetic parts she can invariably touch the heart of the auditor, in the subtle variations of feminine character. Her costumes were gorgeous. The scenery used by the company was all new and beautiful. The company is well balanced and contains performers of high standard. The specialties were very good. The play will be repeated Wednesday matinee by special request. Tonight "Old Glory," a patriotic melo-drama, which deals lightly with the Cuban question.

* * * * *

Marie Wainwright will appear at Music Hall early next month in "Shall We Forgive Her," under the direction of Jacob Litt. The play is one of unusual dramatic strength. It tells a story of absorbing heart interest and holds the mirror up to nature. To present "Shall We Forgive Her" in a perfect manner, Manager Litt has selected an exceptionally strong company. Miss Marie Wainwright personates the heroine, a character that requires great dramatic ability, in a faultless manner. The accessories and scenic adjuncts are in keeping with Manager Litt's well-known prodigality in this direction.

To the enterprise, energy and lavish expenditure of Mr. Proctor in the effort to give the best vaudeville shows in America there seems to be no limit. Not content with giving his patrons the creme de la creme of the dramatic and operatic stars he now turns his attention to spectacular productions, a series of which will be given at his spacious uptown house, the Pleasure Palace, during the present season, in conjunction with the continuous vaudeville bill. The first on the list was produced last night and is a stirring military and patriotic spectacle entitled, "The Battle of San Juan Hill." To present this grand subject in befitting style, Mr. Proctor has caused the Palace stage to be enlarged, so that it now measures 150 feet in depth, and 75 feet in width—unquestionably the largest stage in the world. There are nearly 200 participants in the spectacle, all of whom were actually in the battle, including members of the splendid Roosevelt Rough Riders, New York's pride the gallant 71st., and the heroic black troops the 9th and 10th U. S. Cavalry. Special scenery has been prepared, all the uniforms and accessories of every kind are correct down to the smallest detail, and the entire production is under the direction of that prince of stage managers, R. A Roberts.

THINGS THAT INTEREST SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN.

Brief and Terse Observations Gathered by Alert Press Reporters to be Perused at the Supper Table at Your Leisure

DUNELLEN

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Dunellen, November 22.—Mayor Brakeley had a scare Saturday night for he thought some sneakthief had gone through his house and made off with a pair of trousers containing $50 in money in one of the pockets. The theft proved to be no theft at all, but this was not until the next morning, when a thorough search for the missing article of apparel was being made. The doctor had a hurrried call during Saturday night, and dressed hurriedly. He missed his trousers and came to the conclusion that a burglar had entered the house and run off with them. A hurried look around showed that nothing else was out of place, hats, coats, etc., all hanging on the rack. Then Dr. Brakeley thought perhaps a sneakthief had been secreted in the house, who had helped himself to the trousers and the money, then walked out of the front door. The doctor could hardly believe this, but as he was in a hurry, he put on another pair and went to his patient. In the morning the trousers were found lying behind a trunk, where they had fallen. The money was all there.

Adam Dealaman and A. N. Randolph returned Saturday night from a four days' hunting trip near Delaware, this State. They brought home plenty of game, among which were a dozen fine quail.

George Trimmer, the conductor, has been put in charge of the new local train which leaves here for New York at 9:08 and reaches Dunellen again at night at 4:43.

The fair held under the auspices of the Epworth League in Apgar's Hall last week, came to a close Saturday night. As near as can be estimated $125 has been made.

Mrs. James Dunham and daughter have returned from a two weeks' visit with Mrs. Dunham's sisters in New Brunswick.

The Central Railroad Company has had a gang of carpenters fixing up the flag houses during the past few days.

Mrs. Josephine Dunham has returned from Brooklyn, where she has been visiting her brother, who is ill.

A large number of people gather at the station every night to see the new fast Washington train go through.

Mr. and Mrs. Terrace J. Ronayne will return from their honeymoon Thursday or Friday of this week.

Fred Sandford and a party from Plainfield spent yesterday hunting in the vicinity of the borough.

Miss Anna Fenner, of Plainfield, spent Sunday with her sister, Mrs. Harry Swackhamer.

I. J. Stites spent Sunday at Scotch Plains, and listened to a sermon by Rev. Mr. Woodruff.

Walter G. Runyon is spending a day or two with Fred Nelson, of Basking Ridge.

Wm. Dunham and wife, of Church street, spent Sunday with relatives in Westfield.

Mrs. William E. Terry and Mrs. Alvah Gray are spending the day in New York.

Miss Edna Baldwin has a new wheel.

In its advanced and chronic form a cold in the head is known as Nasal Catarrh and is the recognized source of other diseases. Having stood the test of continued successful use, Ely's Cream Balm is recognized as a specific for membranal diseases in the nasal passages, and you make a great mistake in not resorting to this treatment in your own case. To test it a trial size for 10 cents or the large for 50 cents is mailed by Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York. Druggists keep it.

PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

(Special Correspondence of The Daily Press.)

Scotch Plains, Nov. 22.—Thomas Tyne, the last of the trio who assaulted Hans Lambertson election night, was brought before Judge Clark Saturday evening. Tyne had been keeping out of the way since the warrants were issued. Judge Clark found he was staying at a place near Metuchen. Saturday he was given his choice of a $10 fine or 30 days in the county jail. He concluded to take the $10 end of the bargain, the charge of assault being withdrawn.

After a pastorate of nearly six years, Rev. Edward True severed his connection with All Saints Episcopal church Sunday morning. Mr. True will not take a regular charge again, but will devote his time to literature. No regular pastor has been secured as yet, but the pulpit will be occupied for the present by a supply.

A window was broken in Raffel Meister's candy store by the boys Sunday evening. Meister says he is getting tired of waiting for a settlement and intends putting the matter in Judge Clark's hands unless a settlement is soon made.

Robert Walpole, Judge Clark and Wm. Lee, spent yesterday near the Passaic river hunting. As usual they came home loaded down with game, especially "Billy," who had been very fortunate, bringing several nice birds home with him.

Mrs. R. S. Welcome and daughter, of Maryland, were the guests Saturday and Sunday of Mrs. Welcome's sister, Mrs. T. M. Paff, Jr.

Miss Anna Murphy, who has been visiting her cousin, Mrs. Thomas Walsh, returned to her home in Brooklyn Monday.

WESTFIELD.

(Special Correspondence of The Press.)

Westfield, Nov. 22.—The commissioners of appeal are sitting at the township rooms this afternoon for the purpose of listening to complaints of the taxpayers but they have little to do as Assessor J. M. C. Marsh has done his work very well and there are very few complaints.

The High School football team will play the Newark Academy team on the Broad street ground Thanksgiving afternoon. The game between the Westfield team and the Dunellen boys will be played in the morning and not in the afternoon as at first announced.

A. H. Barnett, of this town, has purchased a hotel business at Irvington and will take charge Saturday. Mr. Barnett won the Milburn road race one year and he will now be right on the line which he covered in such good time on that occasion.

GOOD JOB WORK.

THE DAILY PRESS office can do it—anything from a milk ticket to an auction bill; even larger, too.

The job department of THE DAILY PRESS office is the largest and best equipped in Plainfield or vicinity. The workmen employed are experienced and capable and possess the knack of producing neat products. The prices are reasonable. When work is promised for a certain time the customer gets it without the aggravating delay common to many printeries.

If you need job printing at all you need the kind that reflects credit for neatness and style on you. You can get that kind

AT THE DAILY PRESS.

CHAPTER VIII.

On the rampart a sentinel called. There was a rumble of wheels, shots are fired and men rush to the wall. A cry came from a carriage. "In the king's service!" was the reply to the challenge. "The king's?" exclaimed De Guiche. The carriage rolled in, dusty and mud bespattered. It pulled up suddenly. The drums beat a salute. The carriage steps were lowered, and Roxane jumped out. "Good day, sirs," she called cheerfully as they all fell back and gazed at her. No one spoke until De Guiche forced his question. "On the king's service?"

"To be sure!" cried she merrily "King Love's! What other king?"

They gazed at her, stupefied with surprise, the men of Gascony. Christian stared dumfounded like the rest. Through Cyrano's lips a cry had come—a cry of pain and joy and loneliness and adoration for her daring. The others merely gaped like rustics.

"The siege," said Roxane airily, as though she spoke of a play, "the siege is too long."

De Guiche aroused himself. He remembered the fluttering white scarf that had bade his foes attack this spot.

"Madame," he cried, "you cannot stay here!"

"Oh, but I can!" retorted Roxane, still roseate, dimpled, daring, mistress of the situation, queen of the men "Will not some one roll a drum here? I would sit upon it. Ah! Thank you They fired at my carriage. Think of that. Good morrow, Christian. Catch this salute I waft you from my finger tips. Yes, fired at it. How came I through? The Spanish lines, of course. A difficult matter, do you think? Nay, not at all. I told the truth—used no diplomacy. Whenever some fierce don would stop and demand my passport of me, I smiled upon him through the window, and when he asked whither I journeyed I answered truly. 'I go to see my lover.' And then not one tried to stay me!"

She finished proudly, simply, with a look at Christian. Cyrano, watching her, went wild. But De Guiche, with the thought of his order in his mind, had no time to rage at lovers' glances.

"You must leave this place at once," he said. "There is no time to lose. It is not safe."

"You are going to flight!" she cried. "I shall stay here."

"It is a post of deadly danger," said De Guiche.

"Of danger? So, sir, you would make a widow of me? You protest? No matter. I will not stir a step from here. A fight? I never saw one. It will be amusing! And my hat! You will observe it could not have been chosen better to accord with a battle scene. And you, my lord De Guiche, were it not wise that you retire to headquarters? The attack may soon begin."

"This is unbearable!" cried his lordship. "I go, but for a few minutes only. I will return!"

His departure was the signal for the wildest outbreak on the part of the Gascons. Hair was curled, doublets laced, ruffles smoothed, presentations made to the beauty and the wit of Paris, whom love for one of them had brought so far afield.

"Had I but a nut to eat," cried one youth, "I could die happy, having looked upon her face."

"Hungry?" called Roxane. "Ah, Ragueneau, Ragueneau!"

And forthwith out from the carriage sprang the ex-cook, now Roxane's coachman. He carried food. He bore bottles. Pasties, cold fricassees, galantine, shoulders of mutton, ortolans, ham, truffled peacocks, old wine, all are seized by the famishing Gascons, who shout with joy to see the viands, and there, with death hastening to them, the cadets picnicked, banqueted and made merry in the presence of Roxane.

Cyrano had sought out Christian early in her visit.

"Be not surprised," he whispered, "to learn that you have written oftener than you knew. I have—I have sent her more than you knew of. I've written—frequently. Before dawn I've slipped through the lines to send them—a mere trifle."

"How often have you written?" demanded Christian. "Twice a week?"

"Oh, oftener!"

"Daily?"

"Yes; twice a day."

"And the author's joy was so mad a one to you that you dared death"—

"Hush!" whispered Cyrano. "Here she comes!"

Christian went to meet his wife.

"Now tell me all," he said, "why you have come this perilous way? Why you have braved these dangers—roughnesses?"

"You drew me here," she answered; "your letters, love. The last one—reading it, I could not bear to stay from you. Oh, love! Do not speak. Let me tell you all the tale—how from the night when, underneath my window, you sent your soul to mine, I have adored you. Before—I blush to own it—I crave your pardon for it—I loved you only for your look. But then, your soul, your soul it was! And all your letters since! Ah, I have grown altogether yours; this month as I have read my soul was faint for love. Ah, Christian, you have triumphed over yourself; you've won me anew. I love you only for your soul who loved you once but for your beauty."

"Do not say it," he appealed, realizing what such a confession meant.

"But I must! Were you ugly—hideous—I still should love you utterly!"

"My God!" cried Christian, chokingly, seeing the whole miserable web he had spun for himself. But before Roxane could even ask the cause of his dismay the cadets were crowding about their queen. Their captain had fastened her little lace handkerchief on a pole for a flag. They pressed about her, glad to look on her before they died. Apart from them, Christian, half mad with bitterness, had sought Cyrano.

"It's you she loves," he said. "She told me so."

"Look at my face!" interrupted Cyrano bitterly.

"She said she'd love me, even though I were ugly," answered Christian. "Because my face happens to be fair, is it right that I should destroy another man's happiness? I will no longer bear this. I'll be loved for myself alone, for myself as I am. I'll tell her all. She shall choose between us. Nay, do not try to stay me. I'll tell her. Our marriage—secret, unwitnessed—can easily be set aside. You'll have your chance. She'll have her choice."

ROXANE'S DISCOVERS CHRISTIAN'S DEAD BODY.

"She will choose you," said Cyrano.

"Roxane! Roxane!" called Christian.

She came toward them, smiling, sweet, her face effulgent with the love that glowed within her heart. Cyrano grew dizzy at the sight and the wild hope of happiness that had leaped to life.

"Cyrano has something to tell you," said Christian, and was gone.

"He doubts my love!" said she, looking, half puzzled, after him. "He did not quite believe that I would love him were he"—

"Ugly?" said Cyrano.

"Ugly!" said she, blushing to say the word before him.

"Were he hideous—disfigured, grotesque?"

"He could not be grotesque to me. I'd love him all the more!"

The blood rushed through Cyrano's veins like fire. He trembled, lost himself. At last perhaps love stood waiting for him.

"Roxane," he cried, "Roxane! I have something to tell you. Listen! I"—

Beyond them was a sound of firing. He ceased to speak. Le Bret entered hurriedly and whispered something in Cyrano's ear. Roxane, cold with a sudden sense of danger, looked up. Behind him came cadets bearing something shapeless covered over.

"Now I can never tell her," muttered Cyrano.

Roxane pushed forward. The cadets lay their burden down. Some sought to hold her back, but she flew toward the cloaked, still figure lying there. She screamed and pushed the cloak aside.

"Christian!" she screamed. "Christian! Christian!"

But Christian could not hear.

Stories of the Street

Plainfield People are Talking About it on Every Corner

It is sometimes an easy matter to fool the public, but you can't keep it up very long. They are sure to find you out; and every time a man is fooled another skeptic is made. Skepticism is allowable when reading in a home newspaper about some incident occurring in San Francisco or Iowa, but the circumstances are entirely different when it refers to some one right here at home, friends and neighbors, people you know, whom you can see, and with whom you talk it over. This is the kind of evidence at the back of Doan's Kidney Pills—home statements by home people, and the astonishing local work they have been doing has caused more talk among our citizens than the doings of any other modern wonder. Read the following:

Mr. Richard Day, of 134 East Front street, says: 'I have been troubled at times with symptoms of kidney complaint for the last four years. My chief difficulty was a miserable pain across my back and a sort of lame feeling over my kidneys. Standing for any length of time or walking any distance aggravated it greatly. I have never been sick much in my life and consquently have never taken much medicine, so when I first began having these attacks I paid but little attention to them. They however grew worse instead of better so I had to look about for a remedy. I had read quite frequently in our papers about cures brought about by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills so I got a box at L. W. Randolph's drug store and after taking them I felt greatly relieved. I have recommended them to my friends and those who have used them speak very highly in their praise. I consider that Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for complaints like mine."

Doan's Kidney Pills for sale by all dealers, price 50 cents. Mailed by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. Sole agents for the U. S. Remember the name Doan's and take no substitute.

Laibach. Hier fand die feierliche Eröffnung der von der Landwirthschaftsgesellschaft anläßlich des Regierungsjubiläums des Kaisers in's Leben gerufenen im Marianum untergebrachten Hausfrauenschule statt.

Meran. Bei einer Produktion im Cirkus Amadeo Belley wurde der Direktor Belley von einem Schulpferd, das er zum ersten Male vorführte, an den Unterleib geschlagen. Er machte noch einige Schritte und stürzte dann todt zusammen. Die junge Frau des Direktors war Zeugin des Unglücks.

Salzburg. Hier starb Baron Karl Schwarz, der größte Eisenbahnbauer und Unternehmer Oesterreichs. Er hatte als gewöhnlicher Maurergeselle in Neu-Titschein seine Laufbahn begonnen.

Schärfling. Kürzlich fand hier die feierliche Eröffnung der den Wolfgangsee, Mondsee und Attersee verbindenden neuen Verkehrsstraße Schärfling-See statt, nachdem der Durchbruch der Kienbergerwand nunmehr fertiggestellt wurde.

Schweiz.

Bern. Auf der Eisenbahnlinie Bern-Biel schaute der junge Techniker Friedrich Hari von Adelboden unfern der Subergbrücke bei Bußwyl zum Fenster des Bahnwagens hinaus, indem er einer Hasenjagd draußen auf dem Felde zusah. Er lehnte sich dabei stark aus dem Fenster hinaus; der Zug brauste der Brücke zu und im Augenblicke war der Kopf des jungen Technikers zerschlagen. Der Verunglückte lebte noch bis zur Station Lyß; der Oberzugführer ließ einen Arzt holen, aber die Hilfe kam zu spät.

Zürich. Der seit zwei Jahren von der Staatsanwaltschaft in Zwickau wegen Urkundenfälschung steckbrieflich verfolgte 16jährige Graveurlehrling B. Meinel ist in einer hiesigen Herberge verhaftet worden.

Luzern. Der Postadjunkt Imhof aus Ochsenfurt, Bayern, der im November v. J. nach der Unterschlagung von etwa 30,000 Mark flüchtig ging, wurde in Luzern verhaftet.—Die Pilatusbahn hat dieses Jahr bis Ende September 37,300 Passagiere befördert gegen 32,000 im Vorjahre und 228,291 Francs vereinnahmt, oder 34,500 Francs mehr als letztes Jahr im gleichen Zeitraum.

Graubünden. Die diesjährige Hochjagdbeute im Kanton ist etwas größer als in den letzten Jahren. Im Ganzen wurden 10 Hirsche geschossen. Einer Wildprethandlung in Chur allein sind 220 Gemsen, 10 Rehe und 3 Hirsche geliefert worden.

Genf. Seit der Mordthat Luchenis hat sich die Polizei energisch an die Arbeit gemacht, um Genf von verdächtigem Gesindel zu säubern. In den wenigen Wochen sind über 500 Personen abgefaßt worden. Die meisten davon sind Franzosen und Italiener von denen bekanntlich eine große Anzahl ausgewiesen wurde. Durch Stechereien und übles Betragen zur Nachtzeit sind die Italiener überhaupt für einige Stadttheile zu einer schweren Plage geworden und die Bevölkerung verlangt Errichtung mehrerer neuer Polizeiposten und Vermehrung der Nachtpatrouillen.

KNIFE-PLEATING or PINKING done, will please leave orders with Mrs Force, 201 Watchung avenue, and it will receive prompt attention. 10 24t

HOW CHANGED THE TIMES.

How changed the times!
Today the maid
In modern raiment, gay, arrayed,
'Mid joyous chimes goes forth to dine,
And finds a dinner wondrous fine.
Full twenty courses grace the linen,
But only just a small beginnin'
She makes in each—a bite from many,
But little, scarce a crumb, from any!

How changed the times!
Two hundred years
Her grandam, rent with direful fears
Of dusky redskins everywhere,
Sat down to eat of humble fare.
Of courses found she there a twenty?
Oh, no; but three, and those a plenty.
But ah! she ate and when she'd finished
The store of food was clean diminished.

THEIR DUBIOUS THANKSGIVING.

BY JUDITH SPENCER.

"Tomorrow will be a dubious Thanksgiving," Mary North said sadly.

"Oh, no, it won't!" her sister Susan rejoined sarcastically. "Let me enumerate all that we've had to be thankful for during this past year. To begin with, our step-father died—and left us a large legacy of debts."

"Oh, now, Susan, don't!"

"And, then, we found that he not only mortgaged our dear old home, but had failed to pay the interest on it all these years, and that now—because we can't raise the money to pay it—the mortgage is to be foreclosed at once, and we will be turned out—for the town to take care of, I suppose, since mother is about helpless with rheumatism, and it takes all my time to care for her, and to keep us with clothes on our backs. And now that the Grosvenors have suddenly decided to go South, and no longer want you for nursery governess—the cup of our thankfulness is full.

"Oh, don't, Susan, please don't!" Mary had been pleading. "It is all so dreadfully sad and hard for us; but still it might be even worse."

"Worse!" ejaculated Susan.

"Yes, worse," replied Mary. "Why suppose—just suppose it had been mother who died," her sweet voice trembled piteously. "Or, suppose, now that she is so helpless, that you and I were not so perfectly strong and well. And, then, if she can keep so bright and cheerful with all that she is suffering, I'm sure we ought to keep up bravely—if only for her sake. And, Susan, it's a foolish thought maybe, but I can't help thinking that now—when everything looks so dark and hopeless to us—daylight must be at hand. Perhaps I shall get something else to do very soon—and mother may get better, so that she can be around again—and, anyway, God hasn't forgotten us in our trouble—and, I'm sure, He will not let us suffer needlessly."

The morning train that day had brought a stranger to this quiet town. He was rather a grim-looking personage, and was apparently in a very bad humor. It was very clear when he left the city in the early morning, and he found himself landed—umbrellaless—in a driving storm when he reached Hillsboro'. That had annoyed him, and his first thought was to take a train right back to town. But when on inquiry he found that there would be no return train until the one he had originally intended to take, late in the afternoon, he decided to go on and get his disagreeable business over and done with.

He had but a mile to go—the man at the station had told him, and the road was straight, so he could not miss the small, white cottage, just this side of the covered bridge. But the road had seemed to stretch out interminably, and the snow and freezing street combined to make walking more difficult at every step.

So there was not often a man in a worse humor than this man was, when the low, white cottage he was seeking at once came into sight. And now, as he suddenly hastened his footsteps, he somehow slipped and fell heavily, striking his head and doubling his left arm under him. But he made no murmur at this misadventure, but lay still and quite unconscious on the ground.

When he again opened his eyes, he was on the bed in a small, neat room; but all that he thought of at first was that his head was paining him terribly, while his arm was hurting him even more. Someone whom he could not see was fussing with his head and making the pain still worse. He felt so desperately cross and ill that he impatiently ordered the unseen meddler to leave him and his head alone.

"I beg your pardon," said a pleasant voice, "but it's a bad cut, and it should be dressed at once. I'm perfectly competent to do it, but your arm will have to wait till the doctor comes."

"What's the matter with my confounded arm?" He tried to move it, and groaned outright with the pain.

"It's broken, I'm afraid; but the doctor will be here to set it soon."

Then the hapless stranger fell to rating the place, the storm and his accident so soundly, that another voice from another as yet unseen individual, spoke up in sharp rebuke:

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself to talk so—when we're doing our best to help you!"

"Oh, hush, Susan," broke in the pleasant voice. "He's suffering dreadfully; he really don't know what he's saying."

"Yes, I do!" said the stranger gruffly, "and I beg your pardon; but you've been hurting me like the deuce!"

"Ah, here's the doctor," said the pleasant voice in a tone of relief. And then the stranger found himself transferred into the skillful hands of the professional—whose treatment of his wounds was much more rigorous than that of the deft and gentle fingers he had railed against but now.

When at last his head had been bandaged, and his arm had been set, the physician gave some brief instructions to his patient. he would have to remain where he was for several days, and must keep very quiet, on account of the wound in his head.

"But I must return to town to-day," the stranger said, peremptorily. "I have an engagement for to-morrow—and Thanksgiving dinners are not to be put off!"

"All right, go," said the doctor, "and the consequences will be brain fever."

The stranger was silent for a moment. Then he said shortly, "I see that I must submit. But how did this thing happen? Where am I? And who was fussing with me until you came?"

"You slipped on the icy path. Miss Mary North saw you fall, and when she reached you, you were insensible. She ran to get help. Fortunately it happened within a few yards of her home, and she and her sister together managed to carry you in; and they must have found you a heavy load! Then Mary ran to my house—full quarter of a mile away—and left word for me to come here as soon as I got home. I found her working over you, and your scalp was all ready for the stitches when I came. She's a clever girl, was studying to be a nurse, but unfortunately the money gave out, and she couldn't go on. She had to turn nursery governess, instead."

"And the other, the sharp one who's she?"

"The elder sister, Susan. Her tongue is sharp—but her heart's all right—and she's seen trouble enough to turn sweet grapes sour. That's all the family left now, except the mother, crippled with rheumatism, poor soul. Well, then, I'll tell them you are to be on their hands here for a day or two. I'll see you again, toward night, and bring you something you will need, until you can get back to town. Anything I can do for you? Any messages you want to send?"

The stranger dictated a telegram, explaining his detention, to a member of a well known firm in the city.

When the doctor heard the name, he looked up in surprise. "Then you came here from them—about the mortgage, I suppose?"

"I did—confound the entire business!"

"H'm," said the doctor, and went on writing at the stranger's dictation.

The signature was also a surprise to the doctor: "Willard Blackwell! Why, then, you are the head of the firm yourself!"

"I am—is there anything so strange about that?"

"Oh, no!" said the doctor; but involuntarily he sighed, and to himself he added: "Poor things, poor things!"

Another telegram was written to Mr. Blackwell's friend, to explain his enforced absence from their dinner-party on the morrow, and then the doctor left him, and Blackwell settled himself in grim endurance of the evils from which he could not escape.

By-and-by the door was softly opened, and, through his half closed eyes, he saw a pretty girl looking in upon him curiously; and at last he saw that the room he was in was connected with the one adjoining it—where the speakers were—by an uncovered stovepipe hole.

The voice of Susan spoke up sharply: "Here's another thing to be thankful for! To think of it being Willard Blackwell—or all persons in the world! If I had known that, he might have died outside there—I never would have lifted my hand to carry him in here!"

"Oh, Susan, yes you would!"

"Indeed, I wouldn't! And, after all those awful letters he's written to mother; now he has come here just to turn us out. You saw how ugly and cross he was—we can't expect one grain of kindness at his hands."

"I shouldn't ask it;" and here Mary's pleasant voice grew sad: "But it's a matter of business, Susan, and we musn't blame him for it. We owe all that money; we can't pay it; so the mortgage is to be foreclosed, and we must go. He knows nothing about its always having been our home, and that all this trouble has come about without our knowledge. It's not his fault that we must go. I only wish we knew where we were to take poor mother, and how we could make it comfortable for her."

"On nothing a year!" supplemented Susan. "Yes, and if that selfish Mrs. Grosvenor hadn't decided to go off to the South, at a moment's notice, and throw you out of your position, we needn't have worried about that," she went on. "And now she doesn't pay you what she owes you."

"But she will, Susan. She said she would send me a check next week."

"Next week—when we need it now! We're in a fine fix, truly! It was bad enough before; but now that we are saddled with this grumpy, horrid, cross old man——"

The involuntary eavesdropper started suddenly—for in spite of a few gray hairs upon his temples, Willard Blackwell had never thought of himself as old before—though grumpy and horrid and cross he most certainly had been!

"And our bitterest enemy! the sharp voice went on. "He will expect all sorts of luxuries, I suppose; and we haven't but a few cents left in the house; and not a thing to set before him but porridge and pork and bread—without butter! And I will not run any further in debt."

"But your bread is delicious, Susan; and I'm sure he's welcome to the best we have."

"And he was to go to a swell Thanksgiving dinner in the city, to-morrow, doctor said! He'll have to give thanks here, on very different fare, and, for that part of it, I'm almost glad!"

"Oh, my goodness, Susan, look!"

"For pity's sake, what's the matter now?"

"The stove-pipe hole is uncovered," Mary cried tragically; "and he can hear every word!"

"Serve him right if he had! But you said he was sound asleep."

The hole was quickly covered, and Willard Blackwell heard no more. But the various new sensations he had suddenly experienced gave him sufficient food for thought.

When the doctor came back at dusk, he found a remarkable change had taken place in his grumpy patient, whose gruffness had now entirely vanished.

"I beg your pardon, doctor, for my bad humor this morning. As you could plainly see, I had been—well—upset! And thank you for your kindness in loaning me these things. Could I ask another favor of you now?" Blackwell spoke with a curious, anxious diffidence. "It occurs to me that these—these kind ladies may not be entirely prepared for my sudden descent upon them—and, to-morrow being Thanksgiving, you know—well, I thought that perhaps they might allow me to supply the table, for one thing, while I am with them—and would you mind explaining to them that I would like to do so? And then, is there any place in the village from where you could send them in a good fat turkey, and plenty of fruit and vegetables, and anything else you think they might like? I'd be no end obliged and grateful to you—and you don't think they'd be offended do you? I'm such a duffer, and I've made such a bad impression to start with, that I must depend on you to help me out."

The doctor had looked at him in utter amazement; but, as their eyes met, he nodded and smiled; and, muttered his thanks, Blackwell thrust a roll of bank notes into his hand.

"He's not a bad fellow after all!" the doctor said, triumphantly, to himself; and presently the matter was all arranged and the good doctor went rejoicing on his way.

But as soon as Blackwell was alone again, strange and discomforting fancies swarmed through his mind. Would not this seem to his hostess merely a selfish man of the world's discourteous protest against the frugal fare which was all that they had been able to set before him?

His dinner and supper on that eventful day had certainly been meager enough, though daintily served by Mary herself; and his breakfast next morning, was frugal, too—but not so the Thanksgiving dinner. That was a beautiful and bountiful repast, deliciously cooked, and set out by Susan and Mary. And Mrs. North was brought to the table in her rolling chair; and Willard Blackwell left his room, for the first time, to take his place at the table with the family.

He looked so soldierly and handsome with his head bandaged and his arm in a sling, that even Mary was surprised, and Susan certainly would never have recognized him as the "grumpy, horrid, cross old man" whom she had expected to see.

That Mrs. North had guessed his errand, he knew at once, by the way her voice trembled and broke as she tried to speak to him.

Susan was regarding him sternly—she could not for a moment forget that he was their "bitter enemy." But Mary's eyes met his, and their pathetic wistfulness went suddenly to his heart.

He took Mrs. North's frail white hand and bent over it. "Excuse me for speaking of it now," he said, "but you don't understand my intentions in the least. (He had not understood them himself until that very moment—when he seemed to read them in Mary's eyes.) "I beg you not to fear that I will ever do anything to take from you the home which opened its hospitable doors to the wounded stranger. I assure you, everything can be arranged without embarrassing you in the least."

"God bless you, sir!" was all the frail little woman could find words to say. But Blackwell, looked up, met Mary's eyes again, and now they were luminous like stars. And he thought he heard her murmur: "An angel unawares!"

They took their places in silence, and reverently bent their heads:

"For the assurance we have just received, O Lord, we are truly thankful!" breathed Susan, and though it was not at all what she had meant to say, it was a good and sufficient grace.

For eight days Blackwell was a prisoner in that small white home. And when the doctor gave him leave to go back home to his own world, he left there with regret.

Blackwell carried away with him the consummation of the most thoroughly unbusiness-like business transaction of his life—but, with it, the memory of the loveliest girl's face that he had ever seen, transfigured now with happiness and gratitude. And he also carried with him the firm determination—which, in a year's time, was happily carried out—of utterly effacing that miserable first impression from even Susan's unelastic mind, and of winning sweet Mary North to be his wife.—The Ladies World.

NOVEMBER.

When the bracing breath of Au tumn
Marches down the meadows wide.
And the cattle cross the uplands
With a firm, exultant stride.
Then the mem'ries of the harvest
Are about us everywhere,
And the spirit of abundance
And Thanksgiving's in the air.

Far above I hear the honking
Of the southward-flying geese.
And a haze lies on the marshlands
Like a phantasy of peace—
Gaudy color schemes of Autumn
Are unfolding here and there,
And the crispness of November
And Thanksgiving's in the air.

In the kitchen there are odors
That my childhood used to know,
And my fancy travels on them
To the days of long ago;
And I revel in the bustle,
And I lay aside all care,
When the joyful preparation
For Thanksgiving's in the air.

Then I seek the silent forest,
And I walk those silent ways
Where I sought the joyous murmur
Through the lavish summer days;
For it seems like Nature's temple,
And I kneel and worship there,
When the spirit of November
And Thanksgiving's in the air.

SUPERIORITY.

White folks hab de learnin';
Cullud folks hab sense;
Dey don' hafter read an' write
An' make a big pretence.
White folks takes de paper;
Watches it all year
To fin' de proclamation
So's dey'll know Thanksgivin's here.

Turkey in de bahn yahd;
'Possum in de tree;
Goodness is a-gatherin'
Whah de 'simmon waits foh me.
Chicken coop is noisy;
Isn't any fear
I'll need a proclamation
Foh to know Thanksgivin's near.

BE NOT SO VAIN.

Be not so vain, thou turkey gobbler hold
Not up so high thy head, with pride
so puffed!
E'en now the chestnuts ripen with which, cold
And stark in death, full soon thou wilt be stuffed.

How to Carve Your Turkey.

1. Insert the carving fork across the breast bone.
2. Cut through the skin between the breast and the thigh.
3. Bend the leg over and cut off close to the body and through the joint.
4. Cut through the top of the shoulder, down through the wing-joint.
5. Shave off the breast in thin slices, slanting from the front of the breast-bone down towards the wing-joint.
6. Carve only from the side nearest you.
7. Tip the bird over slightly, and with the point of the knife remove the oyster and the small, dark portion found on the side-bone.
8. Then remove the fork from the breast and divide the leg and wing.
9. Cut through the skin between the body and breast, and with a spoon remove a portion of the stuffing.
10. Serve light or dark meat and stuffing, as preferred.

The Duckling.—There goes the old turk that called us kids. Oh, say!

That Terrible Kid.

Mrs. Smith—Did you give your mother the invitation to take Thanksgiving dinner at our house?

Tommy Jones—Yes, ma'am.

Mrs. Smith—And what did she say?

Tommy Jones—Said she supposed we would have to go, but she'd rather stay at home and get a square meal.

Cause for Thanks.

Uncle Rastus—Yis, sah, it am jis es Ise said. Dere am nothin' fur me to be thankful fur.

Parson Prosey—You're mistak'n Rastus. Now, last night I saw you coming out of a hen house with a fine turkey. You should be thankful it wasn't the owner of that hen house who saw you.

Filling Him Up.

Mrs. Turkey—When my poor husband was lured to his death on Thanksgiving Day the cook praised him highly.

Brother Gobbler—Aw, she was only stuffing him.

A REVERIE.

I think of a Thanksgiving years ago,
When my cheeks were full and my hair was brown;
We stood by the window and watched the snow,
As in eddying flakes it came tumbling down.
She was only a girl—I was only a boy,
And the battle of life was as yet unfought;
But the world seemed happy and full of joy,
And to trouble we never gave a thought.

But now I can see that we lived in a dream,
For the years have brought me little but grief;
And the hopes I had—never what they seem—
Are crumbled away like a withered leaf.
For I, with my song, was to wrest from fame
A guerdon to lay at her willing feet;
For the world was going to murmur my name
In those days when I never thought of defeat.

But now as I sit by the window and think,
I can see the snow as I did of yore,
And the frost on the pane brings out every link
Of the past as it was in the years before.
There's a single gleam in my life today,
That makes me bear with this world of strife;
Though my dreams are vanished, my heart is gay,
For while she is married, she's not my wife.

THANKSGIVING SONG.

Heigh ho! for a Thanksgiving turkey,
All crispy, and roasted, and brown.
And ho! for the pies that gladden our eyes
When the late autumn snow's falling down;
Oh, grandmother makes the best pudding
That ever was eaten, I know,
And the turkey she'll stuff is quite good enough
To be carved by the King of Cairo.
Heigh ho! for the cranberry jelly,
Delicious and tempting to eat;
Grandmother can bake a pie or a cake
As good as a ten-dollar treat;
And the table she sets on Thanksgiving
Is laden with goodies for all,
While the odor of spice and everything nice
Is in kitchen and garret and hall.

THANKSGIVING TIME.

Perhaps you're fond or Springtime and the merry month of May,
Or Christmas, if you like it best, and I'll not say you nay;
But as for me, no time of year has such a subtle charm
As Thanksgiving in November, with the old folks on the farm.

For there's the dear old mother, with her sweet and gentle face,
She says it's no Thanksgiving 'less her boy is in his place;
And while she's there, why, bless ye, it needs no other charm
To call me home Thanksgiving to the old folks on the farm.
And when we sit at eve around the log fire's ruddy glow,
And I watch the flickering shadows on the hearthstone come and go,
I dream that I'm a boy again and life takes on a charm
That lasts till next Thanksgiving with the old folks on the farm.

JOHN W. LOW.

T'ANKSGIBIN' DAY AM COMIN'.

Oh, run an' feed de turkeys now,
Da gittin' plump, my honey;
Da'll be so fat
I rec'on dat
Da fetch a heap ob money.
An' one we'll keep, de berry best,
Jes' hea' da' wings a-drummin',
Yo' hurry, chile,
An' min' de while,
T'anksgibin' Day am comin'.

We'll hab de chillun all at home,
An' some ob de relations,
Den we an' da
'll gib t'anks an' pray
Fo' all de folks an' nations,
Dat God hab kep' de whole yea thro',
But hea' dem turkeys drummin',
Yo' hurry, chile,
An' min' de while,
T'anksgibin' am comin'.

THANKSGIVING.

I counted up my little store,
Why was to others given more?
Why were their lips with honey fed,
While mine had Labor's hard-earned bread?
A weary, hopeless task seemed living,
I could not bring to God thanksgiving.

There came a poor man to my door;
I shared with him my scanty store,
When, lo! my sense of want had flown,
And rarest riches were my own!
So sweet is love's divided bread,
I seemed with Heaven's own manna fed.
What blessed joy there was in living!
I brought to God my glad thanksgiving.

MET BROOKLYN'S BEST

PLAINFIELD BASKET BALL TEAM MADE FINE SHOWING.

When Time Was Called, The Score Was 9 to 9—After Ten Minutes of Play Brooklyn Scored a Goal and Won'

The basket ball team of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., distinguished itself last evening by playing a tie game with Brooklyn's strongest team in the latter's own gymnasium. The home team was that of the eastern district of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A., which is classed only second to the famous Twenty-third street branch, of New York.

At the end of the first half the score stood 4 to 2 in favor of the home team. The Plainfield boys played a wonderful game, guarding their men with remarkable skill and showing a decided improvement in their accuracy at goal throwing. In the second half the visitors braced up and the score stood 9 to 9 when time was called. The game was then continued until one side should score. After ten minutes of play, Brooklyn threw a goal from the field, winning 11 to 9. Ten fouls were called on Plainfield and three on Brooklyn.

Plainfield was represented in the game by E. Moraller, Bonney, Egan, Carroll, M. Moraller and G. P. Smith. Bonney and Carroll alternated as left forward. Fred. G. Smith, of Plainfield, was referee.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff Have Been Married Five Years.

Last evening a pleasant surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Horace Huff, of Coddington avenue, by a number of their friends. The occasion was the celebration of Mr. and Mrs. Huff's fifth wedding anniversary, and while they were cognizant of the fact, they were wholly unaware of the intended surprise. An evening of sociability, games, music, etc., was enjoyed by all and a bountiful repast was served during the festivities. A feature was the presentation to the host and hostess of a beautiful cut-glass dish, which they accepted with sincere thanks.

Those present to celebrate the happy event were:

Mr. and Mrs. George Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. C. Ryno, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Haberle, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Kitchen, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Woolston, Mr. and Mrs. B. R. NEW SCHOOL STUDIES

IMPROVEMENTS MADE IN NORTH PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

Advanced English and English Commercial Course to be Taken up—Fire Drills Discussed—Winter Course of Lectures.

There was an important meeting of the Borough Board of Education last evening, and all of the members except Messrs. McCutchen and Wells, were present. Heretofore there has been three courses in the High School classical, scientific and English. It was decided last evening to add two courses, that will be of incalcuable value to students. The courses are advanced English and an English commercial course. These new courses will be printed in a pamphlet form and distributed at once so that parents and scholars may become thoroughly acquainted with them. There will be a number of options offered in the junior and senior years.

The question of holding fire drills in the school was introduced and discussed somewhat. It was finally laid on the table to be taken up at the next meeting.

It was announced at the meeting that the winter course of lectures had been started, Prof. Metz, of Somerville, having given the first one recently. These lectures will be given about every two weeks by various persons of prominence and learning. Heretofore they have proved a great benefit to the scholars, and no doubt will continue to be beneficial.

NOT A CANDIDATE.

Judge Coddington Has No Desire to be on the Citizens' Ticket.

To the Editor of The Daily Press.—I desire to state that I am not a candidate for the nomination of City Judge of the city of Plainfield, nor am I a candidate for the nomination of any office at the coming election. It has been rumored that I was a candidate for the City Judge nomination on the Citizens' ticket, but such is not the case.

I do not know who circulated the report, but certainly it was without any authority whatever from me. I had the honor to serve the city in the capacity of city judge for one full term of three years and since the expiration of my term of office I have never had any desire to again hold the position. However, I wish to thank my friends for the kind interest they have shown toward me in offering me the nomination at this time, but in justice to myself I deem it my duty to decline the honor they wish to confer upon me.

I am respectfully yours,
Wm. A. Coddington.

A Klondike Cow.

A farmer who lives near Chicago owned a cow, and five years ago the farmer's wife placed $500 in gold for safe keeping in a boxful of bran in the cellar. One day, during the mother's absence, the children found the box of bran and carried it to the barn for the cow to eat. When the woman concluded to look at her treasure again, it was gone and she believed it was stolen. About a week later the cow was taken ill, and acted so strangely that when she died, a veterinarian asked leave to dissect her, to discover the cause. When the stomach was opened, there was $500 in gold, and the farmer's wife did not regret the cow's death one bit.

THE LARGEST OVERCOAT AND SUIT SALE of the season now going on.

Do not miss the opportunity of a life time and don't buy a dollar's worth of clothing anywhere else until you have been here first of all. Everything will sell fast so come at once and don't delay. Secure yourself with an overcoat or a suit at this great sale at one third its value. Be on hand early and get the first pick.

You can see more clothing at this sale and there is more clothing sold here than in any two stores in Plainfield, and is it any wonder? When you can get the finest goods here at one third the prices you have to pay in any store in the world for goods far inferior to the clothing sold at this sale.

FOOTBALL GAME AT MARTINE FIELD IN THE MORNING.

Golf Will Have Its Adherents on the Local Links—Matinee in the Afternoon at Music Hall—Star Course Entertainment at Y. M. C. A. Hall—What Will Take Place Tonight.

The veteran turkey gobbler eyed his noble offspring as the latter strutted about the barnyard before the admiring glances of the half-dozen turkey hens who gathered by the new chicken house Johnny had labored on so patiently most of the fall.

"He does not know of the evil in this world," sighed the elder bird. "He does not realize what horrid customs abound among those creatures known as men. Thanksgiving, indeed! Here I have mourned year after year the loss of my beloved children which have gone to satisfy the voracious appetite of these beings. And they call it Thanksgiving when we have to weep and sigh at the departure and undignified ending of our dear ones." And a salty tear trickled down the wrinkled face of the aged gobbler.

It all happened in a barn yard not far from this city, early this morning. Now, the once proud young gobbler is being rapidly prepared to send joy to the heart of the writer tomorrow when the bird, brown, crisp and most tempting-looking, will be served for his Thanksgiving dinner.

Yes, tomorrow is Thanksgiving, according to the proclamation of William McKinley, our honored president. Plainfield will observe the day in usual fashion. In the morning, union Thanksgiving services will be held in the Trinity Reformed and Seventh-day Baptist churches beginning at 10:30 o'clock. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes will speak at the Trinity Reformed church and Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards at the Seventh-day Baptist church. A union Christian Endeavor service will be held in the lecture room of the Trinity Reformed church at 9:30 o'clock.

For lovers of outdoor sports, the football game on Martine Field, Park avenue, at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning, will be well worth witnessing. The local eleven will meet their old rivals, the San Remo team of the New York Athletic club, once more and will try hard to defeat them. The visitors are well-known here as a gentlemenly team that will give the Plainfield boys a lively hustle.

The links of both the Hillside Tennis and Golf Club and the Park Golf Club will attract many of the members and their families, who will take advantage of the holiday for a morning or an afternoon of play.

Aside from the attractions at home in the shape of the Thanksgiving dinner, the matinee of the Burrill Comedy Company at Music Hall will draw many tomorrow afternoon.

The Alis team will probably play in the afternoon on Martine Field against the football team from Scotch Plains.

There are several attractions on the tapis for the evening. The Burrill Comedy Company will give another performance, "The Octoroon," at Music Hall. "An Evening of Song and Story" will be the title of the entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. Hall in the evening. It will be part of the famous Star Course of entertainments that have been so popular. A Thanksgiving sociable and entertainment will be held in the Grace M. E church during the evening under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society.

Tonight, Thanksgiving Eve, the annual masquerade ball and cake-walk of the Twilight Social Club will be held in the Crescent Rink. The other attraction of the evening is the city convention of the Republicans to nominate Mayor and other city officers.

Boy Traveler to be Heard.

Harry Steele Morrison, "the Boy Traveler," of New York, will lecture at the Y. M. C. A. Monday evening, November 28th at 8 o'clock. He is only 17 years of age, but has traveled quite extensively in Europe, and has interviewed Queen Victoria, Wm. E. Gladstone, King of Belgium, Emperor William, of Germany, and presidents of Switzerland and France. He had a narrow escape from being kidnapped in Paris and imprisonment in Germany. Of course you will want to hear him. Admission 25c.

A PASTOR'S NEW HOME.

REV. AND MRS. W. C. O'DONNELL OCCUPY THE METHODIST PARSONAGE.

The Event Made the Occasion of a Reception by the Pastor and His Wife—Refreshments Furnished in the Church.

Another notable and pleasant event in the history of Monroe Avenue church was that of last evening when the beautiful and substantial parsonage, recently completed, was opened for the inspection and admiration of all who desired to call.

Rev. William C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue church, and his bride, occupy this beautiful home and last evening they gave a reception to the members of the church and their many friends. During the early part of the evening the home was thronged with people who brought their best wishes and congratulations to the popular couple.

The home is situated on West Fourth street, near the church, and is in every particular an ideal one. The structure from an exterior view is imposing, while the interior is as complete as possible. The rooms are large, well arranged and furnished throughout in a manner that displays rare taste and judgment. The pastor's study on the first floor front off the hallway, is a cozy and well-appointed room. On the opposite side there is the parlor and directly back are situated the dining room, kitchen, etc. On the second floor the bedrooms are located, together with a bathroom and handy closet room. In every room a pleasing arrangement is displayed by way of furnishing, in fact from the cellar to the garret there is not one thing lacking to make the home what it should be.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bowers, parents of Mrs. O'Donnell, received the guests in the parlor. Mrs. O'Donnell was gowned in her bridal costume, and both she and her husband received all with marked cordiality.

After the guests had arrived and had been received by Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell, they went to the church, where refreshments were served by the ladies of the church. Mrs. Lloyd and Miss Forster presided at the table and poured tea and chocolate. Those who assisted in serving were Miss Manning, Miss Ackerman, Miss Brower, Miss Alice Forster, Miss Hannah Forster, Mrs. Eakins, Mrs. Whitely and Miss Stafford, all of who are members of the King's Daughters or the Ladies' Aid Society. After the guests had been served with refreshments they adjourned to Epworth House, where delightful music was furnished by P. Ludwig Conde's orchestra.

Later in the evening a happy diversion was introduced, when short addresses were made by James McGee, Rev. W. C. O'Donnell and Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church. The latter brought words of congratulation, while Mr. McGee extended his best wishes to the bride and groom. The pastor, Mr. O'Donnell, replied to the other addresses in his usual happy manner and was fully equal to the occasion.

YOUNG WOMEN'S CLUB AFFAIR.

Second Monthly Entertainment Was a Pleasing Success.

The second monthly entertainment of the Young Women's Club took place last evening at the clubhouse on Madison avenue and was in every way a success. There were twenty girls and young women present and everyone fully enjoyed themselves.

During the evening an interesting programme was presented consisting of vocal solos, by Miss Grace Carroll; instrumental solos, Miss Nellie Valiant; recitations, Miss Elsie Smith; songs, Beulah Rogers and George Rogers, Jr.

After the rendition of the above programme all present joined in a donkey party. This afforded plenty of amusement for all, and Miss Susie Lynch was the successful one to place the tail on the donkey, for which she received a favor of a box of candy.

Those who were in charge of the entertainment were Mrs. Young, Mrs. Valiant, Mrs. J. Everitt Kimball and Mrs. Samuel Kimball. The next entertainment will be held on the fourth Tuesday in December.

Nearly Fell Off the Train.

Seigmund Frucht, the Park avenue bicycle dealer, had a narrow escape from falling off the steps of the Newark train yesterday morning. He boarded the train after it had got under way, but being handicapped with a big bag, he couldn't get a foot hold on the steps, and hung there, in imminent danger of falling off, while Edward Martin, who had run up from the rear, held him up until he could recover his balance.

WHO WILL BE NAMED AT CITY CONVENTION

G. O. P. Ticket to Be Nominated Tonight.

NO OPPOSITION EXPECTED.

PARTY LEADERS HAVE ANNOUNCED THE SLATE TO BE ADOPTED.

Rockfellow for Mayor—Runyon for City Judge—Martin for Collector—Jenkins for School Trustee—Newcorn May Get Complimentary Vote—Mr. Gilbert Will Nominate Mr. Rockfellow for Mayor.

For Mayor,
GEORGE W. ROCKFELLOW.
For City Judge,
WILLIAM N. RUNYON.
For Tax Collector,
JAMES A. MARTIN.
For Member of Board of Education,
DR. O. L. JENKINS.

Such is the ticket that the Republican leaders have settled on to support for the coming municipal election. Tonight that ticket will be nominated at the city convention to be held in the Republican headquarters on East Front street. There may be a fight on the nomination for City Judgeship, but the leaders are not inclined to believe that Judge Newcorn will carry the fight into the convention when he knows that he will be defeated. He may, however, they say, want the complimentary vote of his ward.

One feature of Republican city conventions in the past has been the absolute unity of it all. There has been a slate and it has been carried through without objection or opposition. The fight has been in the primaries and caucusses that precede the convention and the candidates who found that they could not win withdrew at the last and so allowed the party to present an unbroken front at the meeting.

For several days there has been little or no doubt as to the makeup of all the ticket but for the nomination for the City Judge. Mr. Rockfellow is apparently the unanimous choice of the party for the mayoralty nomination and will receive it without opposition.

According to the plans of the leaders of the party, Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert, chairman of the Third ward delegation, will make the speech nominating Mr. Rockfellow. In it he will briefly point out the issues of the campaign and the course that the Republican party should persue to lead it on to victory at the coming election.

The convention is composed of twenty-seven delegates, who are divided among the four wards as follows: First ward, five; Second ward, six; Third ward, seven; Fourth ward, nine They will meet at the Republican headquarters at 8 o clock. A chairman and secretary will be chosen. The call will be read. There is little probability that any resolutions will be adopted, the nominating speech of Mr. Gilbert will be expected to outline the platform on which the fight will be made.

There seems no doubt now that Councilman Runyon will be the nominee for City Judge. With the Second and Third ward delegations pledged, he needed but one more vote to give him a majority of the delegates in the convention. That one vote has been promised from the First ward and the party leaders are content to let the matter rest without bringing any pressure to bear to insure the nomination of Mr. Runyon. If Mr. Newcorn wishes the complimentary vote of the Fourth ward, it will probably be given. Otherwise, however, he will withdraw and allow the nomination of his rival to be made unanimous.

A Pleasant Time.

A sociable was given by the Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church Saturday afternoon, which was attended by the Juniors and their friends. Among the enjoyments of the afternoon were recitations, singing and readings. Games were played followed by refreshments served by the committee, composed of Miss Minnie Serrell, chairman; Miss Marqueritte Serrell, Miss Daisy Bogert, Miss Bessie Flanders, Miss Bessie Wilson.

Laying the Conduits.

Patsy Christmas, the contractor, started work yesterday placing conduits underground to be used for the electric light wires. The work was started on Park avenue and will be pushed forward to an early completion, if weather permits.

Endeavor Anniversary.

The tenth anniversary of the Park Avenue Baptist church Christian Endeavor Society will take place Friday evening next. Rev. Dr. Brett, president of the State Union, will make an address.

CITY JUDGE DEMEZA DIES VERY SUDDENLY.

Succumbed This Morning to a Short Illness.

HIS HEART WAS TOO WEAK.

COULD NOT STAND THE STRAIN IT WAS SUBMITTED TO.

Taken Sick Saturday Afternoon With a Severe Cold, Which Developed Into Pneumonia—His Success in Life Was an Example of What Ambition and Perseverance Will Accomplish.

All Plainfield is now mourning the loss of one of her most efficient public servants, City Judge DeMeza, who passed away after a very brief illness. Most of his youth was spent here and he has grown up making friends on every side. Born of parents in moderate circumstances he left school at an early age and made his way by his own indefatigable and persevering efforts to a leading place in the legal profession.

In politics as in the other affairs of life, he was an active worker and the Republican party recognized his ability and aid in giving him the City Judgeship.

The last few years have seen a rapid increase in his practice. So large had it grown that when approached to again become a candidate for the office of City Judge he hesitated lest his duties should conflict.

Despite the protests of his friends,

THE LATE GEORGE W. DEMEZA

Judge DeMeza insisted on remaining at his duties summer and winter without a rest or vacation. A day or two was spent at the seaside but he gained little benefit from so short rests. Of late his health has not been of the best.

Saturday afternoon he complained of a heavy cold and went to bed. Sunday he tried to get up but felt so ill that he returned to bed and Dr. Zeglio was summoned. It was soon learned that that the young man was suffering from bronchial pneumonia. He grew rapidly worse and the crisis came yesterday morning. He rallied and Dr. Zeglio had hopes of his recovery if his heart was strong enough to bear the strain of the illness. He has been suffering from heart trouble for some time. The crisis in the illness was successfully passed but the Judge grew weaker This morning at 8:30 o'clock he quietly passed away after a long period of unconsciousness.

Judge DeMeza was the eldest son of Mrs. Charlotte DeMeza, of 430 West Second street. He leaves a sister, Miss Charlotte DeMeza, and four brothers, William G., John H., Harry G. and Thomas L., all of whom reside at his home on West Second street

Judge DeMeza was born at Hartford, Conn., on February 16th, 1871. When very young, his family moved to Plainfield, where his father engaged in the furniture business. They afterwards removed to North Plainfield, where young DeMeza attended the public schools until twelve years of age. He then entered the employ of Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., where he remained for three years, continuing his studies outside of business hours. He afterward studied for some time at private schools, taking up the higher branches of learning and the foreign languages. His father died when he was fifteen years old and he was thrown on his own resourses. He accepted a position with L. M. French where he remained for six months; then he entered the employ of A. L. Cadmus for about the same length of time. The study of law was his next choice, and he began to read law in the offices of Jackson & Codington. After he had been there a month he showed a natural taste for it and soon made his appearance in the justices' courts as the representative of Jackson & Cod-

TAXPAYERS COMPLAIN ABOUT ASSESSMENTS.

Commissioners of Appeals Have Plenty to Do.

IN THE BOROUGH AND CITY.

WOMEN EXEMPTED FROM POLL TAX ACROSS THE BROOK.

The Number of Complainants in the City was so Great That it was Necessary to Issue Tickets so That They Could Appear in Rotation—Commissioners Will be in Session Several Days.

The Commissioners of Appeals of this city have their hands full at present. They met for the first yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Council chambers to consider the cases of all who thought they were unjustly taxed. Instead of the usual score of objectors, a great crowd assembled until every seat in the room was filled and many were standing. Little cards were given out bearing numbers, showing the order of the appearance of the objectors before the commissioners.

The three commissioners, J. B. Coward, A. H. Atterbury and W. W. Coriell, were present, as were the four assessors. The objectors came from all over the city, but the Second ward was largely represented. Several objectors were represented by their lawyers. Fifty cases were heard yesterday and this morning the hearing was continued. One hundred and sixty objectors have the little cards denoting the order of their hearing, and others will probably come later.

No action was taken on any of the cases and they were referred for consideration. The morning session closed at noon and the hearing will be continued tonight at 8 o'clock.

J. P. Emmons, A. B. Thorn and Robert Carson, Commissioners of Appeal in the borough, met yesterday afternoon, and from 2 o'clock until 11 o'clock last evening they were kept busy treating with dissatisfied property owners. No one made any big kick out of the one hundred and fifty persons before the commissioners. A great many objected to dog tax, claiming they owned no dog, while others claimed exemption from tax on account of being exempt firemen or veterans.

The commissioners learned that heretofore some women had been assessed for poll tax. This was removed. It can be stated that the assessment this year is fair and equitable. The Mayor and Council together with Assessor French spent one whole week examining every tax item, and their work has given satisfaction. Cases were found where the tax was too little, while in other cases it was not enough. These cases were equitably adjusted. Taking everything into consideration the people of the borough are generally satisfied and in almost every case the dissatisfaction was of trival nature.

The Don't C Club Entertained.

"The Citizens' Don't C" Club, of the borough, was entertained last evening by Miss Mary Hoagland, of Linden avenue, and many passers-by were puzzled to see the initials of the club displayed in front of the house with illuminated lanterns, but anyone curious enough to ask was willingly informed and their anxiety was set at rest. The club is composed of young women of the borough, but guests were present from Philadelphia, New York, Somerville, Bound Brook and this city. After the regular routine business was considered, the guests indulged in playing games of all kinds, after which refreshments were served. Before the guests departed each one was presented with a beautiful souvenir. All present pronounced Miss Hoagland the queen of entertainers.

A Dialect Recital.

Polk Miller, who appears in the Y. M. C. A. Star Course Thanksgiving night, is strongly commended by Chauncey M. Depew, Thomas Nelson Page, Ex-Governor Fitzhugh Lee, and other well-known men. Mr. Miller will give his dialect recital, consisting of stories, sketches and songs, illustrative of old times in the south, with the old Virginia plantation negro as a central figure.

Will Not Join Citizens' Ticket.

Deepite all rumors to the contrary, Thomas A. Cuming will not be the candidate for Second ward Councilman on the Citizens' ticket this election. To a Press reporter Mr. Cuming stated positively that he was not a candidate and that he would not accept the nomination under any circumstances He will remain with the Republican party.

SOME NOTED NOVELISTS.

EARLY AMERICAN WRITERS TALKED ABOUT BY PROF. SMYTH.

Washington Irving and James Fenimore Cooper, Their Life and Their Abilities, Dwelt Upon Interestingly.

Washington Irving and the New York writers were the subject of Professor Albert H. Smyth's third lecture in the University Extension course last night at the Y. M. C. A. The two most prominent figures were Irving, and James Fenimore Cooper, the novelist.

Irving was born in New York in 1783, and came from good old Orkney Island stock, just as James Russel Lowell's ancestors did. Like a great many later writers, Irving made his first start in literature by writing news letters for the press, the first publications being letters in the morning Chronicle. Washington Irving acted as minister to Spain and was an attache to the court of St. James during his life. He also took some interest in business, enough to represent his brother in Europe, but Irving's pen was the real means of his livlihood, although his books never brought him in anywhere near the sum people used to think they did.

Irving's works became popular both in his own country and in England. He died in 1859, the same year that saw the departure of so many famous men of letters. Irving lived to a ripe old age, and spent the last few years of his life at Sunnyside, near Tarrytown, New York.

Cooper became a novelist by reading a dull book, written by an author of the time, dealing with the courts and the society of England. The book was so dull that Cooper threw it down in disgust remarking, "I could write a better story than that myself." At the suggestion of his wife Cooper did write a book, but it was duller and more common place than the English novel.

When the book was shown to his friends, a good critic urged Cooper to write a book laying his plot in the wilderness, and with backwoodsmen and Indians for his characters. Cooper did so, and turned out the famous "Leather Stocking Tales," which have been read by millions in America, and translated into foreign languages.

Cooper was familiar, too, with the sea, and wrote sea tales of much interest. Cooper had no eye to details, and there are many things about his writings that a critic can easily pick out. But his stories run along in an interesting strain, holding the readers attention until the end.

VAUGHN GETS TWO YEARS.

Love Affairs Will Not Trouble Oscar for Awhile.

Poor Oscar Vaughn! Two months ago the redoubtable Oscar announced that he would be married November 22d, which was yesterday. But how unkind was fate. Instead Oscar, handcuffed to a horse thief, was escorted to the State prison in Trenton, his hair cropped close to the head, his body covered with a striped suit and he was introduced to the lock-step and other routine affairs of a prison life.

It will be remembered that Vaughn's last escapade was the renting of a room in a boarding house in Bayonne, and after the landlady had got out of his sight he made off with a number of valuables. He was soon after arrested and taken to the Hudson county jail in Jersey City. Monday he was tried, convicted and sentenced to two years in State prison. Yesterday he was taken to prison by Deputy Sheriff Hague, of Jersey City, together with Frank Rehm, a horse thief.

Cut His Right Hand.

John Schaeffer, of Dunellen, aged 20 years, an employe at the Climax Bottle Stopper Works, sustained a severe laceration of his right hand this forenoon while at work. He was taken to the hospital, where proper treatment was given. It is thought that he may possibly lose one finger, although the injury is not considered serious to any further extent.

A Difficult Operation.

One of the most difficult operations ever performed at Muhlenberg Hospital was performed Saturday by the hospital staff on the person of Peter V. Huff, 48 years old, of Somerville. Huff's intestines were removed and placed in position again, and now the patient is doing nicely and is expected to recover.

A Sacred Concert.

The sacred concert to be given in the First Baptist church by the choir will take place Monday evening, December 12th, and the proceeds will be devoted to the Sunday-school of the church.

CITIZENS' TICKET PICKED TONIGHT.

Committee of Forty Will Meet to Nominate Tonight.

PETITIONS TO GO OUT.

FOURTH WARD CITIZENS NAME THEIR WARD CANDIDATES.

James Davis Will Run for Fourth Ward Councilman on Citizens' Ticket—Second Ward Committee of Ten Announced—Mr. Miner Will Not Accept Appointment—Third Ward Not Filled.

Tonight the committee of forty, that is to be the head of the Citizens' movement, will hold its first meeting at Councilman Elmore D. Moffett's office. At the meeting the candidates for the city ticket will be discussed and picked out Their acceptances will be secured and petitions started for their nominations. As the Citizens' party is not a party at all in the eyes of the law, it will be necessary to nominate by petition all the candidates on that ticket. These petitions are to be prepared at once.

The First and Fourth ward committees of ten that are to go toward the formation of the committee of forty have been appointed and their composition announced in The Daily Press. This morning the committee of ten from the Second ward was announced. It is composed of five Republicans and five Democrats, as follows: Willard M. Miner, Robert B. Waldo, Seymour G. Smith, Charles Ross and Henry Miller; Democrats, Sylvester Sharkey, James B. Guttridge, Hezekiah Hand, J. B. Mills and Leonard Spangenberg.

To a Press reporter this morning Mr. Miner, who is named on the committee, stated that he would not have anything to do with the Citizens' movement, but would stand by the action taken by Mr. Cuming, whose candidacy he supported at the Republican primary.

The Fourth ward Citizens' committee met last evening at the home of Jacob Kriney and placed in nomination three candidates on their ward ticket. Mr. Kriney was selected as the chairman of the meeting, and Geo. O. Stevens was the secretary. After due consideration James Davis, bookkeeper at Boice, Runyon & Company's coal yard, was placed on the ticket for Councilmanic honors. For Justice of the Peace Adam Young was named, and Peter V. Weaver was nominated for constable. Everything was done in harmony and each candidate nominated harmoniously.

The committee of ten from the Third ward will be appointed today.

Councilman Hetfield announces that he is not a candidate for the nomination for the City Judgeship on the Citizens' ticket.

Mr. Cuming Not a Citizens' Man.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—It has come to my knowledge that the leaders of the Citizens' movement are using my name to aid them in the formation of a complete ticket. I have already stated publicly that I am not, and do not expect to be, connected with the Citizens' movement, nor have I at any time seriously considered such a step.

The ticket nominated at the Second ward primary Monday night we consider an excellent one, and one which we believe will accomplish the same ends that we were striving for.

Thos. A. Cuming.

His Services Appreciated.

The fifth anniversary of Silas Yerkes' connection as teacher with the women's Bible class in Hope Chapel, was observed last night in a social way. There was a large turn out of the members of the class, fully 150 being present. There was vocal and instrumental music by the ladies, and addresses were made by Superintendent Squires Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, and Mr. Yerkes, in which the speakers touched upon the growth of the class and the harmony that existed between teacher and pupils. A table, to be used in the class room, was presented to Mr. Yerkes as a token of the esteem in which he is held.

Entertained Her Scholars.

Mrs. Powell, of Fairview avenue, entertained her Sunday school class from Grace M. E. church last evening. The full membership was present and the time passed in playing games, and in sociability. During the evening refreshments were served by the hostess.

—The Christian and Missionary Alliance will meet in the rooms of the W. C. T. U. for Gospel service tomorrow evening at 7:15.

Miss Mary Peterson, a niece of William J. Pearson, of Vine street, is detained at the latter's home with diphtheria.

SENOR IGLESIAS HERE

The President of Costa Rica Comes to Our Shores for Rest.

TO VISIT PRES. M'KINLEY

Said to be a Trip for Health and Pleasure Only. The Republic's Right in the Canal Question. Stability of the New Central American Republic.

New York, Nov. 23.—Senor Don Rafael Iglesias, president of the republic of Costa Rica, who was granted a six months' leave of absence on account of failing health, arrived here yesterday from Port Limon on the Atlas liner Altai.

He was met down the bay by Colonel W. H. Carter, assistant adjutant general, who came from Washington as the personal representative of President McKinley, and Dr. Juan J. Ulloa, consul general of Costa Rica to the United States.

The meeting on the deck of the Altai was of the most friendly sort, and Colonel Carter, after welcoming Senor Iglesias to this country, said that he had made all the necessary arrangements for a public or private reception, whichever was agreeable.

President Iglesias said that as he is travelling practically incognito and not on national business, he was opposed to display. He had simply come here for pleasure and the benefit of his health and expects to take a trip to England and France and on his way home will spend some time in the United States.

The president of Costa Rica, with the members of his party, were taken from the steamship aboard the army tug General Meigs, and landed at the foot of east Twenty-sixth street.

From there they were driven to a hotel.

President Iglesias was accompanied by Colonel Leonolo Bonilla, Dr. Antonio Giustaniani, Francisco Quezada, his private secretary; Ricardo Iglesias, his brother; W. H. Lynn, his brother-in-law; Mrs. Lynn and her two daughters, Miss Piza and General John S. Casement, a contractor engaged on the Costa Rica and Pacific Railroad. The latter resides at Plainsville, O.

The visit here of President Iglesias at the present time, when there is so much talk of the building of the canal across Nicaragua, is believed to have been brought about by the recent concession granted to the Grace syndicate, which goes into effect in October, 1899. When this concession was announced it was stated that Costa Rica's opposition could not in any way affect the new grant.

President Iglesias, when spoken to about the proposed canal yesterday, said that Costa Rica has important rights which it has reserved, and indicated that it was not all plain sailing for the new syndicate. Further he would not discuss the matter.

Dr. Ulloa said that the reason that Costa Rica has not joined the Republic of Central America, which is composed of San Salvador, Nicaragua and Honduras, is because the coalition is looked upon as an experiment, and not by any means as a staple compact.

The revolt now in progress in San Salvador, he added, is a serious one and is the outcome of the union which went into effect on November 1.

The Open-Door Policy.

London, Nov. 23.—Most of the afternoon newspapers comment upon and express sitisfaction at the "open door" intentions of the United States in the Philippine islands.

The Pall Mall Gazette says: "Whatever may happen in Porto Rico and eventually in the United States themselves, America's colonial policy in the Pacific is the 'open door.'

"It is a wise decision on every ground—in the interests of the prosperity of the Philippines themselves and as securing the good will of nations really friendly to America in the Pacific. The community of interests of the two English speaking nations are thereby definitely assured."

The Situation in China.

Pekin, Nov. 23.—The projected birthday audience of the dowager empress to the women of the diplomatic corps has fallen through, owing to the difficulties raised by the Chinese in regard to ceremonial matters.

The ministers of the foreign powers insisted that foreign interpreters should accompany the European women. To this the Chinese objected.

The health of the emperor of China is said to be again causing grave anxiety to those about him. He is described as being unable to walk unassisted and it is expected in well informed circles that his end is near.

The Dreyfus Case.

Paris, Nov. 23.—Lieutenant Colonel Picquart, who has been confined in the Cherche Midi military prison for some time, on the charge of revealing the contents of certain important military documents to a lawyer engaged in his defence, was taken from the prison by a side door yesterday and was driven to the court of cassation.

The court, however, was fully occupied with the examination of Generals Boisdeffre and Gonse, and was unable to hear him, and he was taken back to the Cherche Midi prison without testifying in the Dreyfus case.

The Silverware Trust.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 23.—Representatives of the important silverware firm of R. Wallace & Sons, at Wallingford, Conn., say that it has not joined the new combination nor been approached on the subject for several weeks.

At Meriden, Conn., several firms have thus far refused to join, while others have of late been active in promoting the trust.

A Virginia Election Contest.

Norfolk, Va., Nov. 23.—R. A. Wise, the defeated Republican candidate in the Second Virginia congressional district, has decided to contest Young's seat in Congress.

He charges gross irregularities. He contested against Mr. Young two years ago and won the seat.

PORTER STARTS FOR CUBA.

He Goes on Important Mission for the President.

New York, Nov. 23.—Mr. Robert P. Porter, United States commissioner appointed by the president to draft tariff regulations for Cuba, left here yesterday for Boston, where he will sail today for Santiago on the Admiral Dewey, the first of the auxiliary cruiser class of merchant vessels constructed since the war with Spain.

Mr. Porter expects to return to this city the latter part of December. His stay in Cuba would doubtless have been longer had it not been for the fact that almost on the eve of his departure he learned that the government had decided to defer until January 1 American occupation of the port of Cienfuegos.

Mr. Porter said: "It is to be regretted that the government finds it impossible to take possession of Cienfuegos at once. Of course there are reasons of which we know nothing which render delay imperative. The port of Cienfuegos is more desirable at present even than Havana. It is a modern city a city of business people. Cienfuegos has suffered less from the war than any other port in Cuba. The Spanish commander there, whom I met on the occasion of my recent trip to Cuba, is of the Cervera type—a high-minded man who will offer no obstruction to American occupation. The people of Cienfuegos are neither pro-Spanish nor pro-Cuban. They will welcome a stable government."

The mission which Mr. Porter has undertaken at the request of the president is one of the most important ever intrusted to an American citizen. Upon the success or failure of his work depends the whole future of Cuba. It is a many-sided task, but his acknowledged pre-eminence as a tariff expert fits him peculiarly for the work.

DISORDERS IN PORTO RICO.

An Encouraging Report from Gen. Brooke.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—The war department has received a dispatch from General Brooke about the disorders in the island of Porto Rico. The reports were of such a character as to give the department some concern, as it was alleged that United States troops were making serious trouble for the inhabitants of the island.

General Brooke was asked by cable for a statement of the case and requested to make an investigation. His reply is as follows:

Ponce, November 21.

Advices received daily from San Sebastian and other troublesome regions. Disorders were reported from that part of the island immediately after it came into our possession, but I have had it thoroughly patrolled and am still patrolling it. Everything quiet for three or four weeks.

Several bandits have been killed or wounded by patrols.

Reports very much exaggerated. Every point has been heard from to-day and quiet and good order prevail.

BROOKE.

A Government Beef Contract.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—The war department has made a contract with J. W. Overton of Texas for furnishing beef to interior garrisons of United States troops in Cuba at 3-4 cents per pound.

This beef is to be driven to the garrison points and delivered dressed to the commissary department. These interior points will not include places which can be reached by rail from seaports, and only such towns in the interior where small garrisons are stationed.

The subsistence department will supply the seaport and railway points with dressed beef from the United States, which can be transported in refrigerator ships.

Quay Will Plead To-day.

Philadelphia, Nov. 23.—Senator Matthew S. Quay will appear before the bar of quarter sessions court No. 3, at 10 o'clock to-day to answer to the indictments presented by the grand jury, charging conspiracy unlawfully to use funds belonging to the state.

With him as fellow defendants will appear his son, Richard R. Quay, and ex-State Treasurer Benjamin J. Haywood, and the pleas of the defendants will be received and the time of the trial definitely fixed. The defendants will plead not guilty.

Sagasta Disclaims Repudiation.

London, Nov. 23.—A Madrid dispatch to the Central News says that Premier Sagasta in response to a question last evening, declared that in the event of Cuban insolvency, Spain, as the guarantor of the Cuban debt, would endeavor to make some arrangement with the Cuban bondholders.

The dispatch also says that Captain General Blanco has announced that he will shortly leave Havana for Spain.

Student Riot in Budapest.

Budapest, Nov. 23.—A demonstration of students occurred in front of the Hungarian chamber of deputies yesterday, and the police, who attempted to disperse the crowd, were attacked with showers of stones.

The disorder was finally quelled and a number of the ringleaders were arrested.

An Exposition at Caracas.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—The state department has been informed that a national exposition of works of art and of natural, agricultural and manufactured products will be held at Caracas, the capital of Venezuela, beginning January 1, 1900, and closing on April 27 following.

Recall of the Peruvian Minister.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—Dr. Von Victor Eguiguren, minister from Peru to the United States, was received by the president in the blue room of the White House yesterday, and presented his letters of recall. He was accompanied by Secretary Hay.

Secretary Long Goes Home.

When the children are hungry, what do you give them? Food.
When thirsty? Water.
Now use the same good common sense, and what would you give them when they are too thin? The best fat-forming food, of course

NEGOTIATION RUMORS

How Spain May Treat Our Recent Demands.

DESPATCH FROM JUDGE DAY

Her Commissioners Undecided After Long Discussion. A Prediction that She Will Refuse Our Offer for the Philippines, but Let Us Work Our Will.

Paris, Nov. 23.—The Spanish peace commissioners telegraphed to Madrid the substance of the United States' memorandum presented Monday, and late in the evening discussed it among themselves.

As late as one o'clock Tuesday morning a Spanish commissioner affirmed that he and his colleagues did not know what to do regarding the American offer.

There is a difference of opinion among unofficial persons near the commissions, but the prediction is made that Spain will decline the American offer of money, that she will refuse to cede the Philippines, and will say to the United States:

"You may take the archipelago because you have the power to do so. As you advance we will retire, protesting against greedy aggression. We will faithfully carry out our protocol pledges, and leave Cuba and Porto Rico in your hands. You came here to engage in a discussion under the terms of the protocol; but, you evidently meant, when drawing up that document, to provide a conference in which, though we differ, man to man, you proposed to announce at the proper time what you will do, whether we agree to it or object. Such an attitude robs the conference of a negotiative character, and sets up the United States as a dominant power whose first purpose is to listen, but whose ultimate determination is to do its own will."

It is said that Senor Montero Rios, president of the Spanish commission, at the conference, remarked, after having heard the American offer, that if the vital portion had been read the Spaniards could answer it instantly; but, as the memorandum was very long, they would postpone their answer until Wednesday, adding that it would be easily possible to make it within forty-eight hours.

On the other hand, it is asserted that the Spaniards cannot justify themselves before their people and others by throwing away $20,000,000, added to the inevitable loss of the Philippine islands.

The Gaulois says: "The commissions being divided into an equal number of voices on the subject of the cession or retention of the archipelago, a recourse to arbitration is absolutely necessary and legal. The Americans, nevertheless, refuse to do so, and attribute to themselves sovereignty over the Philippines without the consent of the conference. They, therefore, themselves, tear up the protocol they had imposed upon the vanquished, and to keep up appearances and soften in the eyes of the world the violence of their proceedings, they offer the absurd compensation of $20,000,000."

A Despath from Judge Day.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—At the cabinet meeting yesterday a brief telegram was read which had been sent from Paris by Judge Day. It was substantially in accord with the newspaper reports of the proceedings.

No reference was made to any excitement attending the meeting, or to any open disagreement. It was stated that the next meeting would take place to-day, when a reply from the Spanish commissioners was expected.

The cabinet discussed the matter and it was the judgment of the members that there will be at least one more meeting after to-day, even if the Spaniards conclude to reject the American proposals.

No doubt is entertained among members of the cabinet that the peace treaty will be signed within the next few days.

The cabinet also discussed the Cuban situation, and it was brought out that the Spaniards hope to be able to complete the evacuation of Havana by December 20.

Anti-Scalping Law Invalid.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 23.—The court of appeals reversed the decision of the appellate division in the case of Geo. Tyler for a writ of mandamus to compel the warden of the New York prison to release him from custody, in which is involved the constitutionality of the so-called anti-scalping law.

The lower court held by a unanimous decision that the selling of tickets by Tyler, for which he was arrested and sent to jail, was contrary to the anti-scalping law, which law does not violate the state or the national constitution of the interstate commerce act.

This decision declares the anti-scalping law unconstitutional and orders the release of Tyler.

NO WASTE OF WORDS.

Judge Frank Ives of District Court of Crookston, Minn., says: For some time I have used Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets with seeming great benefit with few exceptions, I have not been so free from indigestion in twenty-five years.

George W. Roosevelt, U. S. Consul to Brussels, Belgium: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, safe, pleasant to take, convenient to carry, give keen apptite, perfect digestion.

Mr. W. D. Tomlin, mechanical engineer, Duluth, Minn.: One box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets has done its work, and I am again gaining flesh and strength.

O. E. Ransom, Hustonville, Ky.: I was distressed and annoyed for two or three years with throwing up food, often two or three times a day; had no certainty of retaining a meal if I ate one. Four boxes of the tablets from my druggist have fully cured me. I find them pleasant to take, convenient to carry.

Rev G. D. Brown, Mondovi, Wis.: The effects of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets is simply marvelous; a quite hearty dinner of broiled beefsteak causes no distress since I begun their use.

Over six thousand people in the state of Michigan alone in 1894 were cured of stomach troubles by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Full sized packages may be found at all druggists at 50 cents, or sent by mail on receipt of price from F. A. Stuart Co., Marshall, Mich.

THE SHARKEY-CORBETT MILL

Tom Sharkey the Winner in the Ninth Round on a Foul.

A Crowd to See the Fight.

New York, Nov. 23.—After several weeks of severe preparation the heavyweight boxers, Jim Corbett and Tom Sharkey, met last evening in a 20-round contest at the Lenox Club.

The struggle was for a purse of $20,000, 75 per cent to the winner and 25 per cent. to the loser.

The crowd for the fight gathered early. The doors were opened at 6.15, and immediately the $3 seats at the end of the hall began to fill.

Sharkey arrived at 8.15 o'clock with George Dixon. The crowd outside recognized him and there was a great cheer.

The police arrangements inside and outside were perfect. Chief Devery himself was present and Inspector McLaughlin had charge of the details. There were one hundred and fifty policemen in all.

There was a rumor current to the effect that in the event of Sharkey adopting tactics of a rough order the police would stop the fight.

The big contest began at 10.56 o'clock. Sharkey's seconds were Tom O'Rourke, Jack Dougherty and George Dixon.

George Considine, Charley White, Connie McVey and Paddy Gorman were behind Corbett.

The Lenox Athletic Club building was crowded to its utmost capacity when the first bout was called. City officials and prominent business men were in evidence.

The betting was lively, the prevailing odds being 100 to 80 on Corbett. Tom O'Rourke was said to have wagered $800 to $1,000 on his man, Sharkey, at the ringside. Denny Sullivan and Billy Long also backed Sharkey at the prevailing odds, and Joe Vendig bet $1,500 to $1,200 on Corbett.

Round 1.—Sharkey rushed Corbett and missed a right swing. Sharkey landed on Corbett's jaw and body and had the best of the round.

Round 2.—Both men rushed each other. Corbett jabbed Sharkey in the face. Sharkey floored Corbett with a right on the jaw. Corbett got up quickly. Sharkey landed a right on the jaw. Corbett was excited.

Round 3.—Corbett jabbed Sharkey in the face. Sharkey's right to ribs. Sharkey's left to face. Corbett's left to body. Corbett clinched repeatedly to save himself. Corbett seemed to have gone back.

Round 5.—Sharkey landed on Corbett's face several times, Corbett returning with left. Both men were tired when the bell rang.

Round 6.—Sharkey landed two lefts on Corbett's face, shoving Corbett's head back. Sharkey rushed Corbett hard, landing on face and body. Corbett's returns seemed to lack speed. It was Sharkey's round.

Round 7.—Sharkey rushed Corbett, landing on face, kidney and ribs, Jim returning lightly. Both landed with lefts on face and body as bell rang. Both very tired.

Round 8.—Sharkey continued to land on ear, face and jaw; Corbett jabbing at the body. Corbett landed two hard lefts and a right, but Sharkey returned fiercely. Sharkey reached Corbett's face as bell rang.

Round 9.—Both landed on face. McVey jumped into the ring and a foul was allowed.

All bets were declared off.

SPAIN DISPOSED TO YIELD.

Grumbling However Over America's Demand.

Madrid, Nov. 23.—The proposals of the United States peace commissioners have been received here without any public sensation. The general feeling is in favor of a speedy ending of the negotiations.

The newspapers lament the "ungenerosity" of the United States in offering "such a small indemnity."

They think that Japan or some of the European powers would have paid a higher price.

There are those who contend that it would be better to decline indemnity altogether, because the government could then decline responsibility for the Philippine debt.

There is much irritation at the severity of Europe. The Imparcial has the following:

"President McKinley now boasts of having himself written the protocol in order to mislead Spain. This is adding insult to injury. Yet Europe looks on undisturbed. All ideas of justice have vanished from the world."

British Island for Us.

London, Nov. 23.—The Daily Chronicle publishes a dispatch from Vienna according to which England has ceded on lease to the United States for a naval coaling station, the island of Sokotra, off the gulf of Aden, the American government undertaking to erect on it two lighthouses, but not to fortify the island or sell coal here, as this would injure the British coal trade of Perim and Aden.

The Chronicle adds editorially:

"We are doing a good deal for America just now, and everybody in this country will be glad of it; but we shall all be the more interested to learn what she is proposing to do for us in return."

Sultan Shuts an Orphanage.

London, Nov. 23.—The Constantinople correspondent if the Daily Chronicle says:

The sultan has ordered the closing of an orphanage at Zeitung which shelters sixty homeless victims of the Armenian troubles. The institution is admirably managed by American missionaries, being chiefly supported by British charity.

Mr. Oscar Strauss, the United States minister, and Sir Nicholas O'Conor, the British ambassador, are both intervening energetically.

THE JOINT HIGH COMMISSION.

The Bering Sea Question Likely Soon to be Settled.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—The Bering sea question was the main topic before the joint high commission yesterday, when it resumed its sessions after several days' recess.

For the first time the two sides were prepared to exchange their estimates on the value of the Canadian sealing fleet, the purpose being to arrive at some fair valuation and retire the fleet by purchase.

The initial steps in this direction were taken while the commission was at Quebec, since which time Captains H. T. Taylor, on behalf of the Canadians, and M. Thayer on behalf of the Americans, have been making appraisals of the fleet.

After several weeks at Victoria, Messrs. Taylor and Thayer have arrived here, accompanied by Captain Cox, who represents the sealers. The two appraisers made their reports to the respective sides, and these reports in turn were exchanged by the commissioners with a view to reaching a common ground of agreement.

It is understood that both appraisals are considerably below what was expected, and that instead of running into millions, they do not much exceed half a million.

Under such circumstances strong hopes are expressed by members of the commission that a sum may be agreed upon for the buying out of this industry, and the final settlement of this long pending and vexatious controversy. It is said, however, that there is still considerable difference between the appraisals of the Canadian and the American expert, which will have to be reconciled before an agreement is possible.

After the joint meeting of the commission, a special committee, consisting of Lord Herschell and Sir Louis Davies, Senator airbanks and ex-Secretary Foster, took up the Bering sea estimates. Besides the written reports of the appraisers, the latter were called in person and examined regarding the sealing fleet.

HAVANA OURS DECEMBER 20.

Spaniards Say They Can Turn the City Over to Us Then.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—Notice has been received from the Spanish evacuation commissioners that it will be possible to turn the city of Havana over to the military authorities of the United States by December 20.

In view of this announcement and of the difficulty of securing another suitable port on the south side of Cuba in place of Cienfuegos, it is probable that no further attempt will be made to open a port there for the benefit of the sugar planters.

It was not explained that the removal of Spanish troops from Havana could be accomplished before January 1, but as better progress is reported and thirty transports have sailed from Spain to bring back the army, the Spanish authorities feel justified in fixing December 20 as the date of evacuation.

Cienfuegos will probably be the port from which the last of the Spanish troops in Cuba will embark for home.

DANGERS OF IMPERIALISM.

President McKinley Warned by Andrew Carnegie.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 23.—Andrew Carnegie called upon the president yesterday to warn him of the tremendous dangers to which he was subjecting his party and the country by the adoption of the imperialistic policy. Mr. Carnegie said:

"No country is good enough to rule any other country, any more than one man is good enough to hold another in subjection. I do not believe in vassal states. I want the republic kept squarely on the foundations of the fathers, in whose doctrines of liberty I have not lost faith. England's greatest weakness to-day is the possession of colonies, which necessarily diverts her attention from home problems and needs. I do not believe in shooting down insurgents, and if it keeps on I hope the insurgents will also do some shooting."

Ensign Curtin and His Bride.

Bellefonte, Pa., Nov. 23.—Ensign Roland I. Curtin, United States navy, has arrived at his home in this place with his bride, who was Miss May Radolph Hamersly of New York.

Ensign Curtin has been assigned to the Massachusetts since his unprecedented performance at Ponce, where, acting for Captain Davis of the Wasp, he demanded and received the surrender of that port by telephone.

A reception was given in honor of the young officer and his bride last evening by his grandmother, Mrs. Katharine Curtin, widow of the old war governor of Pennsylvania, and a public reception is being arranged for him by the citizens of the town.

Gold Fever in Ohio.

Alliance, O., Nov. 23.—The eastern portion of Carroll county is ablaze with excitement over recent discoveries.

Farms which two weeks ago were worth but thirty dollars an acre cannot be purchased now for five times that amount.

The cause of this is the alleged gold discovery on the Leyder farm of an outcropping of mineral bearing rock ten days ago, and the finding of gold rock on the farm of Andrew Emmons last Thursday.

Manila's Sick Report.

Manila, Nov. 23.—Following is the sick report for the week just ended: Typhoid fever 107, malarial fever 612, dysentery 99, diarrhoea 208, all other intestinal troubles 42, gastric fever 24, wounds and other injuries 85, heat 4, small pox 35, including seven Spaniards, all other sicknesses 659, total number of cases 1,875, as against 1,816 last week. There was only one death, caused by apoplexy following malarial fever.

Gen. Rios Reported Killed.

Madrid, Nov. 23.—Via Biarritz, France.—News has just been received here that General Rios, governor of the Visayas islands, has been killed by the Tagalos at Iloilo.

ROOSEVELT TESTIFIES

His Story of the Embarkation and Struggle at Siboney

SOME CONFUSION AT TAMPA

The Rough Rider Leader Appears Before the War Board. Gives Col. Wood Much Credit. Accommodations for the Men Were Not as Good as They Should Have Been.

New York, Nov. 23.—Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who served with the First United States volunteer cavalry in the war with Spain, appeared before the war investigating commission which is sitting at the Fifth Avenue hotel, yesterday afternoon.

When the colonel entered the room he shook hands with every member of the commission, after which he took a seat in a corner to wait for the witness then on the stand to finish her testimony.

It was 3.35 o'clock when Colonel Roosevelt was called to the stand. He took the oath, and, in answering to questions by General Wilson, said:

"I was lieutenant colonel of the First Volunteer Cavalry, which I formed at San Antonio. It was due, I think, to Colonel Wood that the regiment was equipped and got into the field of action so quickly. I acted as lieutenant colonel from May 6 to July 8, and from August 1 to September 5 as brigade commander."

"Did the men have sabres?"

"No sir; they were to have had machetes, but it was just as well that they never got machetes. They had Krag-Jorgenson rifles and revolvers."

"Were your men properly rationed in San Antonio?"

"I don't know about San Antonio. I was so busy learning my own duties that I couldn't tell whether the food was all right or not. But at Tampa there was a period of twenty-four hours when there was considerable confusion. I had to buy food for the men, but after we got to the camp outside of the town everything went smoothly."

"Were you ever reimbursed for the food you bought the men?"

"Oh my, no! That was merely a personal matter. It was one on me."

"Who was responsible for the confusion at Tampa when your regiment was embarking?"

"I can't say. But it seems to me that it should have been known beforehand what regiments were going in certain transports. Colonel Wood found, after one hour and a half spent trying to get the quartermaster, that our regiment was assigned to the Yucatan. Then I found that the Yucatan had also been assigned to the Second infantry and the Seventy-first regiment New York volunteers, and I had to go aboard the Yucatan and hold the transport down against the Second infantry and the 71st New York."

"Who do you think was responsible for this confusion, the department or some of the officers there?"

"That I would not know. I was only a lieuntenant colonel at that time."

"What were the accommodations for the men?"

"They were not as good as I could have wished. Still they were not bad, and the men had the liberty of the deck. The only bad food was the canned corned beef. An arrangement was made by which the men could boil their coffee at the galleys and the men arrived in Cuba in good condition."

"There was little facility for unloading the transports on lighters. One of my horses was drowned in landing but General Wood got both of his horses through.

"We reached Siboney at nine o'clock on the night of the day we landed. After supper General Wood informed us that we were to start on the next morning and catch the Spaniards. The next morning's march was a hard one, especially for Rough Riders. There was no opportunity for flankers, and it was so hot that about one hundred men dropped out for a while. When the first Spanish outpost was discovered General Wood ordered silence in the ranks, and I was sent to the right to deploy with the right wing.

"When the Spaniards began firing I didn't at first know what to make of it. I had never seen smokeless powder at work before. A newspaper man was with me when the firing first began, and he called my attention to the Spanish hats in the distance across the ravine.

"We soon routed the men and word was sent around that Colonel Wood was shot. But I soon found the colonel and when I asked him where the Spaniards were, he said: 'They have run away.'

"Then the fighting was over, and we captured, among other things, Spanish mules loaded with beans, of which we were in need, and we cooked the beans for supper that night, and that ended the battle of Las Guasimas."

"After the first battle, and before all the provisions had been landed," he said, "our men wanted beans and tomatoes. There was none, the commissary of Siboney said, for the men, but there were some for the officers. The commissary would not even let the men buy these things, saying that they were for officers only. So I had to stretch my conscience as much as possible, and loaded two horses with beans and tomatoes for officers which I immediately distributed to the men. That put them in good condition for the next battle."

Colonel Roosevelt then narrated the other skirmishes and the battle of San Juan Hill.

Colonel Roosevelt paid tribute to Assistant Surgeon James R. Church of the Rough Riders, a former Princeton football player, who, he said, frequently ran to the front, and, putting a man on his shoulder, would dash with him to the rear.

He also told how admirably General Youngs handled the brigade until he got ill.

The colonel called attention to the [illegible] of the smokeless powder over black powder, especially in the case of artillery.

The black smoking powder of the Americans made an excellent target for the Spaniards.

The sudden death of City Judge George W. DeMeza deprives Plainfield of one of its most successful and honored members of the bar. His career, successful beyond the ordinary point in view of his youth, is an evidence of what American push and pluck can accomplish when guaged and inspired by a sense of the honorable and a desire to occupy a creditable position, socially and professionally, in the community.

Organization of Legislature.

The matter of organizing the next Legislature is now occupying the attention of the big-fry Republicans, and in all the talk Union and Somerset counties figure conspicuously. The interview in The Daily Press last week in which Assemblyman Murray announced his opposition to the reelection of Speaker Watkins aroused a great deal of interest and comment, but thus far Mr. Murray has not secured much support for his ideas in this respect

A large number of politicians and members of the Legislature gathered at Trenton yesterday and gossiped about probable results. Assemblyman Murray urged as a solution of the problem that Speaker Watkins accept the post of leader and leave that of Speaker for some one else. He urged that the position of leader was the more important of the two, and argued long and earnestly in that direction, but did not appear to make any converts to his view of the situation.

Senators Ketcham and Reed, two of the aspirants for the position of president of the Senate, exchanged congratulations and wished each other success. A number of Senators were on hand, and some had letters received from Franklin Murphy, chairman of the State committee, urging Essex's claim to recognition in behalf of Senator Ketcham. It was argued that, while the county has saved the Legislature for the Republicans two years in succession, it has not had the presiding officer of either House in many years, while Somerset had the presidency of the Senate three years ago and Bergen has only been in the Republican column three years.

Senator Reed's friends, on the other hand, claim that he is the proper man to preside over a body with such an aggressive minority as the Senate is expected to have next year. While this is about the only office in doubt, it is attracting as much attention as if the entire Senate slate depended on the disposition of it.

An Important Bill.

Among the new measures likely to be introduced into the next Legislature is a bill to create the office of Register of Deeds in Union county. The office at present is combined with that of County Clerk, and the argument advanced is that the work is too great and compensation too large for one official. The compensation is said to be about $15,000 a year, and, with the office of Register of Deeds created, the compensation would be about divided in half.

As the time for the nominating conventions draws closer the politicians seem to be getting together and harmonizing their differences and subserving their aspirations for party success.

Among the possibilities for the Mayoralty nomination on the Citizens' ticket is former Councilman V. L. Frazee. His many friends are urging him to go into the race.

Drop politics tomorrow long enough to attend the union Thanksgiving services in the local churches. It will be better for you and all mankind.

Tomorrow is the sad day for the Hon. Mr. Gobbler.

LITTLE HOPE FOR THE MARIA TERESA.

It now appears that there is little chance of the Spanish cruiser Maria Teresa being added to the Navy of the United States. She lies badly wrecked on the shore of Cat Island, and, although the naval repair ship, Vulcan, was sent to the scene to put the disabled ship in condition to be moved to Norfolk, late reports indicate that she will probably have to be abandoned.

Things that Are Not Exactly News but Just as Interesting.

The semi-centennial convention of the Phi Delta Theta Fraternity, one of the oldest college secret societies of western origin, is being held in Columbus, Ohio, this week. The Fraternity, which was founded in 1846 at Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, has 10,000 names on its rolls, over 1,000 of them being of students now in college. There are 38 alumni chapters and 64 college chapters.

At the Board of Trade meeting last Monday night President Lounsbury read a letter from the postmaster at Plainfield, Mass., asking if there was not some one here who would send him a Plainfield, N. J., city directory for 1896 or 1897. Mr. Lounsbury suggested that the Board of Trade send him a new one, and it will be done. Plainfield, Mass, is a town of about 1,000 inhabitants, and the letter received by Mr. Lounsbury was in answer to one sent by him to the postmaster there telling him that a number of letters meant for Plainfield people, and with the name, street and number correct, but directed to Massachusetts, instead of New Jersey, found their way there every week. Mr. Lounsbury asked him to notice this and send them on here where they belong. In answer to Mr. Lounsbury's letter the postmaster said that 1,000 letters meant for Plainfield, N. J. people, found their way to his office every year, and he asked for this directory so as to be able to get them where they belong more quickly. There are 17 Plainfields in the United States, and a city by that name of 5,000 inhabitants, located in Connecticut, causes merchants here trouble some times.

THE AMUSEMENT WORLD.

CURRENT ATTRACTIONS THAT PLAINFIELDERS MAY WITNESS.

Local and Metropolitan Performances That Will Please Those Who Delight in the Art of Thespis and Mimic World.

The Burrill Comedy Company gave another excellent performance at Music Hall last night in the presentation of "Old Glory," a patriotic piece that found favor with the audience. It was staged prettily and its interesting story was depicted by characters that gave pathos, comedy and tragedy in well-guaged portions. Miss Nellie DeVeau, the little girl who is featured as a speciality artist, is already a favorite with Music Hall audiences. She has a coy way about her that her immature years makes very pleasing. Her voice, though tiny in its volume, is clear and musical, and her songs, always of the up-to date kind, make great hits. She is light and graceful on her feet and dances with a vim that would well become a veteran in her buck and steps. As a matter of fact she possesses a $100 medal that she won for her excellence in this particular. Her act amuses the little folks especially. Tonight the company will present "True as Steel," and tomorrow night "The Octoroon," both of which are worthy of patronage in the hands of as good a company as the Burrill aggregation. Matinees are given every day.

* * * * *

That famous comedy, "The Nancy Hanks," will be presented here at Music Hall, Nov. 29th. A prominent paper recently had this to say of the play and the company: "There was a large audience present last night when the comedy, 'The Nancy Hanks,' was given. The reception of the play and the players was hearty in the extreme, and the comedy may be said to have scored a hit. Unlike many of the farcical plays of the day, 'The Nancy Hanks,' has something of a plot. The scenes are laid in New York city and adjacent thereto. The Marquis de La Rochelle and Richard Chandos, are found in the first act to be in hard straits, and a board bill of some $200 stares them in the face. The Marquis is a Frenchman of royal blood, and as a last resort pawns his Legion of Honor decoration to relieve their immediate wants. Frank Tennehill, Jr, the author of the farce and an actor of considerable repute, capitally sustained the character of 'Chandos,' the pivotal part in the comedy. He is an excellent comedian and made a most favorable impression last evening. Harry Berlsford was very good as the 'Frenchman.' 'Madison Broadway,' a worldly New Yorker, was portrayed by Taylor Williams, who sang an excellent baritone song in the third act. Miss Ollie Lowe, as 'Frances Lakewood,' the newest woman, was excellent, and her part in a travesty on 'The Lady of Lyons,' with Mr. Tannehill, was cleverly done. One of the best impersonations was that of Mrs. F. A. Tennehill, evidently an actress of the old school, as 'Aunt Betty,' whose mind was always made up. Miss Carlotta, as 'Henrietta,' was excellent and her dance captured the audience."

—There will be Thanksgiving services at the Church of the Holy Cross tomorrow morning.

—Thomas Graham, the Scotch evangelist, will lead the East Third Street mission Thanksgiving services tomorrow night.

JOTTINGS OF THE DAY

ENTERPRISINGLY GATHERED AND CONCISELY TOLD BY REPORTERS.

Newsy Notes of More or Less Importance Bunched Together for the Ready Reference of Press Readers.

—The regular meeting of Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., will be held tomorrow evening.

—The regular meeting of Unity Lodge, Knights of Pythias, will be held this evening.

—The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the First Baptist church held a sewing meeting yesterday afternoon in the church parlors.

—The annual ball of the Order of Telegraph Operators will be given in Zouave Armory Hall in Elizabeth tonight. A number of Plainfielders will attend.

—John Keeley states that he did not demand $7 from Dr. Bondy for "trouble and expense," but it was for a legitimate bill that Dr. Bondy owed him for hack hire and borrowed money.

—The residence formerly occupied as the parsonage of the First M. E. church on Grove street, near Mercer avenue, presents a very attractive appearance with its fresh coat of paint and effective trimmings.

—The members of the Organized Aid Association of this city have been invited to attend the annual meeting of the Women's Civic Federation of Elizabeth, which will be held at the Second Presbyterian church, East Jersey street, Elizabeth, Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

—"Why didn't I come here first?" was what the lady said who saw Peck's stock of dress trimmings after she had purchased elsewhere. Peck does not know why she did not come, but he does know that the next time she wants anything in his line she will first come to Peck's.

—Major-General Fitzhugh Lee says "I know Polk Miller well. When he is sketching the 'foe 'de war' negro, if you did not know he was Polk Miller, you would think he was a darkey of the olden time." Uncle Remus says "He is the humorist the country has been looking for." If you want to enjoy "An Evening of Story and Song" hear Polk Miller at the Y. M. C. A. at the Star Course Thursday, Nov. 24th. Come prepared to laugh.

CHARLES L. STANLEY.

CHAPTER IX.

Ironically, indeed, did fate speed the bullets there at Arras. The young husband, adored and adoring, died. The man who prayed but for a soldier's death, the man whose hopeless ugliness forbade him hope of love and whose high honor would not let him tell the story of the wooing, he lived on.

And while De Guiche and Ragueneau are carrying away the grief stricken Roxane, Cyrano turns to the enemy. The fight had been growing fast and furious, and the captain of the cadets, wounded, is forced to fall back on the intrenchments. His discouraged company follow him, when Cyrano, mounting the breastworks amid the hail of shot, seizes the lance to which they had tied Roxane's handkerchief and shouts:

"Gascons! Gascons! Never turn your back!" The retreating cadets rally around Cyrano and the little white flag. The Gascon pipes strike up, and even the wounded try to crawl to the front. Roxane's gayly decorated carriage is suddenly turned into a fortress, bristling with arquebuses, and as the overwhelming Spanish forces swarm over the embankments Cyrano and his cadets meet them, singing:

"The bold cadets of Gascony,
Of Carbon of Castel-Jaloux!
Brawling, swaggering boastfully.
The bold cadets"—

But amid the storm of battle the song dies away.

Roxane, widowed, went back to Paris, but she was no more the "precieuse" Roxane. She sought the peace of the convent, not as a nun, for she would not so falsify the human love her heart held for the lover killed at Arras, but as a boarder merely. There she could brood upon her sorrow; there live again the brief hours she had lived with Christian. She had no duties save to his memory. She cherished in her heart all the words of fire and honey dew that once thrilled through her veins. Upon her bosom always lay the letter they found upon him there at Arras—the letter he had meant to send Roxane, a blood stained, tear stained missive.

She was not unhappy in the still convent and in the great park that surrounded it. At first De Guiche came often to her, but the great nobleman grew busier as years went by, and his calls upon her were less frequent. But Cyrano never failed her. Week after week, year after year, the same hour of the same day brought him to her, still the poet, the philosopher; still the warrior, fighting shams and wrongs with naked blade and knowing not the uses of diplomacy; always at heart the lover of Roxane, always in manner her faithful friend and always the light hearted jester of the old days, ready for a prank or a joke.

The good sisters liked him more than passing well. They liked the gossip of the court with which he brightened Roxane's days. They liked, sweet souls, his teasing of their piety.

One quiet autumnal day 15 years after the day when the white scarf of De Guiche had bade the Spanish attack at Arras, Roxane sat waiting for her friend. The leaves were falling, the chestnut trees about the chapel were already golden tinted and the quiet sadness of autumn was in the air. Under the trees in the park of the Sisters of the Holy Cross, Roxane had been receiving somewhat that afternoon. De Guiche had called upon her—changed, bent with weight of many honors. Le Bret had been there, telling her of Cyrano's impudences.

"True," she said, "he has never taught his tongue to wait upon his interests. He makes fresh enemies, I know. But still his sword is long. He holds his foes in check."

Le Bret had shaken his head dubiously. Then he had said: "I fear for him not simply an attack, but loneliness and hunger and the cold within his dreary chamber. He is poor, madame. He has but one shabby suit of serge."

"Ah," said the duke bitterly, remembering his own stifled conscience and starved soul, "he is not to be pitied!"

"The lord marshal of France may well make little of the trifling discomforts of my friend," Le Bret answered.

"I know that I have all and he has nothing," said De Guiche, "but I'd be proud to take his hand—I envy him. When life seems most successful, though one has won success by no foul means, even then there is a vague unrest. It's not remorse; it's disillusion. Ah, the ermined mantle of the duke rustles as it moves with sound of lost hopes and vain regrets, as a woman's gown sweeps dead leaves in its folds. * * * Cyrano's happier."

"You are pensive," said Roxane, thinking it was but a passing mood of the duke's.

The duke turned toward Le Bret as Roxane walked toward a sister in the garden.

"M. Le Bret," he said, "it is true that none dares openly attack your friend. But he has many foes. It was but yesterday at the queen's card table that I heard them say, 'Cyrano may die yet—by accident.' Bid him be prudent; stay at home."

"Cyrano prudent!" said Le Bret. "Ah, well, I'll warn him."

Then Roxane's callers had gone, and she waited with more longing and wistfulness in her heart than she herself even realized in the mellow afternoon for the coming of the one who all her troubled life had been her friend and helper.

Ragueneau was white to the very lips. His eyes stuck out with horror.

"Listen, listen!" he cried breathlessly. "Your friend—our friend—Cyrano"—

"What is it? What is it?" pressed Le Bret in terror, shaking the unnerved newsbearer's arm. "Speak quick, man! Speak!"

"He came from out his house just now—a little while ago. He turned the corner—he was coming here. I saw him. I hurried toward him, and I saw—from out a window, a lackey throw a block of wood. Perhaps an accident"—

ROXANE IN THE CONVENT GARDEN.

"But Cyrano? Oh, the cowards!"

"I ran. I saw him, sir, our friend, our poet, struck straight to the ground, bleeding from a great wound in his head!"

"Not dead? Not dead?" cried Le Bret in an agony of fear.

"Not yet. I bore him to his room—his garret."

"Does he suffer much?"

"Not at all. He is unconscious," replied Ragueneau.

"You called a doctor?"

"One came—he was charitable."

"My poor Cyrano! Roxane must not learn this too suddenly. What did the doctor say?"

"Oh, I don't know," said Ragueneau impatiently. "He spoke of fever—meningitis. But, pray you, come. He's all alone. Ah, could you see him—all his head bound up, his poor white face, unseeing eyes! Come! Should he come to himself and move upon his bed with no one near he'd die."

Ragueneau drags Le Bret away, and as the two hurry away by the colonnade leading to the chapel Roxane catches sight of them and gayly calls after them. They disappear without answering or hearing her.

Stories of the Street

Plainfield People are Talking About it on Every Corner.

It is sometimes an easy matter to fool the public, but you can't keep it up very long. They are sure to find you out; and every time a man is fooled another skeptic is made. Skepticism is allowable when reading in a home newspaper about some incident occurring in San Francisco or Iowa, but the circumstances are entirely different when it refers to some one right here at home, friends and neighbors, people you know, whom you can see, and with whom you talk it over. This is the kind of evidence at the back of Doan's Kidney Pills—home statements by home people, and the astonishing local work they have been doing has caused more talk among our citizens than the doings of any other modern wonder. Read the following:

Mr. Richard Day, of 134 East Front street, says: 'I have been troubled at times with symptoms of kidney complaint for the last four years. My chief difficulty was a miserable pain across my back and a sort of lame feeling over my kidneys. Standing for any length of time or walking any distance aggravated it greatly. I have never been sick much in my life and consquently have never taken much medicine, so when I first began having these attacks I paid but little attention to them. They however grew worse instead of better so I had to look about for a remedy. I had read quite frequently in our papers about cures brought about by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills so I got a box at L.W. Randolph's drug store and after taking them I felt greatly relieved. I have recommended them to my friends and those who have used them speak very highly in their praise. I consider that Doan's Kidney Pills are a splendid remedy for complaints like mine."
